Biggest Amphibious Assault Since Inchon

MARINE THOUSANDS HIT BEACH

QUANG NGAI, South Viet Nam, Sunday (AP) — Thousands of U.S. Marines landed Friday south of this central lowlands town in what was described as the biggest amphibious assault since Inchon in the Korean War.

(The announcement of the landing was delayed by military authorities until Sunday for reasons of security.)

Their objective was to seek out and destroy North Vietnamese regular troops and hard-core Viet Cong units operating in Quang Ngai province. The Viet Cong have been in the area, about 325 miles northwest of Saigon, for many years. It is their central lowlands stronghold.

The Marines met no resistance when they hit the beach shortly after 7 a.m. Friday under a hazy sky and intermittent light rain.

The only initial casualty was an enlisted man who stepped on a punji stick.

On Saturday however, the Marines had scattered fire fights with local Viet Cong guerrillas, killing at least one, wounding and capturing another and taking five suspects.

One Marine battalion, between 450 and 500 troops, had a moderate fire fight with an estimated Viet Cong platoon of about 25 men fighting a rear-guard action. Marine casualties were light.

The first battalion ashore Friday was one which had arrived only recently in Viet Nam. All its men faced combat for the first time.

Several thousand Marines came ashore in a score of craft from the U.S. Seventh Fleet. Marine briefing officers said it was the largest amphibious assault since Inchon. Tanks were landed with the troops.

The Marines landed on Blue Beach One.

The beach lies about 25 miles southeast of the city.

It is just east of Route One, the north-south highway which the Viet Cong control in Quang Ngai province. The

Coldest-Cold Mark Broken in 11 States

By United Press International

The month's fourth great storm dumped a foot of snow across Dixie and the Atlantic seaboard.

The Weather Bureau said every state in the continental United States reported temperatures below freezing.

Heavy-snow warnings were up in areas of North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Gale warnings were up from Cape Hatteras, N.C., to Cape May, N.J. Cold wave warnings were issued for areas of Arkansas, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and Florida. The Weather Bureau said blizzard conditions could be expected in the southern Appalachians, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

Chicago had its coldest Jan. 29 since 1873—16 degrees below zero. Huron, S.D., had its coldest day ever, 34 degrees below zero.

Pine Bluff, Ark., had a foot of snow. Tupelo, Miss., had 10 inches. Bristol, Tenn., measured 4 inches of snow in an hour for a total on the ground of 11 inches. Snow fell at the rate of an inch an hour at Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn. Muscle Shoals, Ala., had 4 inches of snow in six hours.

The weather death toll reached 40.

Wisconsin's weather death toll from the three-day subzero cold reached six when the frozen body of a man was found in a Milwaukee alley and another was found outside a Watertown, Wis., home.

Joplin, Mo., and Whitefish Bay and Menominee Falls, Wis., reported widespread power failures when wires snapped due to cold. At Sioux Falls, S.D., a water main broke because of the cold.

At Wichita Falls, Tex., feed was dropped from planes for starving, shivering wild life.

At Bowie, Md., horse racing was halted after eight races because of the snow. At Milwaukee, Wis., county ski tows, skating rinks and toboggan slides were closed due to cold.

The Hunt for Wetbacks

From where the surf of the Pacific Ocean laps a spit of brown sand outstretched like a beckoning finger at Imperial Beach, Calif., to the yawning mouth of the Rio Grande where it spills its muddy waters into the green Gulf of Mexico at Boca Chica, Texas, is a distance of 2,013 miles.

This is the southernmost land border of the United States. Starting in the west with rocky, dry terrain, it runs in a straight line across California, zigs in Arizona, zags in New Mexico and snakes along a course through Texas where it ends in a black bog of marshlands.

The boundary, a barely discernable line between concrete markers, divides more than two nations. It divides two economies. It is a barrier fixing, geographically the 12.50-to-1 ratio of the dollar and the peso.

North of the line is prosperity for the many. South of the line is poverty for the multitude. The poverty south of the line is deprivation and hunger unimaginable to the gringo in the north. This condition is a driving force that brings hordes to the border in hopes of crossing to share the bounty of the northern neighbor.

LBJ Studies Plea by Pope to Enlist U.N. Aid for Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson gave intensive and serious consideration Saturday to the latest suggestion from Pope Paul VI for a possible new approach to peace in Viet Nam.

It was learned that in prolonged discussions between the President and his principal advisers considerable emphasis was placed on the papal proposal that the United Nations mediate the dispute through neutral nations.

Johnson directed Secretary of State Dean Rusk and U.N. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg to pursue the matter.

It appeared that, in the light of Pope Paul's action, Johnson might decide to respond directly to the papal suggestion, through a personal statement or some other means.

These apparently are the reasons why the administration is giving much thought to the papal proposal:

—In December, after the Viet Cong proposed a Christmas truce, the United States was somewhat reluctant to take up the offer because it appeared to be a political and propaganda move. However, when the Pope followed through with a similar proposal, policymakers here felt he had raised the question to a higher moral level and were encouraged to announce their own cease-fire plans without feeling they had given a propaganda advantage to the Communists.

'CANCER DRUG' CASE

Krebiozen Jury Acquits Three

CHICAGO (AP)—A federal court jury that spent nine months hearing evidence of fraud and conspiracy in the promotion of the drug Krebiozen found Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, an internationally known physiologist, and the others innocent Saturday but continued its deliberations of evidence against Dr. Stevan Durovic, the drug's discoverer.

The jury of seven women and five men returned its verdict for the three after 40 hours of actual deliberations that began last Tuesday afternoon.

Ivy, 72, jubilant over the verdict, hailed it as "a great victory for freedom of medical research."

"I will continue my research on cancer," he added. "I shall continue my research on the anti-cancer substance that exists in the human cells and blood system."

* * * *

IVY HAS contended that Krebiozen is that type of substance.

The jurors also returned an innocent verdict for Dr. F. P. Phillips, 53, a Chicago physician, and Marko Durovic, an attorney and brother of Dr. Durovic.

Dr. Phillips laughed when asked his reaction to the verdict, but said he was leaving any statements to his attorney, Maurice J. Walsh. Marko Durovic said he would have no comment because "my brother is still on trial."

AFTER delivering its verdict, the jury returned immediately to continue deliberations on the evidence against Dr. Durovic.

'Impacted' Area Calif. Schools Face Fund Cut

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO
L. P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON—California school districts are facing cutbacks totaling more than $25 million under proposed changes in federal payments for "impacted" areas.

The administration is planning to submit to Congress a change in the formula used by the federal government in providing funds for districts based on the numbers of students whose parents are federally employed.

In defense-heavy California, the proposed changes could put serious crimps in the budgets of many school districts.

Since 1951, the government has granted construction and operation money to school districts based on the percentage of students they have whose parents are employed by some federally connected activity—defense industries and the armed forces in most cases.

* * * *

CURRENTLY, payments are made for all such students in districts when their number reaches 3% of the total enrollment. During the last fiscal year, California schools received $52.5 million under this arrangement.

Now, the administration has proposed changing this to payment only for such students over 6% of enrollment after this ratio has been reached. No funds would be paid for students under 6%.

A spokesman for the Long Beach Unified School District said that this proposal, if approved, would cost the system more than

Freighter Sinking; 17 Aboard

MIAMI (UPI)—The Coast Guard said the freighter Pensacola was sinking in the Florida Straits with 17 persons aboard Saturday night, and a 37-foot sailboat carrying five persons was disabled off Fort Lauderdale.

The Pensacola, a 250-foot Liberian-registered coastal freighter, radioed a "May Day" at 8:20 p.m. saying it was sinking and could not remain afloat for more than three or four hours.

The Pensacola reported its position as about 200 miles due west of Dry Tortugas. The Coast Guard sent an amphibious aircraft carrying three portable bilge pumps to the scene.

The Sea Spray, a 37-foot sailing vessel en route to Florida from the Bahamas, radioed it was disabled in 12-foot seas about 25 miles off Fort Lauderdale.

* * * *

THE SEA SPRAY reported it was carrying five persons and was floundering in the high seas whipped up by winds gusting to 30 knots.

The Coast Guard issued an "all ships" alert for the white-hulled Pensacola and ordered all vessels in the vicinity of the stricken ship to speed to its rescue.

The Pensacola, which reported its survival equipment included two small lifeboats and life jackets, was attempting to steam toward Dry Tortugas.

Strong Winds, Rain Are Due

Pelting rain and strong winds are due to give Long Beach and the rest of Southern California a day-long dose of winter misery, with a half-inch of precipitation expected along the coast and a full inch or more a few miles inland.

Gusts may reach 35 mph in the Long Beach area this morning, but the Weather Bureau predicts diminishing winds and gradual clearing tonight. Snow level in nearby mountains should drop to 4,500 feet before nightfall.

Private Autopsy on Mott Discloses 'No Surprises'

A top American pathologist said Saturday night he found "no surprises" in his postmortem examination of Newcomb Mott, 27, whose alleged suicide on a Soviet prison train still remains locked in a cloud of international mystery.

But Dr. Michael A. Luongo, Suffolk County medical examiner, declined to detail his findings in the 10-day-old death of the young Sheffield textbook salesman. Luongo said in Boston that he made his report to Mott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Mott, and the family physician, Dr. Frank E. Smith Jr., of Lakeville, Conn.

Smith, contacted in Lakeville, said a public statement would not be released until the family had conferred with attorneys. He declined to speculate when this would occur.

Luongo, who had been engaged by the Mott family to conduct the private and unofficial autopsy, told newsmen: "I am sorry I cannot relate the results (of the autopsy) to you, but I spoke to Dr. Smith and Mrs. Mott. I was requested by the family not to make any specific observations until the family had an opportunity to consult with their attorney."

Luongo added, however, when asked if there was anything unusual about the 3½-hour autopsy: "There were no surprises. . . . I assume you mean in the way of injuries."

FRED GROSSFELD

All-Out Search

The father of 19-year-old Fred Grossfeld closed the doors Saturday of his haberdashery on Main Street in Ridgefield, Conn., indefinitely to launch a full-time search for his son.

Israel Grossfeld, who left the final stages of winding up the business to his wife, Mina, said, "If it takes all my life, this is my number-one job—to find the boy, nothing else."

Young Grossfeld, an honor student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been missing 50 days. He vanished from the campus after playing a late evening game of bridge.

Mrs. Grossfeld said she and her husband felt that their son "may be a victim of foul play, or may have been kidnaped by foreign agents. He has a brilliant mind, and this may be the reason why he may have been kidnaped," she said.

Granny's Fish

Emmy Cole, 93-year-old grandmother sailing from Africa to New Zealand on her family's 40-foot trimaran, dropped her knitting long enough Saturday to catch a baby hammerhead shark.

Mrs. Cole and her family were anchored in the harbor at Mahe in the Seychelles Islands of the Indian Ocean after an 1,100-mile voyage from Kenya. She was sitting in the sun knitting when the shark grabbed her bait. She tossed the knitting down, called for help, then boated the fish—her first catch of the voyage.

The trimaran named Galinule is skippered by her son George Cole, 60, a former British navy commander, and crewed by his wife and two grown children. They left Mombasa on the 8,000-mile voyage Jan. 8.

U.N. Has Skeptics, Supporters in Southland

By VINT MADER

"I have found some very strong supporters of the U.N. in Southern California," said Frances E. Willis in an interview at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Franklin Waters, 1485 La Perla Ave., where she addressed the annual meeting of the U.N. Association's Long Beach chapter.

"I have also found a good many skeptics," added the tall, serious scholar who launched her foreign service career 39 years ago.

Although noting that she has listed the Southland as her home throughout that career and for 11 years more, she said "I haven't been home long enough" to estimate the U.N.'s status here because her profession has kept her in posts as distant as Helsinki, Finland, and Long Beach's sister city, Valparaiso, Chile.

"I haven't any Mr. Harris to conduct polls for me," said the onetime professor who became the first woman career-ist in the foreign service to attain ambassadorial level when President Eisenhower named her in 1953 as the first U.S. ambassador to Switzerland, in smiling reference to regular surveying of public opinion at home.

She Talks Seriously

Miss Willis, who earned a Ph.D. degree from Stanford in 1923, includes with her many consulate and embassy postings abroad service as assistant chief of the State Department's division of West European affairs.

She was 1965 delegate to the 20th General Assembly and served in previous U.S. delegations to the U.N.

Commenting on the U.N. post of secretary-general, now held by U Thant of Burma as successor to the widely respected Dag Hammarskjold, she said Thant has quietly "done a very remarkable job" and has "maintained the impartiality and independence of the office."

In her address to the chapter she warned that she was "going to talk seriously" and stated that the U.S., as a nation historically devoted to 'help build' a world of freedom and human dignity, "has also discovered the means to destroy the world."

She posed the question of how long "what has been called a balance of terror" could exist and said: "I think in a democracy the people have got to do something about it."

The meeting elected the following officers for 1966: Rev. Leroy Doty Jr., president; Judge Martin DeVries, first vice president; N. Evelyn Davis, second vice president; Mrs. John Grigsby, recording secretary; Mrs. Ray Burdett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Marvin Tincher, treasurer; Ronald Frank, auditor.

Elected to two-year terms as directors were: Mrs. James Baxter, Patrick J. Bratton, Mrs. Burdett, Mrs. Alexis Jacoubowsky, Mrs. Alexander Kadvany, Myrtle Poultney, Rev. Robert Prentice, M. Robert Rutherford, Mrs. Tincher, Janet Wardall, William White and Alice C. Wright.

Hedy Abused, Says London Newspaper

LONDON, Sunday (AP)—The Conservative Sunday Telegraph today denounced the arrest and police-press treatment of film actress Hedy Lamarr in California in an editorial titled "Pilloried." The editorial said:

"The way in which the Americans have pilloried a well-known and respected film star who is accused of shoplifting clothing and cosmetics valued at thirty pounds ($84) is 200 years out of date. To invite photographers to picture Miss Hedy Lamarr behind bars in a jail is equivalent to the public humiliation of women in a ducking pond.

"Medical research has revealed beyond doubt that shoplifting of this kind by middleaged women is generally nothing more or less than a symptom of emotional disturbance. While the law must take its course, the victim needs sympathy, understanding and above all reasonable privacy."

Two Killed in Traffic Accidents

A 20-year-old Navy man was killed when his motorcycle crashed into the side of a car in Long Beach Saturday and a Norwalk man died of injuries suffered when his wife accidentally ran over him 16 hours earlier with the family car.

Terrence C. Richard, dental technician on the USS Kearsarge, was pronounced dead on arrival at Long Beach Community Hospital at 4:30 p.m. Officer Paul Park said Richard apparently failed to see the car driven by Joseph Kovalski, 50, of 2249 E. 14th St., and crashed into it at 14th Street and Dawson Avenue.

Sheridan Carl Michael, 52, of 13809 Maidstone Ave., died Saturday night in Norwalk Community Hospital of injuries received in the parking lot of Premiere Bowling Alley, 13210 Telegraph Rd., Santa Fe Springs. Deputies said his wife, Pauline Ann, in hospital with shock and reported in fair condition, told them the car lurched forward in gear and ran over her husband when she started it after they left the alley about 1 a.m.

Deputies said investigation is closed and the death listed as accidental.

Long Beach police reported Kovalski was thrown around inside his car by the motorcycle's impact, and admitted to hospital with head and internal injuries.

No serious injuries were reported, but one fireman received minor burns.

Private Autopsy on Mott Discloses 'No Surprises'

A top American pathologist said Saturday night he found "no surprises" in his postmortem examination of Newcomb Mott, 27, whose alleged suicide on a Soviet prison train still remains locked in a cloud of international mystery.

But Dr. Michael A. Luongo, Suffolk County medical examiner, declined to detail his findings in the 10-day-old death of the young Sheffield textbook salesman. Luongo said in Boston that he made his report to Mott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Mott, and the family physician, Dr. Frank E. Smith Jr., of Lakeville, Conn.

Smith, contacted in Lakeville, said a public statement would not be released until the family had conferred with attorneys. He declined to speculate when this would occur.

Luongo, who had been engaged by the Mott family to conduct the private and unofficial autopsy, told newsmen: "I am sorry I cannot relate the results (of the autopsy) to you, but I spoke to Dr. Smith and Mrs. Mott. I was requested by the family not to make any specific observations until the family had an opportunity to consult with their attorney."

Luongo added, however, when asked if there was anything unusual about the 3½-hour autopsy: "There were no surprises. . . . I assume you mean in the way of injuries."

FRED GROSSFELD

All-Out Search

The father of 19-year-old Fred Grossfeld closed the doors Saturday of his haberdashery on Main Street in Ridgefield, Conn., indefinitely to launch a full-time search for his son.

Israel Grossfeld, who left the final stages of winding up the business to his wife, Mina, said, "If it takes all my life, this is my number-one job—to find the boy, nothing else."

Young Grossfeld, an honor student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been missing 30 days. He vanished from the campus after playing a late evening game of bridge.

Mrs. Grossfeld said she and her husband felt that their son "may be a victim of foul play, or may have been kidnaped by foreign agents. He has a brilliant mind, and this may be the reason why he may have been kidnaped," she said.

Granny's Fish

Emmy Cole, 93-year-old grandmother sailing from Africa to New Zealand on her family's 40-foot trimaran, dropped her knitting long enough Saturday to catch a baby hammerhead shark.

Mrs. Cole and her family were anchored in the harbor at Mahe in the Seychelles Islands of the Indian Ocean after an 1,100-mile voyage from Kenya. She was sitting in the sun knitting when the shark grabbed her bait. She tossed the knitting down, called for help, then boated the fish—her first catch of the voyage.

The trimaran named Galinule is skippered by her son George Cole, 60, a former British navy commander, and crewed by his wife and two grown children. They left Mombasa on the 8,000-mile voyage Jan. 8.

Fete for Luci

Luci Baines Johnson and her fiance, airman Patrick J. Nugent, will be given their first party as a newly engaged couple on Feb. 12, with a Valentine's Day motif.

The black-tie dinner dance in Washington's City Tavern Club will be given by one of Luci's closest friends, Helene Lindow and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester William Lindow of Washington.

Broadwaying

Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and her daughter Lynda Bird attended Saturday's matinee performance of the Broadway musical, "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever."

Accompanying them were Alan Jay Lerner, who wrote the book and music for the show and Mrs. Jean Murray Vanderbilt and her 17-year-old daughter Heidi.

Jackie Hailed

Mrs. John F. Kennedy ran into the first crowds of her Roman weekend on a visit Saturday to the fashion house of her friend, Princess Irene Galitzine. Hundreds jammed the sidewalks of the city's Via Veneto to see Mrs. Kennedy.

Getty Moves

Residents of Ladispoli, Italy, a quiet resort town, buzzed Saturday over the arrival of a new neighbor, American oil millionaire J. Paul Getty. Getty, four servants, two secretaries and a gardener have moved into Odescalchi Castle, a mile down the road.

Visit Hospital

Informed sources said Saturday night in Ankara, Turkey, ailing President Cemal Gursel would be flown to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington Monday or Tuesday for treatment.

Prince Lands

Britain's Prince Charles arrived by air today in Sydney, Australia, on his way to school at Timbertop in Victoria. Governor-General Lord Richard Casey met him and flew with him to Canberra.

U.N. Has Skeptics, Supporters in Southland

By VINT MADER

"I have found some very strong supporters of the U.N. in Southern California," said Frances E. Willis in an interview at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Franklin Waters, 1485 La Perla Ave., where she addressed the annual meeting of the U.N. Association's Long Beach chapter.

"I have also found a good many skeptics," added the tall, serious scholar who launched her foreign service career 39 years ago.

Although noting that she has listed the Southland as her home throughout that career and for 11 years more, she said "I haven't been home long enough" to estimate the U.N.'s status here because her profession has kept her in posts as distant as Helsinki, Finland, and Long Beach's sister city, Valparaiso, Chile.

"I haven't any Mr. Harris to conduct polls for me," said the onetime professor who became the first woman careerist in the foreign service to attain ambassadorial level when President Eisenhower named her in 1953 as the first U.S. ambassador to Switzerland, in smiling reference to regular surveying of public opinion at home.

THE HUNT GOES ON

on an empty stomach. These people seek other ways of entering—illegal ways.

Clandestinely, these illegal entrants slip across the border in every imaginable way. And when they do, they come up against the Yankee ingenuity of a small army of men trained to thwart their invasion — the U.S. Border Patrol.

Since 1904, the United States has had men patrolling the southern border to turn back these illegal entrants. The early force — mostly recruited Texas cowboys and small in number — rode horseback along the border searching for line jumpers.

* * * *

THESE line jumpers were called by the Mexicans "espaldas mojadas" — wetbacks — because they generally swam the Rio Grande from Mexico to the United States. The name has worked its way into the English vernacular, but the Border Patrol considers the description derogatory toward the people it deals with daily and the word is banned officially.

The aliens the patrol encounters—for the most part—are docile, stoic and good-humored people even when arrested for line-jumping. Usually they enter the country surreptitiously, either on their own or with the assistance of an alien-smuggler, a man who gets paid to get them across.

About half the aliens entering the country illegally are apprehended within hours after they cross the border. The Border Patrol inspectors are rated among the world's best trackers.

* * * *

THOSE they stalk are mostly of Indian heritage. They pit wit against wit —training versus instinct.

Many of the tracking methods used by border patrolmen to trap the wetback have been learned from the Indians.

The tracking technique is called "sign cutting." The alien "cuts a sign" while entering the United States. Border patrolmen follow this trail until the alien is overtaken.

The patrol watches the 2,013-mile border on a 24-hour basis. This modern, highly mobile force patrols the lonely, desolate outposts on foot, in jeeps, in sedans, in boats, on horseback and in airplanes.

In strips parallel to the border and along roads leading away from the border, the patrolmen begin their task of catching the illegal entrant. The sand and dirt, even rocky terrain, is dragged daily by jeeps pulling old tires, homemade devices rigged with worn street-sweeper brushes or an iron bar to smooth out the ground so the alien will leave his sign behind.

* * * *

THE INDIAN heritage of the alien makes him wise to these tactics. He attempts to destroy his tracks by sly and ingenious means.

One invented a clever method that almost foxed the Border Patrol in New Mexico. Crossing a wide stretch of sandy desert, the alien strapped cow hooves to his feet to disguise his footprints. The border patrolmen ran him down, but for a while they thought they were trailing a two-legged cow.

Others have tried to avoid capture by laying stepping stones of boards, stones, stones, or cardboard over the terrain leading out of Mexico. Some have tied one end of a blanket around their waist and dragged the other over the sand to destroy their tracks.

Others try to disguise their tracks by making twirls like birds taking sand baths. Some have walked part way barefooted, then stepped into a grassy area and put on their shoes as a means of confusing their trackers.

* * * *

ONCE THE tracks are discovered, the Border Patrol begins tracking by land and air. Usually it is only a matter of hours until the alien is in custody.

The patrol has traffic checkpoints on principal highways and byroads leading to the border. Transportation terminals in border areas are checked constantly, freight and passenger trains and railroad yards near the border are searched.

In some border areas, particularly those in rocky terrain where tracking is difficult, the patrol has hidden electronic gear that is tripped by the alien. It sounds silent alarms that are picked up by jeep radios or turns on flashing warning lights that can be seen from great distances.

ONCE THE wetback has been captured, he is placed in a detention camp near the border, then processed and legally deported. He has broken a U.S. law and has a criminal record— an act that could bar him from ever legally immigrating. If he is from the interior of Mexico—and 70% are —he is flown to a point somewhere along the border and then is transported by bus, train or plane to his home in Mexico. The U.S. goes to this expense, on the theory that the long trek back north — sometimes a 10-day walk — will discourage a second attempt.

It works sometimes, but not always. The Mexican government, as anxious to stop the alien influx as the United States, cooperates with the Border Patrol by taking the Mexican national into custody at the border and seeing that he boards the conveyance.

REPEATED immigration violations can result in a prison term in the United States for the alien. Most, however, are put across the border within 24 hours after arrest.

The Border Patrol wetback roundup isn't all cold, hard statistics. There is a human side to the story—one seldom told.

The inspectors are perhaps the best "people-to-people" representatives the United States has with any Latin-American country. The wetback, on the average, has the highest respect for the patrolman because, as one explained while being flown from El Centro to El Paso, Texas, for his return trip home:

"They treat us like human beings, with kindness and understanding." He looked up as Patrolman Ernest (Red) Kirchner paced down the aisle of the DC6 reassuring the "passengers" taking their first flight, and said:

"He's a good man. He doesn't have to do that. We broke his law and we don't deserve his kindness."

* * * *

INSPECTOR F. J. Danforth, crouched in a dugout on a plain stretching out to the border at Tijuana, captured 25 illegal entrants on one night patrol. He had packed an extra-heavy lunch because he knew many he would capture that night would be hungry. He didn't expect 25 for dinner—so he went without.

"How can you eat in front of a man who hasn't eaten for three or four days?" Danforth asked.

Edward Wood, a Border Patrol aviator in the Marfa, Texas, sector, flew his Cessna low over a humble adobe hut clinging to a cliffside south of the border in the Big Bend country. The sound of the airplane's engine was a welcome signal for the children of the home.

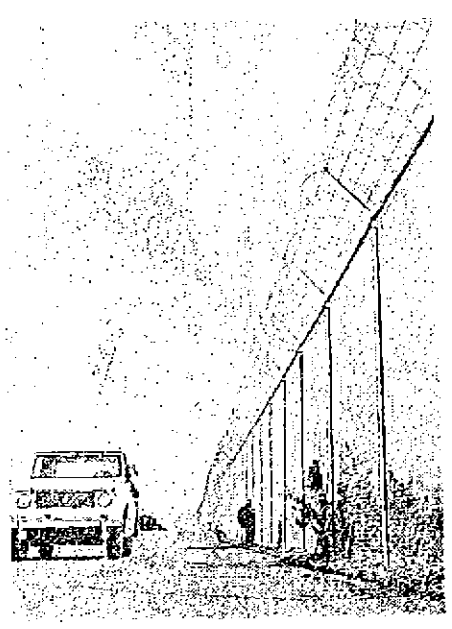
* * * *

WOOD BANKED the aircraft and turned back toward the hut. The children—about ten of them —were waving their arms and leaping off the ground in excitement. Wood made a pass and dropped several bags of candy.

"These children have never seen a store. They never get into a town. We drop them candy and food once in awhile," he said in a dry Missouri accent, as if he were excusing his act of charity.

Many a border patrolman has handed over his last dollar to an alien he caught crossing the border, knowing that the man was broke and hungry and about to be returned to his family empty-handed.

Patrolmen have purchased medicine for sick children. They have carried food and clothing across the border to the squatters crowding the fence lines.



Their job taxes their skill in tracking, their physical endurance in the field, but most of all, it demands a full measure of compassion toward the man they hunt down.

THE U.S. BORDER is patrolled from the air and on land. A plane is used to track illegal entrants moving across terrain autos cannot venture.

BEACH PATROL is walked by Patrolman L. D. Calvert at the Gulf of Mexico. "Wetbacks" sometimes attempt to gain entry to the U.S. by jumping from boats and swimming ashore.

MILES OF FENCED border between the United States and Mexico are patrolled by auto. Patrolman Glenn Pitt is looking for tracks along the road near Tijuana. Aliens have pole-vaulted the fence, patrolmen say.

Tough Communist Mobsters Sinister Masterminds for Ho

After Ho, Mr. Big

Clustered about President Ho Chi Minh, the aging mandarin whose adopted name means "Enlightened One," is a group of men who hold the option of signaling an interest in peace or inviting ordeal by fire which could pose the danger of widened Asian war.

Among North Viet Nam's top leaders are those whom President Johnson deplored as fanatics "pursuing the old cynical strategy of rule or ruin." This implied that it was up to them whether the United States resumed bombing North Viet Nam or whether there was hope of a road to peace.

Ho, who will be 76 in May, seems more and more a figurehead. The frail, aristocratically-born lifetime revolutionist has given the impression he sought to avoid involvement in the Moscow-Peking cold war over world Communist strategy. Now his 10-man politburo seems caught up in a struggle between the pro-Chinese and the pro-Muscovites.

The pro-Chinese appear at the moment to have the upper hand, though the contest probably still is going on.

The principals:

Le Duan, 58, first secretary of the Laodong (Communist) Party. Once wholly Chinese in outlook, he now seems on the fence. Ass the most powerful figure after Ho, Duan might have authority to tip the balance.

Duan became a party member in the early 1930s. He spent 10 years in a French prison for subversion, and after emerging in December, 1946, became top leader of the Viet Minh guerrillas.

For years, without the actual title, Duan was second man to Ho. In 1959 he gained the title of first secretary of the party. An expert on relations with other parties, he accompanied Ho on trips to Peking and Moscow and led his own delegations without Ho on similar journeys. He may become president after Ho moves on. At present he seems a little less pro-Chinese than he sounded in the past.

Truong Chinh, head of the National Assembly. His name means "long march," a pseudonym honoring Mao Tze-tung's revolutionary exploit. He is a contender for the top party position. He seems to be all Chinese in his outlook.

Chinh has been associated with Ho since the late 1920s and helped him found the Indochinese Party.

Pham Van Dong, premier. Dong is one of Ho's earliest associates and long has been a Moscow-type Communist. Now 60 years old, he has been a revolutionary since his early teens, when he was in the Indonesian Communist movement.

Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, architect of the Dien Bien Phu victory over the French in 1954 and now defense minister and commander in chief of the armed forces. Giap also is considered pro-Moscow but has indicated a preference for staying away from the heat of the Moscow-Peking squabble.

Parachutist to Try for World Record

SIOUX FALLS, S. D. (UPI)—New Jersey parachutist Nick Piantanida will climb into a balloon gondola Tuesday, wave goodby to his wife Janice and ascend 23 miles above the snow-covered Northern Plains.

He hopes to swandive from that height to a new world free-fall record.

If skies are clear and winds light, the launch will take place at 7:45 a.m. Tuesday from Sioux Falls. If weather conditions are not right, it will be rescheduled. Piantanida, 33, will be lifted by a helium-filled skin of plastic less than half the thickness of a human hair at about 1,000 feet per second.

On the ground, the balloon will look like a 324-foot tall suspended from a small silver globe at the top. But later, at 122,000 feet and nearly 100 degrees below zero, it will have mushroomed larger than a city block.

BY THIS TIME, planners hope, he will be over Estherville, Iowa. Through his visor, he will be able to see for about 500 miles around, into Canada, Wyoming, Missouri and Wisconsin.

Far below, three chase planes, one with skis, will skim over the farm country.

Piantanida will float at this altitude for about 15 minutes, taking a few pictures and waiting for the Raven Industries crew at Estherville to plot his position and clear the area of commercial aircraft.

At a radio signal from the ground, Piantanida, who has three daughters and $1,200,000 worth of insurance, will jump.

BESIDES SNATCHING the free-fall record from Russia, he hopes to prove that a trained chutist can drop from this height without using a drogue chute for stabilization and to test the effects on the body of transonic speeds.

Death of Coon Dog Costs Georgia $300

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A North Georgia farmer has been awarded $300 by a legislative committee for the killing of his coon dog by an employe of the State Game and Fish Department. The dog owner, Willard York of Sautee, Ga., had asked $1,200.

He said his 4-year-old hunting dog was killed by a state biologist two years ago on a state game reserve. York said his dog was trained to run only raccoons and the biologist had shot the dog because he thought she was chasing deer — which is illegal. The biologist was fined $200.

on an empty stomach. These people seek other ways of entering—illegal ways.

Clandestinely, these illegal entrants slip across the border in every imaginable way. And when they do, they come up against the Yankee ingenuity of a small army of men trained to thwart their invasion — the U.S. Border Patrol.

Since 1904, the United States has had men patrolling the southern border to turn back these illegal entrants. The early force — mostly recruited Texas cowboys and small in number — rode horseback along the border searching for line jumpers.

* * * *

THESE line jumpers were called by the Mexicans "espaldas mojadas" — wetbacks — because they generally swam the Rio Grande from Mexico to the United States. The name has worked its way into the English vernacular, but the Border Patrol considers the description derogatory toward the people it deals with daily and the word is banned officially.

The aliens the patrol encounters—for the most part—are docile, stoic and good-humored people even when arrested for line-jumping. Usually they enter the country surreptitiously, either on their own or with the assistance of an alien-smuggler, a man who gets paid to get them across.

About half the aliens entering the country illegally are apprehended within hours after they cross the border. The Border Patrol inspectors are rated among the world's best trackers.

* * * *

THOSE they stalk are mostly of Indian heritage. They pit wit against wit —training versus instinct.

Many of the tracking methods used by border patrolmen to trap the wetback have been learned from the Indians.

The tracking technique is called "sign cutting." The alien "cuts a sign" while entering the United States. Border patrolmen follow this trail until the alien is overtaken.

The patrol watches the 2,013-mile border on a 24-hour basis. This modern, highly mobile force patrols the lonely, desolate outposts on foot, in jeeps, in sedans, in boats, on horseback and in airplanes.

In strips parallel to the border and along roads leading away from the border, the patrolmen begin their task of catching the illegal entrant. The sand and dirt, even rocky terrain, is dragged daily by jeeps pulling old tires, homemade devices rigged with worn street-sweeper brushes or an iron bar to smooth out the ground so the alien will leave his sign behind.

* * * *

THE INDIAN heritage of the alien makes him wise to these tactics. He attempts to destroy his tracks by sly and ingenious means.

One invented a clever method that almost foxed the Border Patrol in New Mexico. Crossing a wide stretch of sandy desert, the alien strapped cow hooves to his feet to disguise his footprints. The border patrolmen ran him down, but for a while they thought they were trailing a two-legged cow.

Others have tried to avoid capture by laying stepping stones of boards, stones, stones, or cardboard over the terrain leading out of Mexico. Some have tied one end of a blanket around their waist and dragged the other over the sand to destroy their tracks.

Others try to disguise their tracks by making twirls like birds taking sand baths. Some have walked part way barefooted, then stepped into a grassy area and put on their shoes as a means of confusing their trackers.

* * * *

ONCE THE tracks are discovered, the Border Patrol begins tracking by land and air. Usually it is only a matter of hours until the alien is in custody.

The patrol has traffic checkpoints on principal highways and byroads leading to the border. Transportation terminals in border areas are checked constantly, freight and passenger trains and railroad yards near the border are searched.

'Cancer Drug' Jury Acquits 3, Deliberates on 'Discoverer'

They were to be taken to dinner and then to a downtown hotel to spend the night. They were to resume deliberations at 9:30 a.m. today.

Assistant U.S. Atty. William J. Hurley, who directed the prosecution, also declined any comment saying: "The jury is still deliberating."

Ivy said he wanted to express his thanks "to the thousands of people who wished me well."

Then in a new plea for what he described as a thorough test of Krebizen, he said:

* * * *

"THIS controversy cannot be settled by the results of this verdict—it must be settled by the scientific method. What we must have is a cooperative clinical test by an arbitration-type committee.

"The basic issue here, the thing for which I've been fighting for 14 years, is that when an individual's work opens up a new substance, that substance should be investigated and not condemned without clinical testing. Krebiozen should have been tested back in 1951."

Awaits Verdict

Dr. Ivy is former vice president of the University of Illinois and dean of its medical school. He currently is director of medical research at Roosevelt University in Chicago.

The jurors made their report to Judge Julius J. Hoffman in U.S. District Court.

* * * *

THE VERDICTS were returned by a jury of seven housewives, two maintenance men, a machinist, a printer and a janitor.

The words they heard in the testimony filled more than 20,000 pages of official transcripts, a mass of documentation which towered more than seven feet high when piled in one stack.

The recorded testimony was given by 178 witnesses—121 for the government and 57 for the defense. The trial was the longest in Chicago's U.S. District Court history.

Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy, the government said, had used his internationalist reputation as physiologist, medical researcher, author and teacher to support a monumental fraud—the theory that Krebiozen could help control the growth of human cancer.

ROWDY ACTIVITIES BURDEN TAXPAYERS

Youth Gangs Cost County Millions

By DON BRACKENBURY
I. P-T Los Angeles Bureau

There are 300 street gangs in Los Angeles County and about 150 of them are "violent or potentially violent," according to a Probation Department report.

Although the gangs might not involve more than a small percentage of the overall population, they cost the taxpayers millions of dollars in correctional and judicial activities.

* * * *

SUCH GANGS have existed in Los Angeles County for more than 50 years, and the Probation Department admits it cannot contemplate a time when they will cease to exist.

Gang members themselves and adult workers in the county's Group Guidance Program agree that girls stir up and encourage much of the violent gang activities.

These points are some of the highlights in a 128-page report, "The Juvenile Gang—its Structure, Function and Treatment," prepared by the Probation Department after extensive interviews with 12 gang leaders and on youth who "had most of the characteristics" of gang members, but had not joined any group.

* * * *

BASICALLY, the county's Group Guidance Program assigns a senior deputy probation officer to a specific "hard-core" youth gang and tries to steer the gang members away from violence and into endeavors which are acceptable to the community.

The report pointed out that, in one gang studied, all the members had serious juvenile and/or adult police records.

"Despite the fact that this group's members were only 18 to 23, they had already cost the community's correctional and judicial agencies over $200,000," the report said.

* * * *

THIS COST included only that of arrests, court appearances and expense of incarceration and supervision in the community. It did not include theft or destruction of property.

"Juvenile gangs are a special problem because violent groups tend to attract the more seriously deviant boys," the report stated.

Interviews with the gang members and prior studies by the Probation Department indicated that many youths merely "drifted into" gangs for social reasons or "defense" purposes.

The report said, however, that "the hostility of these youths is such that it tends to inundate almost any attempt they make to 'just have fun.'"

* * * *

DRINKING of alcoholic beverages almost invariably led to violence among the gangs, it said.

Typical of such action is party-crashing, the report said. One gang member acknowledged that the purpose of crashing a party often was to seek a fight.

* * * *

ALL THE gang leaders interviewed said "defense" was one of the main purposes of the gang, but some admitted that joining a gang might bring an individual more conflict. One youth commented:

"It's for defense and revenge purposes. Like a bunch of boys jump on ya, you can't do nothin' about it. Being in a gang you can. But in some ways you git jumped a little bit more, like if you're in a gang than if you're not."

Another gang member said:

"As far as the difference between a guy in a gang and one who isn't in no gang, the one who doesn't is square. He don't like gangs. He want to try to be, to walk the street all proud and everything; think ain't nobody gonna mess with him, but I got news for him. It's all planned for him, too."

* * * *

GIRL-AFFILIATED groups are a relatively recent phenomenon, the report said. Sometimes such groups are a formal and recognized part of the gang; other times, the association is informal.

Most of the gang members interviewed agreed that the girls go out of their way to set one group against another, or one individual against another.

* * * *

"THERE WAS a lot of them fanatics, man," said one interviewee. "You know, just get a thrill out of seein' somebody get beat up, and whoever come out strong, they try to make it with him you know."

"However amorphous the quality of the girls' influence," the report said, "there is little doubt of its existence and the fact that it lies behind much of the violent gang activities."

One surprising paradox voiced by the interviewees was that although they see schools and school officials as persecuting them and suspending or transferring them on the slightest provocation, they also react just as any middle-class youth might on the importance of school to their future.

* * * *

"OBVIOUSLY, there was a wide disparity between their behavior and their attitudes," the report commented.

Dr. Stuart Adams, a research director for the Probation Department, said that street gangs which have been aided by the Group Guidance officers get into less trouble than gangs not helped.

* * * *

THE REPORT said there is "strong evidence" that the Group Guidance Program is effective in reducing delinquency, but it admitted that, "like most other programs," it is not successful with every boy."

The report emphasized, however, that there is "little room for doubt" that the gang members, or potential member, should receive some type of treatment.

"One of the main objectives of the Group Guidance Program is to integrate the gang boy into the dominant society, not as a member of a group, but as an individual," the report said.

* * * *

AS GANG members become interested and involved in school or community affairs, it pointed out, they begin missing gang meetings. Sometimes the members themselves will decide the gang no longer is needed.

Unfortunately, the report said, limitations on the program give it a sort of "fireman" aspect, where a worker will be transferred from one gang which is making progress to another where a serious eruption of violence has occurred.

The report called for "future research" to lead to "additional and more efficient methods of dealing with the 'street-corner group.'"

DEFENDANTS IN KREBIOZEN CASE SHOW JOY AT ACQUITTAL

'Cancer Drug' Jury Acquits 3, Deliberates on 'Discoverer'

They were to be taken to dinner and then to a downtown hotel to spend the night. They were to resume deliberations at 9:30 a.m. today.

—Assistant U.S. Atty. William J. Hurley, who directed the prosecution, also declined any comment saying: "The jury is still deliberating."

Ivy said he wanted to express his thanks "to the thousands of people who wished me well."

Then in a new plea for what he described as a thorough test of Krebiozen, he said:

* * * *

"THIS controversy cannot be settled by the results of this verdict—it must be settled by the scientific method. What we must have is a cooperative clinical test by an arbitration-type committee.

"The basic issue here, the thing for which I've been fighting for 14 years, is that when an individual's work opens up a new substance, that substance should be investigated and not condemned without clinical testing. Krebiozen should have been tested back in 1951."

Awaits Verdict

Dr. Ivy is former vice president of the University of Illinois and dean of its medical school. He currently is director of medical research at Roosevelt University in Chicago.

The jurors made their report to Judge Julius J. Hoffman in U.S. District Court.

* * * *

THE VERDICTS were returned by a jury of seven housewives, two maintenance men, a machinist, a printer and a janitor.

The words they heard in the testimony filled more than 20,000 pages of official transcripts, a mass of documentation which towered more than seven feet high when piled in one stack.

The recorded testimony was given by 178 witnesses—121 for the government and 57 for the defense. The trial was the longest in Chicago's U.S. District Court history.

Dr. Andrew Conway Ivy, the government said, had used his internationalist reputation as physiologist, medical researcher, author and teacher to support a monumental fraud—the theory that Krebiozen could help control the growth of human cancer.

ROWDY ACTIVITIES BURDEN TAXPAYERS

Youth Gangs Cost County Millions

By DON BRACKENBURY
I.-P-T Los Angeles Bureau

There are 300 street gangs in Los Angeles County and about 150 of them are "violent or potentially violent," according to a Probation Department report.

Although the gangs might not involve more than a small percentage of the overall population, they cost the taxpayers millions of dollars in correctional and judicial activities.

* * * *

SUCH GANGS have existed in Los Angeles County for more than 50 years, and the Probation Department admits it cannot contemplate a time when they will cease to exist.

Gang members themselves and adult workers in the county's Group Guidance Program agree that girls stir up and encourage much of the violent gang activities.

These points are some of the highlights in a 128-page report, "The Juvenile Gang—its Structure, Function and Treatment," prepared by the Probation Department after extensive interviews with 12 gang leaders and on youth who "had most of the characteristics" of gang members, but had not joined any group.

* * * *

BASICALLY, the county's Group Guidance Program assigns a senior deputy probation officer to a specific "hard-core" youth gang and tries to steer the gang members away from violence and into endeavors which are acceptable to the community.

The report pointed out that, in one gang studied, all the members had serious juvenile and/or adult police records.

"Despite the fact that this group's members were only 18 to 23, they had already cost the community's correctional and judicial agencies over $200,000," the report said.

* * * *

THIS COST included only that of arrests, court appearances and expense of incarceration and supervision in the community. It did not include theft or destruction of property.

"Juvenile gangs are a special problem because violent groups tend to attract the more seriously deviant boys," the report stated.

Interviews with the gang members and prior studies by the Probation Department indicated that many youths merely "drifted into" gangs for social reasons or "defense" purposes.

The report said, however, that "the hostility of these youths is such that it tends to inundate almost any attempt they make to 'just have fun.'"

* * * *

DRINKING of alcoholic beverages almost invariably led to violence among the gangs, it said.

Typical of such action is party-crashing, the report said. One gang member acknowledged that the purpose of crashing a party often was to seek a fight.

* * * *

ALL THE gang leaders interviewed said "defense" was one of the main purposes of the gang, but some admitted that joining a gang might bring an individual more conflict. One youth commented:

"It's for defense and revenge purposes. Like a bunch of boys jump on ya, you can't do nothin' about it. Being in a gang you can. But in some ways you git jumped a little bit more, like if you're in a gang than if you're not."

Another gang member said:

"As far as the difference between a guy in a gang and one who isn't in no gang, the one who doesn't is square. He don't like gangs. He want to try to be, to walk the street all proud and everything; think ain't nobody gonna mess with him, but I got news for him. It's all planned for him, too."

* * * *

GIRL-AFFILIATED groups are a relatively recent phenomenon, the report said. Sometimes such groups are a formal and recognized part of the gang; other times, the association is informal.

Most of the gang members interviewed agreed that the girls go out of their way to set one group against another, or one individual against another.

* * * *

"THERE WAS a lot of them fanatics, man," said one interviewee. "You know, just get a thrill out of seein' somebody get beat up, and whoever come out strong, they try to make it with him you know."

"However amorphous the quality of the girls' influence," the report said, "there is little doubt of its existence and the fact that it lies behind much of the violent gang activities."

One surprising paradox voiced by the interviewees was that although they see schools and school officials as persecuting them and suspending or transferring them on the slightest provocation, they also react just as any middle-class youth might on the importance of school to their future.

* * * *

"OBVIOUSLY, there was a wide disparity between their behavior and their attitudes," the report commented.

Dr. Stuart Adams, a research director for the Probation Department, said that street gangs which have been aided by the Group Guidance officers get into less trouble than gangs not helped.

* * * *

THE REPORT said there is "strong evidence" that the Group Guidance Program is effective in reducing delinquency, but it admitted that, "like most other programs, it is not successful with every boy."

The report emphasized, however, that there is "little room for doubt" that the gang members, or potential member, should receive some type of treatment.

"One of the main objectives of the Group Guidance Program is to integrate the gang boy into the dominant society, not as a member of a group, but as an individual," the report said.

* * * *

AS GANG members become interested and involved in school or community affairs, it pointed out, they begin missing gang meetings. Sometimes the members themselves will decide the gang no longer is needed.

Unfortunately, the report said, limitations on the program give it a sort of "fireman" aspect, where a worker will be transferred from one gang which is making progress to another where a serious eruption of violence has occurred.

The report called for "future research" to lead to "additional and more efficient methods of dealing with the street-corner group."

Fete Thursday to Celebrate 25th Birthday of USO

"There will be 650 servicemen and Junior Volunteers at the USO's Los Angeles Area 25th birthday celebration Thursday night in the Hollywood Palladium.

Rear Adm. Carlton B. Jones, commander, U. S. Naval Base, Los Angeles, is chairman for armed forces participation. Leslie N. Shaw, Los Angeles postmaster, heads the dinner-dance committee.

Johnny Grant will be entertainment emcee.

"This date marks the USO's 25th birthday and celebrations are scheduled at USO clubs throughout the world," Adm. Jones said.

"Just 25 years ago hundreds of USO clubs sprang up and volunteers, young and old, streamed in to give our GIs a boost in morale.

"This celebration gives us an opportunity as a community to salute USO for what it has done, is doing now and will be called upon to do in the future for the welfare of our men and women in service," the admiral added.

FOR 15 YEARS the USO has been active in the Harbor area and holds a weekly Thursday night dance in the San Pedro YMCA. The majority of servicemen attending come from Long Beach-based ships.

Capt. Edward F. Leonard, Adm. Jones' chief-of-staff, said these area commands will be participating Thursday night:

Tickets are available at Area Headquarters, 111 W. Fifth St., Los Angeles.

Fete Thursday to Celebrate 25th Birthday of USO

There will be 650 servicemen and Junior Volunteers at the USO's Los Angeles Area 25th birthday celebration Thursday night in the Hollywood Palladium.

Rear Adm. Carlton B. Jones, commander, U. S. Naval Base, Los Angeles, is chairman for armed forces participation. Leslie N. Shaw, Los Angeles postmaster, heads the dinner-dance committee.

Johnny Grant will be entertainment emcee.

"This date marks the USO's 25th birthday and celebrations are scheduled at USO clubs throughout the world," Adm. Jones said.

"Just 25 years ago hundreds of USO clubs sprang up and volunteers, young and old, streamed in to give our GIs a boost in morale.

"This celebration gives us an opportunity as a community to salute USO for what it has done, is doing now and will be called upon to do in the future for the welfare of our men and women in service," the admiral added.

* * * *

FOR 15 YEARS the USO has been active in the Harbor area and holds a weekly Thursday night dance in the San Pedro YMCA. The majority of servicemen attending come from Long Beach-based ships.

Capt. Edward F. Leonard, Adm. Jones' chief-of-staff, said these area commands will be participating Thursday night:

Tickets are available at Area Headquarters, 111 W. Fifth St., Los Angeles.

LEADERS PONDER RESUMING AIR ATTACKS ON NORTH VIET NAM

President Studying Papal Plea

resisted various suggestions to give the United Nations a larger peace-seeking role in Viet Nam, apparently on grounds similar to those felt by American officials last month—that such suggestions were politically motivated. Thus there seems to be some hope now within the administration that the Pope, by urging new peace efforts through the United Nations, has raised that idea to a higher moral level that might, at some point in the future, meet with a favorable response from the Communists.

It was said that the Pope's proposal would not affect Johnson's decision on renewal of bombing of North Viet Nam—that whether to bomb now is a tactical question to be decided largely on military grounds whereas the papal initiative deals with longer-range matters and could be pursued regardless of Johnson's decision on air strikes.

Administration officials are pleased at the Pope's praise of Johnson's peace campaign as a historical effort, reasonably and honorably intended.

Johnson weighed the Vatican's suggestion against a background of an unexplained reduction in guerrilla assaults in South Viet Nam, Senate criticism of his course, and senatorial requests that he stay the resumption of bombing.

Morse Wants Big Cutback on LBJ's War Authority

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., urged the Senate Saturday to rescind the August 1964 resolution which President Johnson is citing as his congressional mandate to fight the Vietnamese war.

If Morse's suggestion gains headway, it could touch off a full-fledged Viet Nam debate in the Senate, many of whose members have become increasingly anxious about the course the war appears to be taking.

This is what the Oregon Democrat, a bitter critic of Johnson's Vietnamese policy, had in mind.

"We owe it to the President to decide whether we want to support that resolution now," he said in a floor speech.

* * * *

A SIMILAR call was made by Rep. Melvin Laird, R-Wis., one of the GOP leaders in the House. He proposed a new congressional resolution on Viet Nam as a way to stimulate full-scale debate on the war.

Morse actually introduced two resolutions. One, requiring action by the Senate and House, states that Congress "hereby terminates the provisions of the resolution commonly referred to as the Southeast Asia Resolution." The other, a Senate resolution, would authorize the Foreign Relations Committee to conduct a "full and complete investigation of all aspects of U.S. policies in Viet Nam" including public hearings as deemed advisable.

The August 1964 resolution was passed in the aftermath of the Communist PT boat attack on American destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin. It supported the President's use of "all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States to prevent further aggression."

Approval was 416 to 0 in the House and 88 to 2 in the Senate, with Morse and Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, opposing.

Johnson cited the resolution Friday in reply to a letter from 15 liberal Senate Democrats who had urged an extension of the pause in the bombing of North Viet Nam. He said he was "guided" in his Vietnamese policy by the 1964 resolution.

Morse, in asking that the resolution be rescinded, said it had not been the intention of Congress to say that "the President could do anything he wanted to, anywhere in Asia, without a declaration of war."

The senators to whom Johnson's letter was addressed met late Friday to discuss it but decided to make no public statement in reply at this time. They also had informal discussions Saturday.

Marines Go Ashore in Massive Force

Marines called the operation Double Eagle.

The Marines did not soften up the beach with air or artillery support. Reconnaissance reports showed there was evidence of neither trenches nor foxholes.

On Thursday, a company of Marines had occupied a strategic hill six miles south of Friday's landing place and had joined a Vietnamese company in throwing out a protective screen about a half mile south.

The area of Friday's landing is about five miles southeast of Thach Tru, an outpost which a Viet Cong force, believed to be part of the regular North Vietnamese 18th Regiment, attacked last November.

Government troops beat off that attack and killed 200 North Vietnamese troops.

The Viet Cong have been regularly hitting Vietnamese outposts and district headquarters south of Quang Ngai City, and have met with little opposition.

The attacks were the heaviest during the monsoon season, when heavy rains and low cloud ceiling hampered American air support.

The outposts and towns usually are protected by poorly armed and poorly trained military who usually withdraw when attacked by the Viet Cong in strength.

Meanwhile, in another operation, U.S. 1st Cavalry troops, supported by rocket-firing aircraft, overran an estimated two Communist companies and began tightening a noose on them today in an offensive against a Red force apparently under orders to fight to the last man.

The cavalry, moving slowly but steadily under a hail of machine gun fire and mortar barrages along Highway One, 300 miles northeast of Saigon, killed an estimated 325 Viet Cong and regular North Vietnamese troops since the heavy fighting erupted two days ago.

A Long Beach-based ship had a key role in the Marines' initial attack via air in the landing Friday at Quang Ngai.

Fund Cuts Seen for Schools

$750,000 a year. The dis- under 6%.

A spokesman for the Long Beach Unified School trict currently receives $1.2 million in impacted area appropriations.

The 1967 federal fiscal year budget calls for slashing impacted area funds by nearly half—from $410 million for the current period to $208 million in 1967.

* * * *

THE program was started to help school districts meet the extra cost of educating children brought to their area as the result of federal activity and whose parents work in facilities which yield no tax revenues.

The rationale in slashing the program is that school districts can afford to absorb up to 6% "impact" pupils and that the money now going into the program would be better spent in helping educationally deprived children.

However, districts now receiving the impact grants would not, in many cases, receive amounts equivalent to what that they are getting now.

Money from this program assigned for direct allotment to school districts would increase by less than half during the next fiscal year. Further, it would be alloted only for "extra help" outside the regular curriculum and would not go into a district's regular operating budget.

* * * *

THERE had been consideration of increasing this program to raise the eligibility rules to cover children from families with less than $3,000 annual income. The income limit now is $2,000 a year. But this is expected to be deferred for at least a year because of the Viet Nam conflict's pressures on the budget.

An official of the Office of Education conceded that the proposed cutbacks in the "impacted" program faces formidable opposition when it reaches Capitol Hill and its passage may well depend upon the weight which President Johnson may choose to throw behind it.

During the past four years, attempts to modify the program downward have met defeat and Congress in 1965 even liberalized it to lower the eligibility for metropolitan districts such as Los Angeles from 6% to 3% of enrollment.

$2-MILLION SCHOOL PROGRAM

7,300 Pupils Get Special Help Beginning This Week

Monday will mark a milestone for the Long Beach public schools.

With the start of the new semester, 7,300 students from low-income areas will receive special instruction in a federally financed $2-million program which runs through Aug. 30.

Highlights of the "Operation Catch-up" plan:

—Pretested first and second graders will be taken out of their home room for nearly an hour a day to learn to read, speak, write and listen.

—Students at four junior highs, also pretested, will take a special "communication skills" class instead of their more-advanced English class each day.

—Students at two high schools, Poly and Jordan, can spend up to half their instruction time in three special classes which are designed to their needs.

—The school district will add 122 new teachers and counselors, substantially reducing class size in special study areas, such as reading.

—The public schools will provide five special teachers to handle communication skills programs at five private schools.

The private schools are St. Anthony Girls' High School, St. Lucy's, St. Athanasius, Holy Innocents and St. Anthony Elementary.

Six public grade schools with especially high pupil mobility will have "reception" classrooms where newcomers will spend a week or more getting used to the school.

In grades three through six at a half-dozen of the elementary schools, the licensed teaching staff will be increased by 50% to provide additional specialized instruction to small groups of pupils.

At 10 of the grade schools, the kindergarten teaching staff will be beefed up by one-third.

New classes at the two high schools will cover communication skills, social studies and health science.

The Long Beach plan, developed under the provisions of the Elementary and Secondary School Act of 1965, was approved several weeks ago and has served as a model for many of the programs in the large school districts of the state.

The grade school communications skills classes will be moved into specially constructed bungalows when they are completed in late spring. The district also plans to start a preschool instruction program at the grade schools when a second set of bungalows is completed at about the same time.

There are many other aspects of the program, including physical and dental examinations for first, third and fifth graders.

* * * *

THE NEW teachers already have started an extensive training program to acquaint them with the educational needs of the so-called educationally deprived.

"Enrichment" summer school classes are planned for the grade school pupils.

Special counselors, nurses, psychologists and speech teachers have been hired to improve opportunities for the students to learn.

Library facilities, including tutors, will be provided in the late afternoon and on Saturday morning at the junior high schools. Libraries at the two high schools also will remain open Saturday mornings.

Eight assistant supervisors of instruction have been appointed to give leadership to the plan. The entire program is under direction of Dr. Robert N. Hart.

Body of British Child 11th in Murder Series

MARKHAM, England (AP)—The battered body of a postman's 12-year-old daughter was found Saturday on the route where she was last seen delivering newspapers.

The pretty, blonde girl was the 11th child found slain in Britain during the past six months.

The latest victim, Yvonne Radford, was one of a family of five children. Her head had been battered, possibly with a large stone, police said.

She delivered newspapers in this Monmouthshire mining village Friday afternoon, but there was one house on her route that did not get its paper—the last one.

Local Leader to EUB Men's Planning Meet

BROWN

This is the first of four such meetings this year, explains Brown, who was elected last fall as secretary of the board of managers of the national group. He is active in a leading capacity in all aspects of the local church's work, including sponsorship of the highly successful "Jet Cadets," junior youth group.

Among subjects on the agenda are proposed revisions to the church discipline due to a proposed merger with the Methodist Church.

Will Observe

For the first time, official Roman Catholic observers, representing the Archdiocese of Los Angeles and the Diocese of San Diego, will attend the 71st annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Los Angeles, Feb. 8-10, as observers.

JACKANAPES

'One-sies, Two-sies' Wednesday

The world will have to wait until Wednesday for the great Ivy League jacks championship match between Linda McVeigh of Anaheim and John Rothchild.

The contest originally was scheduled for last Friday.

Miss McVeigh, newly named managing editor of the Harvard Crimson, was challenged to a game of jacks by Rothchild, managing editor of the Yale Daily News. Rothchild said he wanted to prove a point—the decline of feminity in modern women.

Miss McVeigh, first woman chosen to edit the Harvard student newspaper, accepted the challenge and invited Rothchild to a pre-game, home-cooked meal.

LEADERS PONDER RESUMING AIR ATTACKS ON NORTH VIET NAM

reviewed various suggestions to give the United Nations a bigger peace-seeking role in Viet Nam, apparently on grounds similar to those felt by American officials last month—that such suggestions were politically motivated. Thus there seems to be some hope now within the administration that the Pope, by urging new peace efforts through the United Nations, has raised that idea to a higher moral level that might, at some point in the future, meet with a favorable response from the Communists.

It was said that the Pope's proposal would not affect Johnson's decision on renewal of bombing of North Viet Nam—that whether to bomb now is a tactical question to be decided largely on military grounds whereas the papal initiative deals with longer-range matters and could be pursued regardless of Johnson's decision on air strikes.

Administration officials are pleased at the Pope's praise of Johnson's peace campaign as a historical effort, reasonably and honorably intended.

Johnson weighed the Vatican's suggestion against a background of an unexplained reduction in guerrilla assaults in South Viet Nam, Senate criticism of his course, and senatorial requests that he stay the resumption of bombing.

Morse Wants Big Cutback on LBJ's War Authority

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., urged the Senate Saturday to rescind the August 1964 resolution which President Johnson is citing as his congressional mandate to fight the Vietnamese war.

If Morse's suggestion gains headway, it could touch off a full-fledged Viet Nam debate in the Senate, many of whose members have become increasingly anxious about the course the war appears to be taking.

This is what the Oregon Democrat, a bitter critic of Johnson's Vietnamese policy, had in mind.

"We owe it to the President to decide whether we want to support that resolution now," he said in a floor speech.

* * * *

A SIMILAR call was made by Rep. Melvin Laird, R-Wis., one of the GOP leaders in the House. He proposed a new congressional resolution on Viet Nam as a way to stimulate full-scale debate on the war.

Morse actually introduced two resolutions. One, requiring action by the Senate and House, states that Congress "hereby terminates the provisions of the resolution commonly referred to as the Southeast Asia Resolution." The other, a Senate resolution, would authorize the Foreign Relations Committee to conduct a "full and complete investigation of all aspects of U.S. policies in Viet Nam" including public hearings as deemed advisable.

The August 1964 resolution was passed in the aftermath of the Communist PT boat attack on American destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin. It supported the President's use of "all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States to prevent further aggression."

Approval was 416 to 0 in the House and 88 to 2 in the Senate, with Morse and Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, opposing.

Johnson cited the resolution Friday in reply to a letter from 15 liberal Senate Democrats who had urged an extension of the pause in the bombing of North Viet Nam. He said he was "guided" in his Vietnamese policy by the 1964 resolution.

Morse, in asking that the resolution be rescinded, said it had not been the intention of Congress to say that "the President could do anything he wanted to, anywhere in Asia, without a declaration of war."

The senators to whom Johnson's letter was addressed met late Friday to discuss it but decided to make no public statement in reply at this time. They also had informal discussions Saturday.

Marines Go Ashore in Massive Force

Marines called the operation Double Eagle.

The Marines did not soften up the beach with air or artillery support. Reconnaissance reports showed there was evidence of neither trenches nor foxholes.

On Thursday, a company of Marines had occupied a strategic hill six miles south of Friday's landing place and had joined a Vietnamese company in throwing out a protective screen about a half mile south.

The area of Friday's landing is about five miles southeast of Thach Tru, an outpost which a Viet Cong force, believed to be part of the regular North Vietnamese 18th Regiment, attacked last November.

Government troops beat off that attack and killed 200 North Vietnamese troops.

The Viet Cong have been regularly hitting Vietnamese outposts and district headquarters south of Quang Ngai City, and have met with little opposition.

The attacks were the heaviest during the monsoon season, when heavy rains and low cloud ceiling hampered American air support.

The outposts and towns usually are protected by poorly armed and poorly trained military who usually withdraw when attacked by the Viet Cong in strength.

Meanwhile, in another operation, U.S. 1st Cavalry troops, supported by rocket-firing aircraft, overran an estimated two Communist companies and began tightening a noose on them today in an offensive against a Red force apparently under orders to fight to the last man.

The cavalry, moving slowly but steadily under a hail of machine gun fire and mortar barrages along Highway One, 300 miles northeast of Saigon, killed an estimated 325 Viet Cong and regular North Vietnamese troops since the heavy fighting erupted two days ago.

A Long Beach-based ship had a key role in the Marines' initial attack via air in the landing Friday at Quang Ngai.

$750,000 a year. The district is under 6%.

A spokesman for the Long Beach Unified School District currently receives $1.2 million in impacted area appropriations.

The 1967 federal fiscal year budget calls for slashing impacted area funds by nearly half—from $410 million for the current period to $208 million in 1967.

* * * *

THE program was started to help school districts meet the extra cost of educating children brought to their area as the result of federal activity and whose parents work in facilities which yield no tax revenues.

The rationale in slashing the program is that school districts can afford to absorb up to 6% "impact" pupils and that the money now going into the program would be better spent in helping educationally deprived children.

However, districts now receiving the impact grants would not, in many cases, receive amounts equivalent to what that they are getting now.

Money from this program assigned for direct allotment to school districts would increase by less than half during the next fiscal year. Further, it would be alloted only for "extra help" outside the regular curriculum and would not go into a district's regular operating budget.

* * * *

THERE had been consideration of increasing this program to raise the eligibility rules to cover children from families with less than $3,000 annual income. The income limit now is $2,000 a year. But this is expected to be deferred for at least a year because of the Viet Nam conflict's pressures on the budget.

An official of the Office of Education conceded that the proposed cutbacks in the "impacted" program faces formidable opposition when it reaches Capitol Hill and its passage may well depend upon the weight which President Johnson may choose to throw behind it.

During the past four years, attempts to modify the program downward have met defeat and Congress in 1965 even liberalized it to lower the eligibility for metropolitan districts such as Los Angeles from 6% to 3% of enrollment.

$2-MILLION SCHOOL PROGRAM

7,300 Pupils Get Special Help Beginning This Week

Monday will mark a milestone for the Long Beach public schools.

With the start of the new semester, 7,300 students from low-income areas will receive special instruction in a federally financed $2-million program which runs through Aug. 30.

Highlights of the "Operation Catch-up" plan:

—Pretested first and second graders will be taken out of their home room for nearly an hour a day to learn to read, speak, write and listen.

—Students at four junior highs, also pretested, will take a special "communication skills" class instead of their more-advanced English class each day.

—Students at two high schools, Poly and Jordan, can spend up to half their instruction time in three special classes which are designed to their needs.

—The school district will add 122 new teachers and counselors, substantially reducing class size in special study areas, such as reading.

—The public schools will provide five special teachers to handle communication skills programs at five private schools.

The private schools are St. Anthony Girls' High School, St. Lucy's, St. Athanasius, Holy Innocents and St. Anthony Elementary.

Six public grade schools with especially high pupil mobility will have "reception" classrooms where newcomers will spend a week or more getting used to the school.

In grades three through six at a half-dozen of the elementary schools, the licensed teaching staff will be increased by 50% to provide additional specialized instruction to small groups of pupils.

At 10 of the grade schools, the kindergarten teaching staff will be beefed up by one-third.

New classes at the two high schools will cover communication skills, social studies and health science.

The Long Beach plan, developed under the provisions of the Elementary and Secondary School Act of 1965, was approved several weeks ago and has served as a model for many of the programs in the large school districts of the state.

The grade school communications skills classes will be moved into specially constructed bungalows when they are completed in late spring. The district also plans to start a preschool instruction program at the grade schools when a second set of bungalows is completed at about the same time.

There are many other aspects of the program, including physical and dental examinations for first, third and fifth graders.

* * * *

THE NEW teachers already have started an extensive training program to acquaint them with the educational needs of the so-called educationally deprived.

"Enrichment" summer school classes are planned for the grade school pupils.

Special counselors, nurses, psychologists and speech teachers have been hired to improve opportunities for the students to learn.

Library facilities, including tutors, will be provided in the late afternoon and on Saturday morning at the junior high schools. Libraries at the two high schools also will remain open Saturday mornings.

Eight assistant supervisors of instruction have been appointed to give leadership to the plan. The entire program is under direction of Dr. Robert N. Hart.

Body of British Child 11th in Murder Series

MARKHAM, England (AP)—The battered body of a postman's 12-year-old daughter was found Saturday on the route where she was last seen delivering newspapers.

The pretty, blonde girl was the 11th child found slain in Britain during the past six months.

The latest victim, Yvonne Radford, was one of a family of five children. Her head had been battered, possibly with a large stone, police said.

She delivered newspapers in this Monmouthshire mining village Friday afternoon, but there was one house on her route that did not get its paper—the last one.

Beach Parking Purchase Asked

By JIM McCAULEY
I. P-T State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—Gov. Edmund G. Brown proposed Saturday the state buy 25 additional beach and park properties, including a future 4,000-car parking parcel near Bolsa Chica State Beach in Orange County and drum barracks in Wilmington.

Brown said his budget, using funds from the 1964 state recreation bond issue, will include $44.1 million for the new purchase program.

The Orange County parking site is to be a narrow strip of 39 acres near Huntington Beach. It will make possible easier public access to Bolsa Chica State Beach from Pacific Coast Highway.

* * * *

THE PROPOSED drum barracks acquisition in Wilmington involves a 16-room structure and adjacent grounds used by the Army in the Civil War. Historians credit the presence of the Army at drum barracks as a major influence in keeping California on the side of the Union, said a Brown statement.

The 25 proposed projects would make available for public use 256,666 acres of recreational land and water, including 47 miles of river and 17 miles of ocean front.

One of the projects is a new 1,450-acre state recreation area in Los Angeles County off Topanga Canyon Road on the west slopes of the Santa Monica Mountain ridge separating Topanga and Santa Ynez Canyons. Planned are 20 camp units, 40 picnic units and four miles of hiking-riding trails.

* * * *

OTHER SOUTHERN California expansions proposed: Torrey Pines Reserve in San Diego County, 214 acres; Pichacho State Recreation Area in Imperial County, 12,000 acres; Cimodome in San Bernardino County, creation of a new 31,290-acre park, and Mitchel Caverns in San Bernardino County, addition of 6,400 acres.

Concluded the governor: "In a little more than two decades California's population is expected to double. But in the same time the demand for recreation will increase more than four-fold as population, leisure time and mobility increase."

Two Suspect Strong-arm Thugs Jailed

Officer Gary Denham identified the victim as Charles Cirk, 725 E. Sixth St. He said Cirk, who recently underwent a throat operation, was admitted to St. Mary's Hospital for emergency treatment.

A few minutes after the 9 p.m. mugging at Third Street and Locust Avenue, Juvenile Officers Jerry Heath and Reuben Fabaroz spotted two suspects at Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Avenue. Each was wearing one black leather glove, which the victim said his assailants also wore.

Jailed on suspicion of strong-arm robbery and assault were Philip C. Fortman, 22, and Lawrence T. Hartman, 21, both of 227 E. Fifth St.

Union Members at Record Peak in California

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Union membership in California reached an all-time high last year, the State Division of Labor Statistics reported Saturday.

Enrollment in July, 1965, was 1,871,000, an increase of 47,000 or 2.6% over July, 1964.

The most conspicuous advances were in transportation equipment and ordnance, metals and machinery, and paper and allied products, the division said. The biggest number increase was 11,200 in government, reflecting increases in civilian employment in shipyards, depots and military hospitals caused by the Vietnam war.

Color TV Stolen

A color television set valued at $1,225 was taken Saturday in a burglary at the home of John H. Griffith, 942 Maine Ave. Officer J. D. Holbert said the 25-inch console apparently was carried out of the house through the front door.

Harvey Pact Meet Set Today

Members of the United Steelworkers Union at Harvey Aluminum Co. are scheduled to meet at 1 p.m. today in Longshoremen's Hall in Wilmington to consider the first labor contract in the firm's history.

The pact, already signed by one union official and expected to be put into effect no matter which way the vote goes, has been the central issue in a bitter struggle between district officials of the union and local union officers, who regard its provisions as inadequate.

Its signing capped a 15-year effort to install a union at Harvey and establish normal collective bargaining at the plant, the scene of a violent four-month strike last summer.

New Postage Stamps Honor FDR Birthday

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (UPI)—A new Franklin D. Roosevelt postage stamp went on sale Saturday on the 84th birthday anniversary of the late President.

A bronze and white six-cent stamp bears a profile view of a smiling and hatless FDR, with his chin raised to a jaunty tilt.

Postmaster General Lawrence O'Brien and two of Roosevelt's sons, Franklin and John, attended dedication ceremonies at St. James Episcopal Church, where the late President was a member and senior warden.

"My father believed in the capacity of this nation to learn from the past in order to build for the future," said Franklin Roosevelt in a brief speech.

"If he had been President at another time in this nation's history, then the New Deal might well have been the New Freedom, or the New Frontier, the Fair Deal or the Great Society."

He said his father was a "man of his season, whether that season be a world war, a cold war, a depression or a war on poverty."

Long Beach Air Force Base Scheduled to Fold as Regular Installation April 25

By EV HOSKING
I. P-T Sunday Editor

The Long Beach Air Force Base at Spring Street and Redondo Avenue will go out of existence as a regular Air Force installation on April 25.

At the same time, headquarters of the Continental Air Command announced that five Air Force mobile communications squardons will be deactivated because currently there is "no military requirement" for them.

The squadrons were formerly under the jurisdiction of the 2478th Air Force Reserve Sector, which has had its headquarters at the local Air Force base.

* * * *

WHILE the Continental Air Command, which has jurisdiction over the base, has indicated that it is surplus to its needs, the Air Force itself has not relinquished the land, nor returned it to the Corps of Engineers which has jurisdiction over all military leasing.

Semiofficial sources say that it will not be returned to the city.

Speculation in military circles is that it will be turned over for use by the Air National Guard.

Deactivation of the base here as an Air Force installation will mark the first time since 1929 that the City of Long Beach has had not had a major Air Force establishment.

During World War II, the Long Beach Air Force Base was the largest Air Force installation in the nation, being the western division headquarters of the Air Transport Command. At that time takeoffs and landings occurred here at the rate as high as 27,000 a week. That is one every 24 seconds, night and day.

More than 3,000 pilots and 1,800 civilians kept the base humming. Hundreds of every kind of military aircraft were shuttled through the terminal on their way to other U.S. bases overseas.

* * * *

AFTER World War II the base became headquarters of the Air Force Reserve Flight Training Center and housed Long Beach's 452nd Bomb Wing, the first Reserve unit to be called up during the Korean conflict.

After Korea, the 452nd Bomb Wing was deactivated, and the 452nd Troop Carrier Wing activated at Long Beach. The local base also housed the 303rd Air Reserve Squadron and the 616th Hospital unit.

In 1960 these units were transferred to March Air Force Base near Riverside and a large portion of the land at the airport returned to the city.

At this time the 2470th Air Force Reserve Sector was activated here. It was a regular Air Force unit in charge of all Reserve training activities in Southern California, Arizona and Southern Nevada.

At the same time the 8646th Air Force Reserve Recovery Group was activated here, with squadrons in various parts of Southern California and Nevada. The 8646th was named the nation's outstanding Reserve unit in 1964. It was deactivated under the current Department of Defense economy program shortly thereafter.

In 1965 the 2478th was reduced to a minimum staff and its activities sharply curtailed.

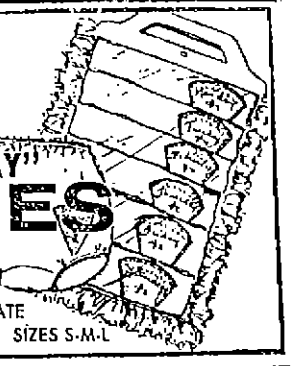
* * * *

MAJ. Michael J. Brochman, present commander of the 2478th, said that Reservists assigned to the 2478th will continue to function despite the deactivation of their headquarters.

In addition, he said, Air Reserve squadrons which furnish classroom training in the evenings for Reservists will continue in the area.

Mobile communications squardons to be deactivated which in the past had their main headquarters here were relocated at March and Norton Air Force Bases in Southern California. Two squadrons were located at Luke Air Force Base in Arizona and another one at Davis-Monthan, also in Arizona.

Car Hits Pole, 2,000 Homes Blacked Out



A hit-run driver who struck a power pole guy wire short-circuited Edison lines and blacked out about 2,000 customers Saturday night in North Long Beach, Paramount and Bellflower.

A Southern California Edison Co. spokesman said power was cut off for 31 minutes from 9:53 p.m. due to 4,000 volt lines that were whipped and locked together by the impact. Sheriff's deputies said the driver hit a guy line at Lakewood and Compton boulevards.

Beach Parking Purchase Asked

By JIM McCAULEY
I.-P-T State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—Gov. Edmund G. Brown proposed Saturday the state buy 25 additional beach and park properties, including a future 4,000-car parking parcel near Bolsa Chica State Beach in Orange County, and drum barracks in Wilmington.

Brown said his budget, using funds from the 1964 state recreation bond issue, will include $44.1 million for the new purchase program.

The Orange County parking site is to be a narrow strip of 39 acres near Huntington Beach. It will make possible easier public access to Bolsa Chica State Beach from Pacific Coast Highway.

* * * *

THE PROPOSED drum barracks acquisition in Wilmington involves a 16-room structure and adjacent grounds used by the Army in the Civil War. Historians credit the presence of the Army at drum barracks as a major influence in keeping California on the side of the Union, said a Brown statement.

The 25 proposed projects would make available for public use 256,666 acres of recreational land and water, including 47 miles of river and 17 miles of ocean front.

One of the projects is a new 1,450-acre state recreation area in Los Angeles County off Topanga Canyon Road on the west slopes of the Santa Monica Mountain ridge separating Topanga and Santa Ynez Canyons. Planned are 20 camp units, 40 picnic units and four miles of hiking-riding trails.

* * * *

OTHER SOUTHERN California expansions proposed: Torrey Pines Reserve in San Diego County, 214 acres; Pichacho State Recreation Area in Imperial County, 12,000 acres; Cimodome in San Bernardino County, creation of a new 31,290-acre park, and Mitchel Caverns in San Bernardino County, addition of 6,400 acres.

Concluded the governor: "In a little more than two decades California's population is expected to double. But in the same time the demand for recreation will increase more than four-fold as population, leisure time and mobility increase."

Two Suspect Strong-arm Thugs Jailed

Officer Gary Denham identified the victim as Charles Cirk, 725 E. Sixth St. He said Cirk, who recently underwent a throat operation, was admitted to St. Mary's Hospital for emergency treatment.

A few minutes after the 9 p.m. mugging at Third Street and Locust Avenue, Juvenile Officers Jerry Heath and Reuben Fabaroz spotted two suspects at Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Avenue. Each was wearing one black leather glove, which the victim said his assailants also wore.

Jailed on suspicion of strong-arm robbery and assault were Philip C. Fortman, 22, and Lawrence T. Hartman, 21, both of 227 E. Fifth St.

Union Members at Record Peak in California

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Union membership in California reached an all-time high last year, the State Division of Labor Statistics reported Saturday.

Enrollment in July, 1965, was 1,871,000, an increase of 47,600 or 2.6% over July, 1964.

The most conspicuous advances were in transportation equipment and ordnance, metals and machinery, and paper and allied products, the division said. The biggest number increase was 11,200 in government, reflecting increases in civilian employment in shipyards, depots and military hospitals caused by the Vietnam war.

Color TV Stolen

A color television set valued at $1,225 was taken Saturday in a burglary at the home of John H. Griffith, 942 Maine Ave. Officer J. D. Holbert said the 25-inch console apparently was carried out of the house through the front door.

Harvey Pact Meet Set Today

Members of the United Steelworkers Union at Harvey Aluminum Co. are scheduled to meet at 1 p.m. today in Longshoremen's Hall in Wilmington to consider the first labor contract in the firm's history.

The pact, already signed by one union official and expected to be put into effect no matter which way the vote goes, has been the central issue in a bitter struggle between district officials of the union and local union officers, who regard its provisions as inadequate.

Its signing capped a 15-year effort to install a union at Harvey and establish normal collective bargaining at the plant, the scene of a violent four-month strike last summer.

New Postage Stamps Honor FDR Birthday

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — A new Franklin D. Roosevelt postage stamp went on sale Saturday on the 84th birthday anniversary of the late President.

A bronze and white six-cent stamp bears a profile view of a smiling and hatless FDR, with his chin raised to a jaunty tilt.

Postmaster General Lawrence O'Brien and two of Roosevelt's sons, Franklin and John, attended dedication ceremonies at St. James Episcopal Church, where the late President was a member and senior warden.

"My father believed in the capacity of this nation to learn from the past in order to build for the future," said Franklin Roosevelt in a brief speech.

"If he had been President at another time in this nation's history, then the New Deal might well have been the New Freedom, or the New Frontier, the Fair Deal or the Great Society."

He said his father was a "man of his season, whether that season be a world war, a cold war, a depression or a war on poverty."

Long Beach Air Force Base Scheduled to Fold as Regular Installation April 25

By EV HOSKING
I.-P-T Sunday Editor

The Long Beach Air Force Base at Spring Street and Redondo Avenue will go out of existence as a regular Air Force installation on April 25.

At the same time, headquarters of the Continental Air Command announced that five Air Force mobile communications squadrons will be deactivated because currently there is "no military requirement" for them.

The squadrons were formerly under the jurisdiction of the 2478th Air Force Reserve Sector, which has had its headquarters at the local Air Force base.

* * * *

WHILE the Continental Air Command, which has jurisdiction over the base, has indicated that it is surplus to its needs, the Air Force itself has not relinquished the land, nor returned it to the Corps of Engineers which has jurisdiction over all military leasing.

Semiofficial sources say that it will not be returned to the city.

Speculation in military circles is that it will be turned over for use by the Air National Guard.

Deactivation of the base here as an Air Force installation will mark the first time since 1929 that the City of Long Beach has had not had a major Air Force establishment.

During World War II, the Long Beach Air Force Base was the largest Air Force installation in the nation, being the western division headquarters of the Air Transport Command. At that time takeoffs and landings occurred here at the rate as high as 27,000 a week. That is one every 24 seconds, night and day.

More than 3,000 pilots and 1,800 civilians kept the base humming. Hundreds of every kind of military aircraft were shuttled through the terminal on their way to other U.S. bases overseas.

* * * *

AFTER World War II the base became headquarters of the Air Force Reserve Flight Training Center and housed Long Beach's 452nd Bomb Wing, the first Reserve unit to be called up during the Korean conflict.

After Korea, the 452nd Bomb Wing was deactivated, and the 452nd Troop Carrier Wing activated at Long Beach. The local base also housed the 303rd Air Reserve Squadron and the 616th Hospital unit.

In 1960 these units were transferred to March Air Force Base near Riverside and a large portion of the land at the airport returned to the city.

At this time the 2470th Air Force Reserve Sector was activated here. It was a regular Air Force unit in charge of all Reserve training activities in Southern California, Arizona and Southern Nevada.

At the same time the 8646th Air Force Reserve Recovery Group was activated here with squadrons in various parts of Southern California and Nevada. The 8646th was named the nation's outstanding Reserve unit in 1964. It was deactivated under the current Department of Defense economy program shortly thereafter.

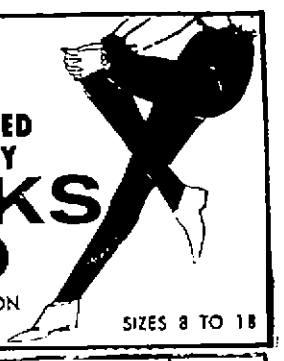
In 1965 the 2478th was reduced to a minimum staff and its activities sharply curtailed.

* * * *

MAJ. Michael J. Brochman, present commander of the 2478th, said that Reservists assigned to the 2478th will continue to function despite the deactivation of their headquarters.

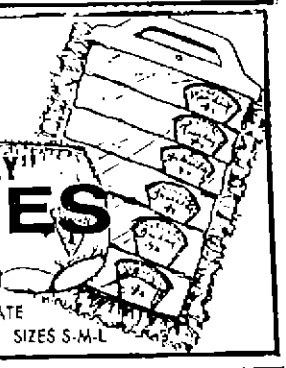
In addition, he said, Air Reserve squadrons which furnish classroom training in the evenings for Reservists will continue in the area.

Mobile communications squardons to be deactivated which in the past had their main headquarters here were relocated at March and Norton Air Force Bases in Southern California. Two squadrons were located at Luke Air Force Base in Arizona and another one at Davis-Monthan, also in Arizona.



Car Hits Pole, 2,000 Homes Blacked Out

A hit-run driver who struck a power pole guy wire short-circuited Edison lines and blacked out about 2,000 customers Saturday night in North Long Beach, Paramount and Bellflower.



A Southern California Edison Co. spokesman said power was cut off for 31 minutes from 9:53 p.m. due to 4,000 volt lines that were whipped and locked together by the impact. Sheriff's deputies said the driver hit a guy line at Lakewood and Compton boulevards.

Johnson Needs More Personal Loyal Partisans

By WALTER T. RIDDER
Chief, I. P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON—In addition to being, as someone once described it, the art of the possible, politics can also be the are of dealing with the paradoxical. When it comes to dealing with human beings, what's true in the case of one is not necessarily true in the case of another and the skilled practioner of the political art is the man who can appear to reconcile the seemingly irreconcilable.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, for instance, finds himself in a somewhat paradoxical situation as far as the voters of the United States are concerned. He won, a bit over a year ago, the greatest triumph in a presidential election in recent years. His popularity in the public-opinion polls runs consistently very, very, high.

And yet, in the words of one who makes a business of sampling American public opinion, "Lyndon Johnson is his own worst enemy." The President is popular and at the same time unpopular; he is respected, but he isn't liked, and he is admired, but he isn't loved.

* * * *

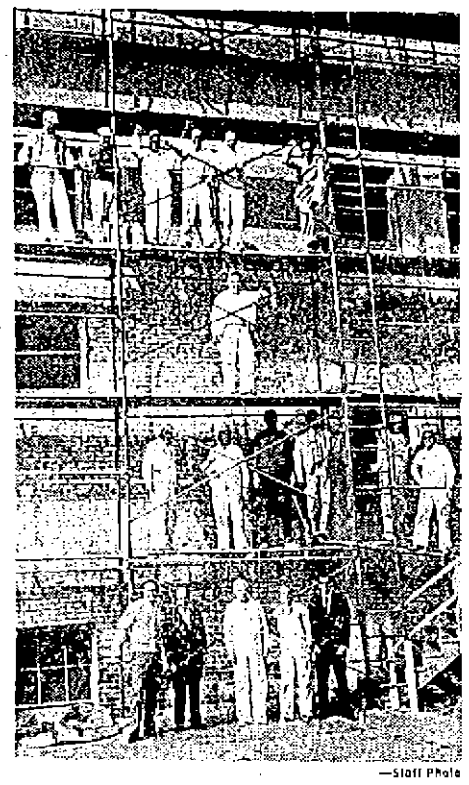
PRESIDENT Johnson's basic problem as far as the general public is concerned is to make himself into a likeable human being. There is still something about him which keeps people on their guard, makes them withtdraw a little from him as a person, and makes them slightly distrustful of him not as a leader or as a politician or as a president, but simply as a man.

When asked about their feelings about the President, people tend to answer somewhat qualifiedly or to use words which have or can have a slightly unfavorable flavor. For instance, the words with which some people describe their idea of what kind of a man the President is often are words such as "shrewd," "manipulator" or "he's an able man, but you've got to watch him." None of those descriptions is exactly damning, but neither then are they exactly praiseful.

It is perfectly obvious to any observer, professional pollster or other, that Johnson does not command the personal fealty of people the way some other presidents have. Franklin D. Roosevelt was an example of a man who managed to ignite people's imagination and to stimulate within them the more personal of loyalties. In the 1930s and 1940s there must have been thousands, if not hundreds of thousands, of people who named a child "Franklin," thereby paying their personal tribute to the man they loved. It is doubtful whether more than a handful of people have named a child "Lyndon."

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had an enormous personal popularity not only in this country, but all over the world. He epitomized the world's idea of the American "good guy." People followed his leadership not so much because they thought out their position and agreed with Ike, but merely because they liked Ike and therefore were willing to go whither he went.



At the moment, Johnson does not appear to have that kind of solid personal popularity. Whatever the polls may show at the moment, Johnson's popularity probably is razor thin. As long as things go well, he probably can hold on to his apparent popularity, but should things begin to go wrong, there's very little residue of intense personal loyalty to help him over the rough spots.

The President himself probably is the first to realize what his problems are. No one follows the polls as assiduously as does Johnson and no doubt all of the foregoing already has been brought to his attention.

* * * *

THE ATTITUDES of the American people towards the President are, of course, of tremendous political importance. If one can arrive at even a tentative conclusion at so early a date, the figures and the attitudes would indicate that everything isn't all over for the Republicans in 1968. Lyndon B. Johnson is not necessarily a shoo-in to be re-elected as President in that year. His popularity is very thinly based and, under certain conditions, could evaporate quickly and be gone with the wind.

The Republicans at this time have no very strong or dominant figure with whom to challenge Johnson. They may acquire one in the two and one-half years that lie ahead. For as long as American attitudes seem to be somewhat skeptical of Lyndon Johnson as a man, the next presidential contest cannot be regarded as over already.

PARTICIPANTS in Downtown YMCA painting project pause for pose Saturday morning. Work was donated by several local business firms and labor unions. LABOR, PAINT GIVEN

Facelifting at Y Cost Is Nothing

The downtown YMCA had its rear face lifted Saturday.

And the YMCA didn't have to pay a penny for the job, which was estimated to cost $2,500.

The work was donated by several local business firms and labor unions.

* * * *

BRINGING the job to a finish Saturday morning were 13 members of Long Beach Painters Local 13, who worked from an eight-tiered scaffold constructed last week by members of the Carpenters Union.

* * * *

C. ROBERT Langslet, general contractor, was credited by YMCA Properties Committee Chairman Judge Robert Wenke with coordinating the work, and Mel Masterson Scaffold Co. with supplying the scaffolding.

Color consultant for the job was Dorothy Bowers.

Meals for the workers were donated by the Chicken Pie Shop.

REAGAN AHEAD BUT—

Poll-Taker Sees Governor Winner

I. P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Although his most recent surveys show actor Ronald Reagan leading Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown in the race for California governor, pollster Don Muchmore believes Brown will emerge the victor in November.

Muchmore, a former professor of political science and now head of the highly successful State Poll, told newsmen here he sees a Brown victory on historic factors rather than on recent opinion samplings by his organization around the state.

The latest Muchmore poll, taken Jan. 10, shows Reagan increasing his early leads over Brown and getting a 4.4% edge. But Muchmore believes the governor will pull ahead in the next nine months.

Muchmore said the governor's three previous races show him as an astute practitioner of waiting for the other fellow's foot to slip and then hitting him with all available armament.

Muchmore saw only a slight chance that moderate candidate George Christopher might overcome his present lag to wrest the Republican gubernatorial nomination from Reagan in June.

He pointed out that a third of the vote ascribed to Sen. Thomas Kuchel, R-Calif., in a September sampling switched to Reagan after the senator announced he would not seek the gubernatorial nomination.

This third consisted of Republicans who felt loyalty to Kuchel as the state's senior GOP officeholder and those attracted to Reagan because of a moderation in the actor's political image, according to Muchmore.

* * * *

THE VIET NAM situation will not be a noticeable factor in the campaigning, said Muchmore. He said Brown is much too wise to bring it into the campaign and that Reagan learned his lesson recently when there was adverse reaction to his suggestion that United States power could turn North Viet Nam "into a parking lot."

Muchmore, here this weekend for consultation with clients, predicted issues will include the race problem, diminishing industries, transportation and water.

Etonians Keep Mourning for Late George III

ETON, Eng. (AP) — Authorities at Eton College, England's swankiest school for boys, voted Saturday to keep pupils wearing the traditional top hat, white tie, starched collar, tails and striped trousers.

Progressives among the schoolmasters had wanted to permit schoolboys to wear tweed jackets and grey flannel slacks to class.

The boys have been wearing the formal clothes for 146 years as a sign of mourning for King George III, who died in 1820.

McCone Aid Costs Figured

LOS ANGELES (CNS) — Mayor Sam Yorty Saturday reported costs of putting McCone Commission recommendations applying to Los Angeles in effect could reach more than $22 million in federal and city funds.

The mayor's report was based upon estimates of the City Administrative Officer Dr. C. Erwin Piper, which he arrived at after study of specific and general recommendations of the Governor's Commission which investigated the riots of last August.

Yorty said some of the commission's suggestions already were under way, while others would be included in departmental requests for the 1966-67 budget, with still others under consideration.

* * * *

HIGHEST costs would be for providing job opportunities for persons of the riot curfew area, Mayor Yorty said.

Dr. Piper is assisting in preparation of budgetary and personnel estimates for a proposal to employ 2,000 jobless persons. With six hours mandatory training for each person, the one-year cost would be about $11.7 million dollars, he said.

Another project now before the council, to hire 1,500 to 2,000 persons, would require an estimated $8.5 million per year. Both proposals envision federal antipoverty funds and would be submitted through the Economic and Youth Opportunity Agency, Mayor Yorty said.

Red Leaders Confer

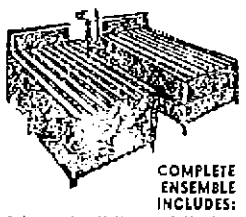
Father, Daughter Stuck on Ledges

SAN DIMAS (CNS)—A Los Angeles man and his teen-age daughter were rescued by a sheriff's helicopter from two separate ledges in Angeles National Forest Saturday.



Wallace Funk and his daughter, Carol, 16, were in good condition after being trapped on ledges in the Little Jimmy Spring area Saturday afternoon. Funk was on a ledge about 600 feet below the roadway. His daughter was on a shelf about 300 feet above him.

Besides the helicopter, two squads of mountaineers were making their way to the scene, about three miles east of the junction of Highway 39 and Angeles Crest Highway. The two were rescued by the helicopter before the ground crews arrived.

Father, Daughter Stuck on Ledges

SAN DIMAS (CNS)—A Los Angeles man and his teen-age daughter were rescued by a sheriff's helicopter from two separate ledges in Angeles National Farest Saturday.

Wallace Funk and his daughter, Carol, 16, were in good condition after being trapped on ledges in the Little Jimmy Spring area Saturday afternoon. Funk was on a ledge about 600 feet below the roadway. His daughter was on a shelf about 300 feet above him.

Besides the helicopter, two squads of mountaineers were making their way to the scene, about three miles east of the junction of Highway 39 and Angeles Crest Highway. The two were rescued by the helicopter before the ground crews arrived.

REAGAN AHEAD BUT—

Poll-Taker Sees Governor Winner

I. P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Although his most recent surveys show actor Ronald Reagan leading Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown in the race for California governor, pollster Don Muchmore believes Brown will emerge the victor in November.

Muchmore, a former professor of political science and now head of the highly successful State Poll, told newsmen here he sees a Brown victory on historic factors rather than on recent opinion samplings by his organization around the state.

The latest Muchmore poll, taken Jan. 10, shows Reagan increasing his early leads over Brown and getting a 4.4% edge. But Muchmore believes the governor will pull ahead in the next nine months.

Muchmore said the governor's three previous races show him as an astute practitioner of waiting for the other fellow's foot to slip and then hitting him with all available armament.

Muchmore saw only a slight chance that moderate candidate George Christopher might overcome his present lag to wrest the Republican gubernatorial nomination from Reagan in June.

He pointed out that a third of the vote ascribed to Sen. Thomas Kuchel, R-Calif., in a September sampling switched to Reagan after the senator announced he would not seek the gubernatorial nomination. This third consisted of Republicans who felt loyalty to Kuchel as the state's senior GOP officeholder and those attracted to Reagan because of a moderation in the actor's political image, according to Muchmore.

* * * *

THE VIET NAM situation will not be a noticeable factor in the campaigning, said Muchmore. He said Brown is much too wise to bring it into the campaign and that Reagan learned his lesson recently when there was adverse reaction to his suggestion that United States power could turn North Viet Nam "into a parking lot."

Muchmore, here this weekend for consultation with clients, predicted issues will include the race problem, diminishing industries, transportation and water.

Etonians Keep Mourning for Late George III

ETON, Eng. (AP) — Authorities at Eton College, England's swankiest school for boys, voted Saturday to keep pupils wearing the traditional top hat, white tie, starched collar, tails and striped trousers.

Progressives among the schoolmasters had wanted to permit schoolboys to wear tweed jackets and grey flannel slacks to class.

The boys have been wearing the formal clothes for 146 years as a sign of mourning for King George III, who died in 1820.

Reserves Honor Papers, Hosking

For their contributions to the national defense effort, The Independent, Press-Telegram and its Sunday Editor, Everett W. Hosking, were presented the Distinguished Service Citation by the Reserve Officers Association of the United States.

The presentation was made at the annual installation and dinner dance of officers of Area 8, Department of California, Saturday night at Allen Center, Long Beach Naval Station.

Major Gen. William J. Hixon, USAR, made the presentation to Hosking on behalf of the national ROA for his and these newspapers' contribution to the national defense effort.

* * * *

THE AWARD was based in part on a series of articles appearing last year on the editorial pages of these newspapers analyzing both sides of a Department of Defense proposal to merge the Reserves of the United States military forces and the National Guard of the various states.

The articles were widely reprinted and eventually were included in the Congressional Record.

Hosking, in addition to his newspaper work, is a veteran of 20 years active and reserve service with the United States Air Force. He currently has a mobilization day assignment to Headquarters, Space Systems Division, Air Force Systems Command.

Service Disrupted on Atlantic Cable

NEW YORK (AP) — A transatlantic telephone cable was knocked out of service Saturday, disrupting some communications between New York and London.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in New York first described the disruption, which occurred at 9:30 a.m., as a break. But at 2:40 p.m. AT&T said that it was not a break and full service had been restored.

Barbershop Quartet Harmony Show Set

The 21st annual Barber Shop Quartet Harmony Show will open at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 19 in the Convention Hall of Long Beach Municipal Auditorium.

This year's show features four international barbershop singing champions, in what the sponsoring Long Beach chapter called "The Parade of Champions," plus two hilarious comedy crews and the 35-voice Long Beach Barber-Shop Chorus.

The 1966 production marks the 27th anniversary of the founding of the Long Beach chapter and, according to the newly installed president, Gene Peterson, promises to be the best of the 20 previous efforts.

* * * *

OUTSTANDING among an outstanding sextet of quarters is the 1964 International Champion Barbershop Quartet, as chosen by the S.P.E.B.-S.Q.S.A. at San Antonio, Tex. The Sidewinders from Riverside bring a full repertoire of the traditional barbershop numbers plus several crowd pleasers arranged just for them.

Second in the parade of international champions are The Gala Lads of Fullerton.

Third, but not last, is the Evans Quartet, from Salt Lake City, Utah, which won the international championship from a tough field in 1960 in Dallas, Tex.

* * * *

ON THE DISTAFF side of barbershopping are a lovely foursome, the Shallmars.

On the comedy side of the ledger are two of the greatest funnyman quartets this side of the Marx Brothers, the Salt Flats of Salt Lake City, Utah, and the Chordsmen of Whittier. Both combine a real ability to sing barbershop harmony with comic antics that drive audiences wild.

Carl Hancuff, who sings bass for the Salt Flats and has picked up a large local following for his efforts as master of ceremonies at previous shows, will do the job again this year.

Tickets for the 1966 Parade of Champions may be purchased by mail by writing to Russ Cunningham, 2377 Pacific Ave., Long Beach. They may also be purchased at the Municipal Auditorium box-office.

PRESENTS CITATION

Reserves Honor Papers, Hosking

For their contributions to the national defense effort, The Independent, Press-Telegram and its Sunday Editor, Everett W. Hosking, were presented the Distinguished Service Citation by the Reserve Officers Association of the United States.

The presentation was made at the annual installation and dinner dance of officers of Area 8, Department of California, Saturday night at Allen Center, Long Beach Naval Station.

Major Gen. William J. Hixon, USAR, made the presentation to Hosking on behalf of the national ROA for his and these newspapers' contribution to the national defense effort.

* * * *

THE AWARD was based in part on a series of articles appearing last year on the editorial pages of these newspapers analyzing both sides of a Department of Defense proposal to merge the Reserves of the United States military forces and the National Guard of the various states.

The articles were widely reprinted and eventually were included in the Congressional Record.

Hosking, in addition to his newspaper work, is a veteran of 20 years active and reserve service with the United States Air Force. He currently has a mobilization day assignment to Headquarters, Space Systems Division, Air Force Systems Command.

* * * *

ROLAND R. Bach, retired manager of the Long Beach Chapter, American Red Cross, was guest speaker at the affair.

Lt. Col. Frank F. Prince, USAR, introduced the guests.

Resume Registry at LBCC

Spring semester registration at Long Beach City College resumes Monday in accordance with schedules announced for the Adult Centers, the Business and Technology Campus and the Liberal Arts Campus.

Registration will be taken in classrooms beginning Monday for all LBCC day and evening classes offered at Millikan, Lakewood, Jordan and West Adult Centers and at public library branches and elementary schools. Instruction also begins Monday at these locations.

At the Business and Technology Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway, continuing and new full-time day students register by appointment Monday and Tuesday. New day students may enroll without appointment on Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1-3 p.m. in the gymnasium.

* * * *

AT THE Liberal Arts Campus, 4901 E. Carson Street, continuing day students and new day students with "regular" status will register by appointment Monday or Tuesday. "Limited" day students (enrolling for up to nine hours per week) may register without appointment from 1-4 p.m. Wednesday in the women's gymnasium.

At both BTC and LAC, continuing evening students will register from 6-8:30 p.m. Monday. All other evening students may enroll during the same hours on Tuesday or Wednesday. Instruction in all classes on these two campuses will begin Thursday.

Service Disrupted on Atlantic Cable

NEW YORK (AP) — A transatlantic telephone cable was knocked out of service Saturday, disrupting some communications between New York and London.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in New York first described the disruption, which occurred at 9:30 a.m., as a break. But at 2:40 p.m. AT&T said that it was not a break and full service had been restored.

Barbershop Quartet Harmony Show Set

The 21st annual Barber Shop Quartet Harmony Show will open at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 19 in the Convention Hall of Long Beach Municipal Auditorium.

This year's show features four international barbershop singing champions, in what the sponsoring Long Beach chapter called "The Parade of Champions," plus two hilarious comedy crews and the 35-voice Long Beach Barber-Shop Chorus.

The 1966 production marks the 27th anniversary of the founding of the Long Beach chapter and, according to the newly installed president, Gene Peterson, promises to be the best of the 20 previous efforts.

* * * *

OUTSTANDING among an outstanding sextet of quarters is the 1964 International Champion Barbershop Quartet, as chosen by the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. at San Antonio, Tex. The Sidewinders from Riverside bring a full repertoire of the traditional barbershop numbers plus several crowd pleasers arranged just for them.

Second in the parade of international champions are The Gala Lads of Fullerton.

Third, but not last, is the Evans Quartet, from Salt Lake City, Utah, which won the international championship from a tough field in 1960 in Dallas, Tex.

* * * *

ON THE DISTAFF side of barbershopping are a lovely foursome, the Shalimars.

On the comedy side of the ledger are two of the greatest funnyman quartets this side of the Marx Brothers, the Salt Flats of Salt Lake City, Utah, and the Chordsmen of Whittier. Both combine a real ability to sing barbershop harmony with comic antics that drive audiences wild.

Carl Hancuff, who sings bass for the Salt Flats and has picked up a large local following for his efforts as master of ceremonies at previous shows, will do the job again this year.

Tickets for the 1966 Parade of Champions may be purchased by mail by writing to Russ Cunningham, 2377 Pacific Ave., Long Beach. They may also be purchased at the Municipal Auditorium box-office.

LADDERS TOO SHORT

Firemen strive vainly to reach flames in two top floors of downtown Los Angeles building which were quelled after two-hour battle Friday night when fire fighters entered building to suppress them. More than 100 firemen took part. Short ladders, low water pressure hindered them.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Bombs Blast Homes of 5 Ohio Teachers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The homes of five teachers at a high school in a well-to-do section of the city were bombed Saturday. Police said the bombings may have been the work of a disgruntled student.

There were no injuries or serious damage but police said the bombs "could have killed."

The blasts occurred within a 90-minute period at the residences of Mrs. Donald W. Bolin, John Langham, Jerry Haney and James M. McDonald—teachers at Whetstone High School—and Mrs. Arvo Looke, a former teacher.

"At first we thought it was a firecracker," said Mrs. Looke, "but the mail box was blown across the yard and into the street."

Henry Chaffin, juvenile officer in the Columbus Police Department, said the bombs were simply constructed but "required a lot of thought." He said they were made of copper tubing stuffed with matchheads, gunpowder and metal, and were crimped tight at one end.

French 'Victory'

LUXEMBOURG, Sunday (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle's France today won its battle to keep a veto of all six members of the European Common Market.

In return, France promised to resume full cooperation with the organization. Since July 1 French delegates had stayed away from all major meetings at Common Market headquarters in Brussels.

Seaside Tragedy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A boy and an 18-year-old sailor who went to his rescue were drowned Saturday in the churning surf below San Francisco's famed Cliff House.

The boy fell into the water from the side of the steep bluff where he had been playing with four other youngsters, all 12 to 14 years of age.

The boy was tentatively identified as Mario Forstein, 13, of San Francisco. The sailor was Stephen Hunt, based at the Navy Treasure Island electronics school.

Indians Poisoned

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—A Roman Catholic missionary said Saturday while rubber tappers wiped out half a tribe of Indians in Amazon territory last year by putting arsenic in sugar they gave them.

"Now they want to do away with the rest of the tribe," said Rev. Valdemar Weber. He said the itinerant tappers wanted Indian land in the northern part of Mato Grasso State between Xingu and Tapajos Rivers.

Treasure Hunt

VALLEY VIEW, Tex. (AP)—The Frank Neu family is anxiously awaiting a thaw in the ground so it can resume its private diamond mining operations.

Glenn Neu, 13, is careful that each of his departed pets receives a ceremonial burial on the family farm near this North-Central Texas town.

When his goldfish perished a few days ago, he found a suitable coffin and buried the pet. Now he can't recall where the burial took place.

PATRIOTIC PROJECT

Bumper Poppy Crop Due

By FRED HAMLIN

Poppies, the kind that bloom on patriotic lapels each Memorial Day, promise to be a Southland bumper crop this year.

Mrs. Virginia Diez, poppy production manager for the Department of California American Legion Auxiliary, says a record 63,300 lapel-size paper poppies will be made for sale May 26 and 27 in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

Volunteer poppy-makers among patients at Long Beach Veterans Hospital are nurturing the crop along at a rapid pace, according to Mrs. Diez and her co-chairman, Mrs. Hazel Rokes.

* * * *

ONE nimble-fingered poppyteer, Gerald T. Mathews, 24, at last count had produced 8,500 and was going strong, his hospital bed heaped high with poppy-making materials. He and other volunteers among the patients are paid three cents per completed poppy for their work. In some cases, it is their sole source of income.

The poppies are purchased at cost of four cents each by Legion Auxiliary units, which in turn sell them to the public on Poppy Days—averaging approximately 10 cents per sale. This revenue, Mrs. Diez said, is used for child welfare and for rehabilitation of veterans and their families.

Poppy production is to continue through February. Then comes the task of obtaining volunteer poppy-sellers from among the 19,000 Legion Auxiliary members in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

If all goes well, says Mrs. Diez, poppies will be popping out all over on the eve of Memorial Day.

Two Democrats Seek Nomination for Senate

Two Democrats have announced they will seek their party's nomination for State Senate in the new 35th District, which includes north Orange County and the Walnut, Otterbein, LaVerne, Claremont, Pomona areas of Los Angeles County.

They are Assemblyman William E. Dannemeyer and John C. Packard, both of Fullerton. Packard is administrative consultant to the Orange County school superintendent.

Republicans already announced for the 35th District seat are Assemblyman James E. Whetmore of Garden Grove, and Byron Owen, Hacienda Heights insurance man.

Dannemeyer, 35, said his two Assembly terms "have prepared me for the Senate." He said he would seek to revise the formula under which the Southland gets only 55% of the 63% of gasoline taxes it pays. The shortage amounts to $40 million each year, he said.

Packard said it is time "we had a realistic approach to the problems that we must face in becoming what may one day become the number one population center in California."

Decision Awaited on Bomb Lull

(Compiled From Wire Services)

To bomb, or not to bomb North Viet Nam, that was the question.

And while Lyndon Baines Johnson was wrestling with it, he was getting lots of advice — from congressmen, public opinion polls, the military, foreign affairs advisors and via the postman.

* * * *

WHILE THE world awaited the answer, still a new face of war was emerging in Viet Nam. American social scientists and propagandists began to move into prominence in the war theater.

Studies prepared for Washington contended morale of the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam was deteriorating badly. The Communist guerrillas, they said, were having trouble finding volunteers, were relying more and more on conscription.

"Operation Open Arms" was in full swing, and, said officials, was beginning to pay off. It is a vast campaign of leaflet-dropping planes, loudspeaker-equipped planes playing Buddhist funeral music and sending messages of love and surrender. The planes flew ceaselessly over the vast no man's land of South Viet Nam, dropping "safe conduct" passes, carrying out the theme, "Why keep fighting for a foreign master, bringing only death and destruction to your country?"

* * * *

WAS IT paying off? American sources said 894 Viet Cong quit the fight in the first 17 days of 1966, compared to the previous monthly average of 500. And it was true that the lull in fighting was rolling on, even after the truce for Tet, the Vienamese lunar New Year holiday, Jan. 20-23.

Would the lull in fighting continue, and would the holiday on the bombing of North Viet Nam remain? From the White House came the word of press secretary Bill Moyers: President Johnson would make a decision, based on "what is best for the country." The country, and the world, waited.

SOME 1.8 million draft-deferred college students and millions of high school seniors soon will know whether they can count on uninterrupted continuation of their education or if they will be subject to military call-up.

Lt. Gen. Lewis Hershey, Selective Service director, announced Friday that the government is returning to the use of a testing system and class standing as guides for local draft boards in granting college deferments. The procedure will be effective for the next college year.

Hershey said the criteria will be similar to those used during the Korean conflict. Details will be issued in the near future.

* * * *

THE PRESIDENT handed Congress a record $112.8 billion fiscal 1967 budget. He warned it could climb even higher and involve tax increases because of Viet Nam and "the troubled world in which we live."

But he also said that "if our efforts to find peace in Viet Nam prevail," he will act swiftly to shift the billions saved to Great Society programs. He earmarked $10.5 billion in special outlays for Viet Nam, plus $47.8 billion in other defense spending.

He requested an additional $3 billion for the Great Society, but conceded this was below what he really wanted for schools, hospitals and the war on poverty. He foresaw a $1.8 billion budget deficit, the lowest in seven years.

* * * *

JOHNSON MADE it clear he would not hesitate to demand tax hikes and employ other economic weapons as a brake on inflation if the combination of war and business boom puts undue pressures on wages and prices. The Labor Department reported meantime that the cost of living jumped to a new record in December — a boost that lopped another 3 cents off the buying power of a $10 bill.

The President also gave Congress his annual economic report, with inflation control the central theme. He predicted that unemployment would fall below 4% this year, the lowest since 1953, while the value of the nation's output of goods and services soars to $722 billion.

Johnson asked Congress to step up the war on poverty for 4.4 million rural families through a new federally-aided program of joint action by small cities and outlying areas. He also proposed a $2.3 billion program to rebuild entire slum neighborhoods in cities. He said both projects would promise "a new life" for millions of citizens.

IN BRIGHT, cold weather (22 below zero), the Air India jetliner turned over the Alps to approach Geneva. It never arrived.

The Boeing 707, with 117 persons aboard, crashed into Mount Blanc at 8:25 a.m. on Monday. There were no survivors, and it may be spring before the bodies can be brought down from the 15,000-foot level of the peak.

Five Americans were among the victims. Also killed was Dr. Homi J. Bhabha, chairman of India's Atomic Energy Commission, and 42 Indian sailors, going to pick up a ship in Germany.

On Friday, a Lufthansa airliner attempting a landing in rainy weather overshot the runway at Bremen, Germany, and crashed in a huge ball of flames, killing the 42 passengers and four crewmen.

DEATH CLAIMED Robert G. Thompson, 50, of New York, last October and his widow requested that he be buried in Arlington National Cemetery. The government approved the request.

In 1943, Thompson won the Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest award for valor. As a staff sergeant in New Guinea, he led his platoon in a daylight assault that wiped out two Japanese machinegun positions.

But the interment will not take place Monday as planned. Besides being a valiant soldier, Thompson also was a Communist.

After an uproar raised by veterans' groups, the Defense Department announced Thursday that Thompson could not be buried in Arlington, under an Army rule barring veterans sentenced to five years or more in federal prisons.

Thompson had been convicted twice and sentenced to seven years. In 1949 he was convicted of conspiring to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the U.S. government, and in 1953 of contempt of court for jumping bail after his first conviction.

STORE detective Helen McGarry said she watched the beautiful woman drop the items, one by one, into her shopping bag and leave the store without paying for them. Miss McGarry followed her into the parking lot and called police, who made the arrest.

The suspect: Hedy Lamarr, 51, once billed as the most beautiful woman in the world. Miss Lamarr, recently divorced for the sixth time, was to start work this week in her first big film role in 15 years, as the title-mother in "Picture Mommy Dead."

She has another date this week, in court Wednesday, on a shoplifting charge that could mean six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Said Miss Lamarr to newsmen: "It must have been a misunderstanding. I'm willing to pay for these things. Other stores let me do it. I'm willing to forget it." When arriested, she had $14,000 in checks in her purse.

Said her son: "The last 10 years have been a strain on my mother, both financially and, especially, emotionally."

TRAGEDY struck downtown Boston Friday night when explosions and fires wrecked two hotels, killing at least nine and injuring dozens. The search for additional bodies went on Saturday.

Cause of the explosions was not immediately determined, but witnesses said flames licked from sewer openings and manholes for more than an hour after the Plymouth and Paramount hotels were shattered.

Decision Awaited on Bomb Lull

(Compiled From Wire Services)

To bomb, or not to bomb North Viet Nam, that was the question.

And while Lyndon Baines Johnson was wrestling with it, he was getting lots of advice — from congressmen, public opinion polls, the military, foreign affairs advisors and via the postman.

* * * *

WHILE THE world awaited the answer, still a new face of war was emerging in Viet Nam. American social scientists and propagandists began to move into prominence in the war theater.

Studies prepared for Washington contended morale of the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam was deteriorating badly. The Communist guerrillas, they said, were having trouble finding volunteers, were relying more and more on conscription.

"Operation Open Arms" was in full swing, and, said officials, was beginning to pay off. It is a vast campaign of leaflet-dropping planes, loudspeaker-equipped planes playing Buddhist funeral music and sending messages of love and surrender. The planes flew ceaselessly over the vast no man's land of South Viet Nam, dropping "safe conduct" passes, carrying out the theme, "Why keep fighting for a foreign master, bringing only death and destruction to your country?"

* * * *

WAS IT paying off? American sources said 894 Viet Cong quit the fight in the first 17 days of 1966, compared to the previous monthly average of 500. And it was true that the lull in fighting was rolling on, even after the truce for Tet, the Vietnamese lunar New Year holiday, Jan. 20-23.

Would the lull in fighting continue, and would the holiday on the bombing of North Viet Nam remain? From the White House came the word of press secretary Bill Moyers: President Johnson would make a decision, based on "what is best for the country." The country, and the world, waited.

SOME 1.8 million draft-deferred college students and millions of high school seniors soon will know whether they can count on uninterrupted continuation of their education or if they will be subject to military call-up.

Lt. Gen. Lewis Hershey, Selective Service director, announced Friday that the government is returning to the use of a testing system and class standing as guides for local draft boards in granting college deferments. The procedure will be effective for the next college year.

Hershey said the criteria will be similar to those used during the Korean conflict. Details will be issued in the near future.

* * * *

THE PRESIDENT handed Congress a record $112.8 billion fiscal 1967 budget. He warned it could climb even higher and involve tax increases because of Viet Nam and "the troubled world in which we live."

But he also said that "if our efforts to find peace in Viet Nam prevail," he will act swiftly to shift the billions saved to Great Society programs. He earmarked $10.5 billion in special outlays for Viet Nam, plus $47.8 billion in other defense spending.

He requested an additional $3 billion for the Great Society, but conceded this was below what he really wanted for schools, hospitals and the war on poverty. He foresaw a $1.8 billion budget deficit, the lowest in seven years.

* * * *

JOHNSON MADE it clear he would not hesitate to demand tax hikes and employ other economic weapons as a brake on inflation if the combination of war and business boom puts undue pressures on wages and prices. The Labor Department reported meantime that the cost of living jumped to a new record in December — a boost that lopped another 3 cents off the buying power of a $10 bill.

The President also gave Congress his annual economic report, with inflation control the central theme. He predicted that unemployment would fall below 4% this year, the lowest since 1953, while the value of the nation's output of goods and services soars to $722 billion.

Johnson asked Congress to step up the war on poverty for 4.4 million rural families through a new federally-aided program of joint action by small cities and outlying areas. He also proposed a $2.3 billion program to rebuild entire slum neighborhoods in cities. He said both projects would promise "a new life" for millions of citizens.

IN BRIGHT, cold weather (22 below zero), the Air India jetliner turned over the Alps to approach Geneva. It never arrived.

The Boeing 707, with 117 persons aboard, crashed into Mount Blanc at 8:25 a.m. on Monday. There were no survivors, and it may be spring before the bodies can be brought down from the 15,000-foot level of the peak.

Five Americans were among the victims. Also killed was Dr. Homi J. Bhabha, chairman of India's Atomic Energy Commission, and 42 Indian sailors, going to pick up a ship in Germany.

On Friday, a Lufthansa airliner attempting a landing in rainy weather overshot the runway at Bremen, Germany, and crashed in a huge ball of flames, killing the 42 passengers and four crewmen.

DEATH CLAIMED Robert G. Thompson, 50, of New York, last October and his widow requested that he be buried in Arlington National Cemetery. The government approved the request.

In 1943, Thompson won the Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest award for valor. As a staff sergeant in New Guinea, he led his platoon in a daylight assault that wiped out two Japanese machinegun positions.

But the interment will not take place Monday as planned. Besides being a valiant soldier, Thompson also was a Communist.

After an uproar raised by veterans' groups, the Defense Department announced Thursday that Thompson could not be buried in Arlington, under an Army rule barring veterans sentenced to five years or more in federal prisons.

Thompson had been convicted twice and sentenced to seven years. In 1949 he was convicted of conspiring to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the U.S. government, and in 1953 of contempt of court for jumping bail after his first conviction.

STORE detective Helen McGarry said she watched the beautiful woman drop the items, one by one, into her shopping bag and leave the store without paying for them. Miss McGarry followed her into the parking lot and called police, who made the arrest.

The suspect: Hedy Lamarr, 51, once billed as the most beautiful woman in the world. Miss Lamarr, recently divorced for the sixth time, was to start work this week in her first big film role in 15 years, as the title-mother in "Picture Mommy Dead."

She has another date this week, in court Wednesday, on a shoplifting charge that could mean six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Said Miss Lamarr to newsmen: "It must have been a misunderstanding. I'm willing to pay for these things. Other stores let me do it. I'm willing to forget it." When arrested, she had $14,000 in checks in her purse.

Said her son: "The last 10 years have been a strain on my mother, both financially and, especially, emotionally."

TRAGEDY struck downtown Boston Friday night when explosions and fires wrecked two hotels, killing at least nine and injuring dozens. The search for additional bodies went on Saturday.

Cause of the explosions was not immediately determined, but witnesses said flames licked from sewer openings and manholes for more than an hour after the Plymouth and Paramount hotels were shattered.

AUDITOR OPTIMISTIC ON WILMINGTON PROJECT

L.B.'s Oil Gain Reported at $502 Million

By GEORGE WEEKS

Entering a new period of rapid offshore production, the city of Long Beach already has gained more than $500 million from oil, gas and related sources.

The figure—$502,442,327.09—was disclosed in an annual report just issued by City Auditor Murray T. Courson. It covers both tideland and upland projects from the start of production.

Because most of the revenue came from the tidelands held in trust, the state has shared in the gross city profits to the extent of $220,388,025.44.

* * * *

COINCIDENTAL WITH COURSON'S summary, the City Department of Oil Properties issued a less formal report, highly optimistic in tone, with emphasis on the start of production in the East Wilmington extension of the offshore field and on the vast expansion of the water injection program for subsidence protection.

The most spectacular achievement of the year, said Leonard W. Brock, director of the department, was the opening of what is known as the Long Beach Unit.

This comprises the previously-undeveloped east section of the Wilmington Field—some 6,500 acres of Long Beach tidelands and adjacent uplands mostly privately owned, encompassed in one agreement for joint development.

* * * *

ALTHOUGH THE REPORT does not cover first stages of actual development in the unit, Brock predicted that more than $1 billion will be deposited in the tidelands oil revenue fund during the next 35 years from Tract 1, the tidelands. This is trust money to be divided with the state.

In addition the city's projected revenue from its own share of the uplands is $8.9 million, to be used for general bond redemption and interest.

Alluding to the competitive bidding for the development contract, Brock commented:

"To our knowledge, Tract 1 (tidelands) of the unit produced the highest oil bid ever received on a public trust property, with a weighted average net profit to the city and state of 96.253%!"

Sections of the Brock report dealing with subsidence and water injection noted that the level of injection has increased from 27,986 barrels in 1953 to 193,317,467 barrels in fiscal 1965.

At the end of the year 229 wells were injecting at a rate well in excess of 500,000 barrels daily. Two new plants completed last year have a combined capacity of 179,000 barrels daily.

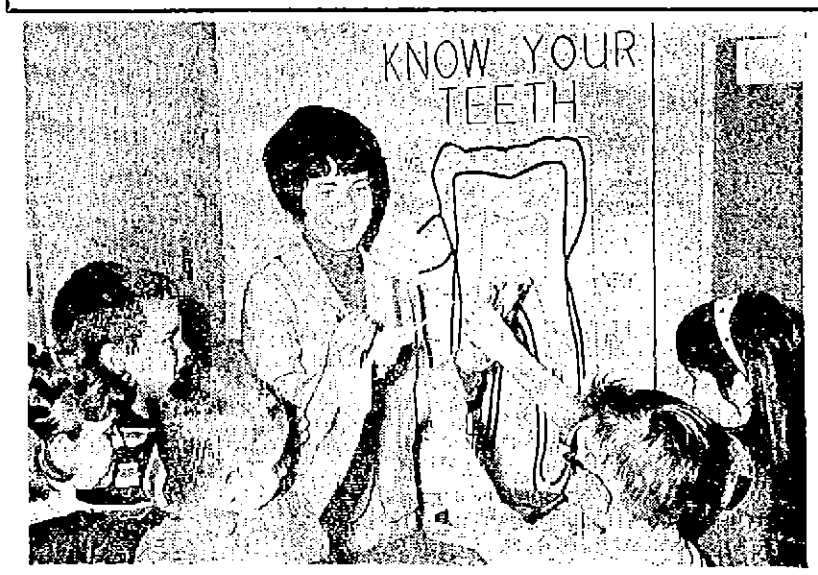
* * * *

"AFTER THE NECESSARY water injection plants are constructed for the newly-opened Long Beach Unit, the city's total water injection capacity will be approximately 2 million barrels per day—largest in the world," the Oil Department report added.

The city and state in fiscal 1965 spent 1,336,000 to repair or replace surface terrain and facilities affected by subsidence, bringing the total outlay from the tideland oil income for this purpose to $53,777,000.

The effects of the injection program in reducing land sinkage were noted almost immediately, Brock said, and maximum subsidence control has been observed in those areas with large volumes of injection.

In addition, the underground repressuring resulting from water injection has paid off in greater oil recovery.



Wilmington Field is producing about 100,000 barrels of oil daily, of which at least 62% is attributable to repressurization by water injection. According to engineering estimates, ultimate recovery will be at least doubled, Brock said.

The city's oil production increased last fiscal year by 2,759,822 barrels to 21,236,778 barrels. However, net income was down from the previous year by $1,763,955.12 to $22,533,974.16.

* * * *

BOTH COURSON AND BROCK explained that the apparent discrepancy came about from increased operating expenses by Long Beach Oil Development Co. in launching production from Parcel L in the harbor district.

The only category of oil production showing a decrease, Courson pointed out, comes from upland wells outside the harbor district. In these areas there is no water injection or repressurization. Last year's receipts from this source were $501,971.80, compared with $606,652.10 in the previous year.

Thousands of Schoolchildren to Be Instructed in Dental Hygiene in Week of February 6 to 12

By BEN ZINSER
Medical Science Editor

How's your DIQ?

Your dental intelligence, that is.

In an adjacent column you can test your knowledge about topics pertaining to the teeth and gums.

Meanwhile, thousands of Southland schoolchildren are scheduled to receive special instruction in oral hygiene during Children's Dental Health Week (Feb. 6-12).

Students from the dental assistants course at Long Beach City College Business and Technology campus will give demonstrations in proper toothbrushing to second graders, to pupils in certain special training classes in the Long Beach Unified School District and to fourth graders in five selected schools.

* * * *

MORE THAN 6,000 toothbrushes are being provided for the instruction by Procter & Gamble and the Women's Auxiliary to the Harbor Dental Society.

Classroom radio programs dealing with dental health will be broadcast.

Posters calling attention to dental health are being distributed to schools, dental offices, pharmacies and libraries.

Actually, dental-hygiene education is a year-round program in Long Beach. It is part of the curriculum in local schools.

Educational materials are also sent to parochial schools.

A pre-school dental clinic is held twice monthly in Long Beach Health Department under the auspices of volunteer dentists and members of the Women's Auxiliary to the Harbor Dental Society. About 40 youngsters visit the clinic each month.

An Explorer Scout program is conducted in the high schools to create interest in dentistry as a career.

Here's Quiz on Dental Health

Test your dental knowledge. The correct answers follow the questions, but don't look until you've finished. Here goes:

1. Diet is the most important factor in keeping teeth health.
True ——. False ——.
2. Pregnancy increases tooth decay.
True ——. False ——.
3. Fluoride prevents tooth decay.
True ——. False ——.
4. Drinking lots of milk strengthens teeth.
True ——. False ——.
5. Mouthwashes keep the mouth free of bacteria.
True ——. False ——.
6. Gum disease can be cured.
True ——. False ——.
7. The best way to prevent tooth decay is by brushing your teeth after every meal or snack, seeing your dentist regularly and cutting down on sweets.
True ——. False ——.

HERE ARE THE ANSWERS:

1. False. Diet is important in preventing tooth decay in only a negative way—cutting down on sweet foods, for example. Good dental care, at home and by the dentist, is the most effective way to prevent decay.

2. False. Pregnancy does not increase decay, but often the eating habits accompanying pregnancy increase it. For example, those "tastes for sweet foods might cause more decay than usual.

3. True. Fluoride in the public water supply, at the recommended level of one part of fluoride per million parts of water, reduces the rate of decay by as much as 65%. And it costs about 10 cents per year per person.

4. False. Milk is the best dietary source of calcium, which is needed to build both teeth and bones. Once the teeth erupt, drinking milk has nothing to do with preventing decay.

5. False. Mouthwashes will temporarily reduce the number of bacteria, but they will return in a few hours. In any case, bad breath may be a symptom of several serious diseases. Therefore, the use of a mouthwash instead of seeking a medical or dental checkup may be dangerous.

6. True. Gum disease can be cured, if it is treated in time. By keeping your teeth clean of calculus, or tartar, through regular home brushing and regular cleaning by the dentist, you can help to prevent gum disease.

7. True. And always remember that such regular care is the best method of preventing dental disease. With fluoridation added to regular dental care, you can truly enjoy a lifetime of excellent dental health.

THE PROPER TECHNIQUE for teeth-brushing is demonstrated for Marla Jones (the patient) by Joe Mullarkey (the dentist) and Lori Krzinowek (dental assistant) in Kindergarten Dental Technique program.

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

Our man Don Ohl came up behind one of those high, narrow postal trucks which bore a sign "Driving Test in Progress." When he got alongside he took a double take at a comely young woman at the wheel, a male instructor at her side.

Four girls are now taking the tests preparatory to taking the wheel on a permanent basis. Four other feminine drivers are already at work and P. M. Dave Selcer gives them an A-1 rating. They not only drive well but look good.

STORIES like that one about the policewoman who was attacked by a prisoner while juvenile hall staffers looked on indifferently can give a false impression that "unconcern" is just about universal.

For a contrast, take the case of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holm.

The Holms read a report in our paper about Mrs. Darlene Strows, whose two little girls were killed when a dump truck crushed their car. Mrs. Strows is badly injured.

Though they don't know the victim personally, the Holms wanted to help her through the devastating financial straits they're sure she faces. They sent this desk $25 asking that it be forwarded to Mrs. Strows' family. A check of the situation revealed that others are also busy in behalf of the accident victim.

Paul Lussman, at Paul's Dairy, 6170 Paramount Blvd., L.B., has agreed to act as depository agent for the neighborhood and church collection. I sent the Holms' check along to him, and hereby thank them for providing me with a faith-bolstering item.

THERE'S a sequel to the item here a while back about the big gopher kill at Camp Suanga, the Camp Fire Girls day camp on 67th St. in North L.B.

At the annual Camp Fire dinner the other eve gold-plated gopher traps were presented to Clyde Davis, the camp caretaker, and Ruth Wuermager, a volunteer who has helped him trap 40 or so of the little beasties.

AND FROM several sources has come a suggestion as a postscript to Atty. Geo. Johnson's testy reply to the artists who are seeking contributions for a steel tower in L.A. protesting the war in Viet Nam.

Money that might be spent on such a tower, these observers note, might better be handed over to the USO to give comfort and pleasure to our men fighting in the rice paddies of Southest Asia.

That's another good idea.

AFTER one of his service club talks, somebody asked Jack Russell, the top man in the THUMS oil project in our harbor, what would happen if one of the pipes carrying crude from the wells to Pier J tanks should break.

"I'd go back to Texas," said Russell.

DRIFTWOOD — Gayle Risley, a waitress at the Captain's Inn, has a big place in her heart for an anonymous guest at the Marina restaurant. She gave this fellow the wrong dinner check. He paid, started for his car counting his change, suddenly turned around and handed Gayle $12 still due on his own check. "Nothing like it in 22 years as a waitress," said Gayle . . . Anybody still own a 1929 Victor electric radio or something that will pass for one? Burnett School P-TA is looking for one to use in a Feb. 8 program called "Looking Back." The P-TA gave the school a Victor radio in '29 and wants to reenact the incident. Contact: Mrs. Larry Davis, 635 E. Burnett.

"Books, Children and Librarians" will be the topic at the meeting of the Long Beach School Librarians' Association at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Stanford Junior High School auditorium.

Mrs. Dorothy McKenzie, assistant professor of children's literature at Los Angeles State College will be the speaker.

Mrs. McKenzie teaches Adolescent and Young Adult Literature at UCLA and was founder and first president of the Southern California Council of Children's and Young People's Literature. Carrier Gets Ready for $10-Million Job

By BUCK LANIER
Naval Affairs Editor

SAN DIEGO—The attack carrier Bon Homme Richard, just home from her second duty tour in Viet Nam waters on Jan. 13, starts another trip Monday morning.

It will be to the Long Beach Naval Shipyard for a vast overhaul and conversion.

Bonnie Dick's arrival will open a new era for the Navy's youngest yard. It will be the biggest job ($10 million-plus) the yard yet has handled and the huge modernized Essex-class ship will be the largest (nearly 1,000 feet long), and first attack carrier in the yard.

Capt. Gerald F. Colleran said Saturday that he would move his family to Long Beach for the six-month yard period and many of the 3,000 officers and men would do the same.

Bonnie Dick will blow out her aviation-fuel tanks at sea Monday night and at 10 a.m. Tuesday will drop anchor off the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Depot to offload her ammunition and bombs. This will take about six hours.

Then she will go into the shipyard where an eventual work force of 900 will be swarming all through her—from keel to radar antennae.

County Employes Install Officers

Two Long Beach-area residents were among officers installed Saturday night at the annual Los Angeles County Employe Association Installation Ball.

Roy J. Kundtz of Whittier was installed first vice president and Peter J. Roelofs, 4719 Broadway, Long Beach, second vice president. Other officers are Richard E. Packtman, president, and Robert K. Webber, secretary-treasurer.

"AFTER THE NECESSARY water injection plants are constructed for the newly-opened Long Beach Unit, the city's total water injection capacity will be approximately 2 million barrels per day—largest in the world," the Oil Department report added.

The city and state in fiscal 1965 spent 1,336,000 to repair or replace surface terrain and facilities affected by subsidence, bringing the total outlay from the tideland oil income for this purpose to $53,777,000.

The effects of the injection program in reducing land sinkage were noted almost immediately, Brock said, and maximum subsidence control has been observed in those areas with large volumes of injection.

In addition, the underground repressuring resulting from water injection has paid off in greater oil recovery.

Wilmington Field is producing about 100,000 barrels of oil daily, of which at least 62% is attributable to repressurization by water injection. According to engineering estimates, ultimate recovery will be at least doubled, Brock said.

The city's oil production increased last fiscal year by 2,759,822 barrels to 21,236,778 barrels. However, net income was down from the previous year by $1,763,955.12 to $22,533,974.16.

* * * *

BOTH COURSON AND BROCK explained that the apparent discrepancy came about from increased operating expenses by Long Beach Oil Development Co. in launching production from Parcel L in the harbor district.

The only category of oil production showing a decrease, Courson pointed out, comes from upland wells outside the harbor district. In these areas there is no water injection or repressurization. Last year's receipts from this source were $501,971.80, compared with $606,652.10 in the previous year.

Thousands of Schoolchildren to Be Instructed in Dental Hygiene in Week of February 6 to 12

By BEN ZINSER
Medical Science Editor

How's your DIQ?

Your dental intelligence, that is.

In an adjacent column you can test your knowledge about topics pertaining to the teeth and gums.

Meanwhile, thousands of Southland schoolchildren are scheduled to receive special instruction in oral hygiene during Children's Dental Health Week (Feb. 6-12).

Students from the dental assistants course at Long Beach City College Business and Technology campus will give demonstrations in proper toothbrushing to second graders, to pupils in certain special training classes in the Long Beach Unified School District and to fourth graders in five selected schools.

* * * *

MORE THAN 6,000 toothbrushes are being provided for the instruction by Procter & Gamble and the Women's Auxiliary to the Harbor Dental Society.

Classroom radio programs dealing with dental health will be broadcast.

Posters calling attention to dental health are being distributed to schools, dental offices, pharmacies and libraries.

Actually, dental-hygiene education is a year-round program in Long Beach. It is part of the curriculum in local schools.

Educational materials are also sent to parochial schools.

A pre-school dental clinic is held twice monthly in Long Beach Health Department under the auspices of volunteer dentists and members of the Women's Auxiliary to the Harbor Dental Society. About 40 youngsters visit the clinic each month.

An Explorer Scout program is conducted in the high schools to create interest in dentistry as a career.

Here's Quiz on Dental Health

Test your dental knowledge. The correct answers follow the questions, but don't look until you've finished. Here goes:

1. Diet is the most important factor in keeping teeth health.
True ———. False ———.
2. Pregnancy increases tooth decay.
True ———. False ———.
3. Fluoride prevents tooth decay.
True ———. False ———.
4. Drinking lots of milk strengthens teeth.
True ———. False ———.
5. Mouthwashes keep the mouth free of bacteria.
True ———. False ———.
6. Gum disease can be cured.
True ———. False ———.
7. The best way to prevent tooth decay is by brushing your teeth after every meal or snack, seeing your dentist regularly and cutting down on sweets.
True ———. False ———.

HERE ARE THE ANSWERS:

1. False. Diet is important in preventing tooth decay in only a negative way—cutting down on sweet foods, for example. Good dental care, at home and by the dentist, is the most effective way to prevent decay.

2. False. Pregnancy does not increase decay, but often the eating habits accompanying pregnancy increase it. For example, those "tastes for sweet foods might cause more decay than usual.

3. True. Fluoride in the public water supply, at the recommended level of one part of fluoride per million parts of water, reduces the rate of decay by as much as 65%. And it costs about 10 cents per year per person.

4. False. Milk is the best dietary source of calcium, which is needed to build both teeth and bones. Once the teeth erupt, drinking milk has nothing to do with preventing decay.

5. False. Mouthwashes will temporarily reduce the number of bacteria, but they will return in a few hours. In any case, bad breath may be a symptom of several serious diseases. Therefore, the use of a mouthwash instead of seeking a medical or dental checkup may be dangerous.

6. True. Gum disease can be cured, if it is treated in time. By keeping your teeth clean of calculus, or tartar, through regular home brushing and regular cleaning by the dentist, you can help to prevent gum disease.

7. True. And always remember that such regular care is the best method of preventing dental disease. With fluoridation added to regular dental care, you can truly enjoy a lifetime of excellent dental health.

Princeton, Carrier, Honored

The Merit Award for Excellence has been given one of Long Beach's amphibious assault carriers, the USS Princeton.

Presentation is only to ships that complete successfully amphibious refresher training with an overall "excellent" marking.

Princeton's main mission is dispatching combat Marines via helicopters.

In a congratulatory letter to Princeton's commanding officer, Capt. Thomas J. Gallagher Jr., Pacific Amphibious Forces Commander Vice Adm. Bernard M. Roeder said, in part:

" . . . This award shows outstanding training supervision by officers and petty officers and fully demonstrates the amphibious capabilities of the ship . . . "

Our man Don Ohl came up behind one of those high, narrow postal trucks which bore a sign "Driving Test in Progress." When he got alongside he took a double take at a comely young woman at the wheel, a male instructor at her side.

Four girls are now taking the tests preparatory to taking the wheel on a permanent basis. Four other feminine drivers are already at work and P. M. Dave Selcer gives them an A-1 rating. They not only drive well but look good.

STORIES like that one about the policewoman who was attacked by a prisoner while juvenile hall staffers looked on indifferently can give a false impression that "unconcern" is just about universal.

For a contrast, take the case of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holm.

The Holms read a report in our paper about Mrs. Darlene Strows, whose two little girls were killed when a dump truck crushed their car. Mrs. Strows is badly injured.

Though they don't know the victim personally, the Holms wanted to help her through the devastating financial straits they're sure she faces. They sent this desk $25 asking that it be forwarded to Mrs. Strows' family. A check of the situation revealed that others are also busy in behalf of the accident victim.

Paul Lussman, at Paul's Dairy, 6170 Paramount Blvd., L.B., has agreed to act as depository agent for the neighborhood and church collection. I sent the Holms' check along to him, and hereby thank them for providing me with a faith-bolstering item.

THERE'S a sequel to the item here a while back about the big gopher kill at Camp Suanga, the Camp Fire Girls day camp on 67th St. in North L.B.

At the annual Camp Fire dinner the other eve gold-plated gopher traps were presented to Clyde Davis, the camp caretaker, and Ruth Wuermager, a volunteer who has helped him trap 40 or so of the little beasties.

AND FROM several sources has come a suggestion as a postscript to Atty. Geo. Johnson's testy reply to the artists who are seeking contributions for a steel tower in L.A. protesting the war in Viet Nam.

Money that might be spent on such a tower, these observers note, might better be handed over to the USO to give comfort and pleasure to our men fighting in the rice paddies of Southest Asia.

That's another good idea.

AFTER one of his service club talks, somebody asked Jack Russell, the top man in the THUMS oil project in our harbor, what would happen if one of the pipes carrying crude from the wells to Pier J tanks should break.

"I'd go back to Texas," said Russell.

SIX-MONTH OVERHAUL

Carrier Gets Ready for $10-Million Job

By BUCK LANIER
Naval Affairs Editor

SAN DIEGO—The attack carrier Bon Homme Richard, just home from her second duty tour in Viet Nam waters on Jan. 13, starts another trip Monday morning.

It will be to the Long Beach Naval Shipyard for a vast overhaul and conversion.

Bonnie Dick's arrival will open a new era for the Navy's youngest yard. It will be the biggest job ($10 million-plus) the yard yet has handled and the huge modernized Essex-class ship will be the largest (nearly 1,000 feet long), and first attack carrier in the yard.

Capt. Gerald F. Colleran said Saturday that he would move his family to Long Beach for the six-month yard period and many of the 3,000 officers and men would do the same.

Bonnie Dick will blow out her aviation-fuel tanks at sea Monday night and at 10 a.m. Tuesday will drop anchor off the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Depot to offload her ammunition and bombs. This will take about six hours.

Then she will go into the shipyard where an eventual work force of 900 will be swarming all through her—from keel to radar antennae.

County Employes Install Officers

Two Long Beach-area residents were among officers installed Saturday night at the annual Los Angeles County Employe Association Installation Ball.

Roy J. Kundtz of Whittier was installed first vice president and Peter J. Roelofs, 4719 Broadway, Long Beach, second vice president. Other officers are Richard E. Packtman, president, and Robert K. Webber, secretary-treasurer.

THE PROPER TECHNIQUE for teeth-brushing is demonstrated for Marla Jones (the patient) by Joe Mullarkey (the dentist) and Lori Krzinowck (dental assistant) in Kindergarten Dental Technique program.

Five Causes of Warfare

People have different answers according to their philosophic beliefs. They can become quite warlike in debating their answers.

Raoul Naroll, professor of anthropology at Northwestern University, gives five motives for war.

They are revenge, defense, plunder, prestige and political control. When all five motives are present, war becomes extremely likely.

He bases his views on a research project supported by the U.S. Navy to discover why primitive men go to war. The study was based on the behavior of 48 societies, all but one of which are illiterate.

Those who say that arms races cause wars or that massive preparations act as deterrents can find little support in the study. There is more preparation among those who expect to fight, but this may be a result rather than a cause.

ONE IDEA doesn't stand up at all. That is cultural exchange, the belief that people fear strangers and therefore fight with them. The primitives often have considerable cultural exchange, including carrying off the wives of the defeated enemy. The professor wryly remarks, ". . . it is quite possible that the better we get to know our enemies the more thoroughly we will dislike them."

Can the experiences of savages mean anything in civilization? Well, revenge, defense, plunder, prestige and political control were vigorously emphasized by the Nazi Third Reich.

Protestants Undefined

"Failing a renewal of authentic evangelical religion we may be nearer the end of the Protestant era than we have thought—but by default and not by transfiguration," said Dr. Albert Outler, professor of theology at Southern Methodist University. Dr. Outler calls for a "charter of change" comparable to that of the Vatican Council.

The first step in effective change would be a definition of Protestantism.

The average American who is not Catholic or Jewish calls himself a Protestant. Sometimes he would be more accurate if he called himself an unbeliever or a pagan. But the word has a handy catch-all quality.

Protestant tells nothing about a person who believes and practices religion. There are hundreds of denominations. Their practices range from snake worship to highly intellectual wisdom. And each denomination insists that it possesses at least some superiority over the others.

NOR DOES IT end there. The philosophical conflicts within many of the churches seem almost beyond resolution. A fundamentalist, for example, has a quite different pattern of belief from a neo-orthodox. Culturally, traditionally and intellectually the schisms of Protestantism are wide and deep.

Can unity be established in such diversity? Many churchmen think so and are working with some success toward that goal. They would be the first to admit that the task is not an easy one.

'Unknown' Is Optimistic Candidate

I, P-T Political Editor

THE POLLS are rolling but the chips aren't down yet, in the view of William Penn Patrick, the wealthy Tiburon (Marin County) Republican candidate for governor whom "nobody every heard of."

Patrick is a new millionaire and a new Republican. He says he's worth almost $8 million now as the result of his success in manufacturing Holiday Magic cosmetics at San Rafael, an enterprise employing about 10,000 persons. He says he has already invested almost $250,000 of his own money in his campaign and is willing to go to about $1.5 million. He has cash and pledges of about $300,000 from others.

The 35-year-old candidate barely scores on statewide polls. But he says the battle hasn't really been joined—that Governor Brown's machine hasn't started rolling. When it does, says Patrick, he's confident current figures which show actor Ronald Reagan or former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher defeating Brown will reverse and show that neither can beat him.

"THOU SHALT NOT label," is a 12th Commandment Patrick offers as a complement to State GOP Chairman Dr. Gaylor Parkinson's 11th which enjoins against speaking ill of another Republican.

Patrick says he goes along with Parkinson's idea except if it interferes with legitimate discussion of electability factors of the various Republican entries.

Thus, while he denies he is labeling, he strikes at Reagan as a far right wing type whose speeches are written for him by the John Birch Society and who can't get the Republican votes he needs from his narrow-base approach. Reagan has already been so labeled, says Patrick, and washes his hands of the offense himself.

Christopher has a "cold image" and a record of losses, says Patrick, referring to his unsuccessful races for U.S. Senate and for lieutenant governor. "I think his leadership has been mediocre." When some speak of 25 years' experience, Patrick charges, it's really been one year repeated 25 times.

A DRAMATIC, exciting candidate is what the GOP needs, he says, and is confident Californians will decide he's that man before the June 7 primary comes. The spadework has started in the form of 500 big and expensive billboards, statewide. Some 250 smaller ones are up or scheduled. Radio programs are under way now, many of them in Spanish with the assistance of his Mexican - American wife, the former Marie Olivo. A few days ago he taped an hour of TV material to be used within a month.

Patrick registered Republican in 1962. And that makes it unanimous. Both Reagan and Christopher are former Democrats. He has not worked in political party activities, and says that's an advantage in its sheer detachment from the idea that the party "owns" the candidate.

PATRICK'S preparation has been: "I've worked years to accumulate money for political action. You can't do it without money—not without having to sell off some of yourself."

While he doesn't shrink from headliners Reagan and Christopher, his main objective is Brown. He said at lunch Thursday that he or a representative of his will file legal action charging that Brown or "his corps of henchmen" are engaged in fraud. This has to do with Brown's solicitation of campaign funds from state appointees.

Worse, says Patrick, a Brown agent solicited $1,500 from Patrick's business as a campaign item and when Patrick refused, within a week there was a news release "smearing me and my company."

THE SMEAR which Patrick alleges was in the form of a complaint from the attorney general's office that the cosmetics firm was using misleading advertising in using the word "organic" to describe product qualities. The action was dismissed without prejudice, Patrick said, upon agreement to delete the word from future ads.

Patrick came from a poverty-stricken, 10-child North Carilonia family, worked his way up through a college degree and taught junior high school subjects for three years in West Sacramento before launching his cosmetics business.

Now Patrick would take a "state chamber of commerce" approach to business, cooperate for loans to small businessmen in areas like Watts, end procrastination in smog and rapid transit by stopping concentration on freeways and do something about Brown's appointment of "some of the worst people in history" to state judgeships.

LBJ Far From Alone in Making Bomb Decision

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The picture of President Johnson as the loneliest man in the world battling out within his own skull the agonizing decision about resuming the bombing of North Viet Nam has a certain irony about it which might under other circumstances be amusing.

If ever a man had an oversupply of help in reaching a decision, it is President Johnson in reaching this one—which may have been disclosed by the time this sees print.

Every top official of his government, every member of the House, every member of the Senate, and numberless top military officials active and retired, plus almost everyone with access to paper and a typewriter, is anxious to tell him what to do.

It is also possible that the seeming magnitude of the decision exceeds its true proportions. This is, after all, a debate not about continuing the war, but whether to take up again one part of the operation.

A third comment which might be made is that quite possibly, there is no right decision to be made, whether by the President in solitude or by the President at the center of an army of advisers.

THE FUNDAMENTAL question is not whether the resumption will have a helpful or harmful effect on the pursuit of a main purpose, the defeat or discouragement of an aggressor. It is how to deal with a "war of national liberation" conducted according to the principles of Asiatic communism. Whether the bombing begins again or not, that question will still remain to be answered.

No matter how great the volume of data the President may collect as the raw material for his decision, he is still weighing two unknowns, the long-range intention of the adversary, and the effect of bombing (or of not bombing) upon that intention.

It is quite possible that the adversary intends to keep up what he is doing into the indefinite future, no matter how many bombs fall upon him. It is quite possible, on the other hand, that he might write the present operation off as a good try that didn't work, and act to leave himself free to try something else.

ON ALMOST ANY ONE of the factors being weighed by President Johnson as he proceeded toward decision, it was possible to find two weighty arguments, one on each side.

Does bombing cement the relationship between the North Vietnamese regime and its people? Some say that is always the result of bombing. Others say this result occurs only when the people are spontaneously in sympathy with the regime and its undertaking.

Some say the actual military benefits to United States operations from the bombing are slight, and that even massive air power does not seriously disturb guerrillas. Others say the destruction of communications and supplies, the hampering of movement, the home delivery of the impact of war, all tend to slow the adversary down, to say the least.

Some say that if the bombing is not resumed, the spirit of the South Vietnamese will suffer. Others say that the ground build-up provides all the evidence necessary of the durability of the United States commitment.

Some say that if the pause continues there is still a chance the North will confer about a settlement. Others say they will confer or not confer according to their own judgment.

Some say that to slacken the war would raise fears among other countries about the credibility of the United States commitment. Others say that the bombing is losing us friends all around the world. Some say that the extension of the scope of bombing which might be expected if it is resumed would bring China into the war. Others say the North Vietnamese don't want China in the war.

The lack of firm answers might in itself be reason enough for not acting. The idea is pretty well established in this country, at least, that there is an aggression in Viet Nam and that it ought to be resisted. That can be done without argument. To reach beyond resistance into attacks on the northern homeland from the air would seriously impair the kind of consensus Mr. Johnson likes, in conducting a war as well as in anything else.

Thoughts Crowd Back on This, the Birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt

JANUARY 30 is the birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Ahead of us is the anniversary of that soft April day when death came for him in the Little White House at Warm Springs.

That day had started well. A rather large and ample maid, with whom he liked to talk, had asked him, after the breakfast tray was brought, what he thought about reincarnation. The subject, said the President, interested him. They both agreed to that. He then asked her what incarnation she would choose if it were possible to come back to earth after death. She meditated a moment and said:

"I've thought about it. And I think I'd like to come back as a canary."

F.D.R. took one look at her broadness and burst out laughing.

"Some canary!" he said. And they both laughed.

The final day started well enough.

Franklin D. Roosevelt comes back to us often, in our memories, in books, plays and articles. We think of him especially in election years as we see and hear the candidates of our time and measure them, in our minds, against the memory of him and his record.

HE KNEW, as well as any of those who have become established by historians as strong presidents, how to make the people see and understand the needs of their time.

The issues were never blurred when he was President. There was never any difficulty of communication. He knew the great importance of leadership's communicating with the people.

This is why, under strong presidents, there seems always so much controversy. The fact is there is a lot of it precisely because the people have understood the issues and have taken sides.

Strong presidents always keep a public dialogue going. There is never apathy, or quiet acceptance of the status quo. It is an interesting thing to contemplate, but the democratic processes of dialogue, debate and participation in issues function better under strong presidents than the conservatives. And this is an unusual thing when one thinks about it.

ONE DAY in the Little White House I watched Franklyn D. Roosevelt use his strong arms to swing himself from a chair to a small short-back seat on wheels, as a conference ended, and spin himself out of the room. He paused at the door, grinned at us, waved his cigarette holder, and vanished with a thrust of his arms.

I recall thinking at the time, with the impact of his complete leg paralysis still heavy upon me, how great are the mind, will, personality and dynamics in a man and how unimportant, relatively, the physical.

The image of outstanding leaders traditionally is one of size. Once the image was that of kings and thrones, elevated to lift them above the common run of people, with crowns on their heads to give them a man-made halo of implied divinity and power. Even now many persons think of size as impressive.

But with F.D.R. it was not muscle or size—it was his inner strength, that mysterious ability to be able to communicate and dramatize issues and events. It was this quality, too, which enabled him to defeat polio, and though completely paralyzed from the waist down, to give people the illusion of being whole.

He was tested severely. He was president during an enormous world depression in which he himself, and, more important, the government, were symbols of direct personal interest in the welfare of the citizens. He was president during the Second World War. And here again, he, as much as Winston Churchill, became a symbol of liberty and freedom to millions about the world.

One thinks on these things each January.

Churches and Taxation

EDITOR:

In 1875, President Ulyssess Grant proposed a constitutional amendment pertaining to the taxation of church property. In a message to Congress, President Grant predicted "great trouble in our land before the close of the 19th century" because of expanding church wealth.

I feel this predicted trouble is now at hand. Our local, state and federal governments are making demands on us, the taxpayers, and are on a constant lookout for additional revenues. . . .

I wonder if it would be advisable for them to look with jaundiced eyes on a possible valid source of untapped revenue.

Statistics prove that the churches of our country now own between $25-35 billions of tax exempt land and buildings. . . .

I have no disagreement for tax exemption on the house of worship and its educational building, however exemption should not be granted to church operated businesses. . . .

Sardine 'Supposing'

EDITOR:

There was an item that Jack O. Baldwin failed to add in his article and J. D. Frautschy failed to mention in his Oceanographic supposing.

The sardine disappeared when fisheries started taking some 750 thousand ton of sardines a year, I understand, and destroyed the spawning schools in one of the low spawning years.

Mr. Frautschy surely must know if the sardines left 500 years ago in a body when they came back in a body or did they come back slowly as they will now with a moratorium on them.

It always annoys me to hear a supposedly accredited authority give out apparently limited information that supports his supposing.

The Long Beach City Council's benevolence towards the taxpaying citizens of this city knows no bounds.

Their latest consideration for "we the people" was a lil' ol' 2c tax on each pack of cigarettes. This altruistic piece of business was taken care of just before their junket to Japan —at the taxpayers' expense of course.

First, we had a 5c property tax to help support the Big Blue Buses, which were going to relieve the traffic and parking problem. (We were told that the monies from the 5c tax weren't to be used unless needed, but it seems said monies were very much needed at the moment they were available.)

The cigarette tax? Oh, that is to help pay for parking lots—about $220,000 worth of help for the first one. The $750,000 a year, which will be extracted from "fag puffers" will be used to tear down more buildings to make room to park more cars.

The last parking place that the "city fathers" got into financially is still in the hole—in more ways than one. . . .

Noisy Boats Safer?

EDITOR:

Concerning the article in the January 24 Press-Telegram, "City Aims Curb at Boat Noise."

If they force boat owners to muffle their engines, then the existing law of the use of proper whistle signals when overtaking or meeting another vessel should be enforced. There are also signals to be used upon entering a main channel or rounding a blind bend such as around the Pier J jetty.

It is now possible to hear a fast boat approaching and act accordingly should he be in our danger area.

A muffled boat could sneak up before a slower boat could react to prevent the danger of collision. So—let's have the whistle signals, and safety. A boat owner's wife.

Dr. Outler calls for a "charter of change" comparable to that of the Vatican Council.

The first step in effective change would be a definition of Protestantism.

The average American who is not Catholic or Jewish calls himself a Protestant. Sometimes he would be more accurate if he called himself an unbeliever or a pagan. But the word has a handy catch-all quality.

Protestant tells nothing about a person who believes and practices religion. There are hundreds of denominations. Their practices range from snake worship to highly intellectual wisdom. And each denomination insists that it possesses at least some superiority over the others.

NOR DOES IT end there. The philosophical conflicts within many of the churches seem almost beyond resolution. A fundamentalist, for example, has a quite different pattern of belief from a neo-orthodox. Culturally, traditionally and intellectually the schisms of Protestantism are wide and deep.

Can unity be established in such diversity? Many churchmen think so and are working with some success toward that goal. They would be the first to admit that the task is not an easy one.

Churches and Taxation

EDITOR:

In 1875, President Ulysses Grant proposed a constitutional amendment pertaining to the taxation of church property. In a message to Congress, President Grant predicted "great trouble in our land before the close of the 19th century" because of expanding church wealth.

I feel this predicted trouble is now at hand. Our local, state and federal governments are making demands on us, the taxpayers, and are on a constant lookout for additional revenues. . . .

I wonder if it would be advisable for them to look with jaundiced eyes on a possible valid source of untapped revenue.

Statistics prove that the churches of our country now own between $25-35 billions of tax exempt land and buildings. . . .

I have no disagreement for tax exemption on the house of worship and its educational building, however exemption should not be granted to church operated businesses. . . .

Sardine 'Supposing'

EDITOR:

There was an item that Jack O. Baldwin failed to add in his article and J. D. Frautschy failed to mention in his Oceanographic supposing.

The sardine disappeared when fisheries started taking some 750 thousand ton of sardines a year, I understand, and destroyed the spawning schools in one of the low spawning years.

Mr. Frautschy surely must know if the sardines left 500 years ago in a body when they came back in a body or did they come back slowly as they will now with a moratorium on them.

It always annoys me to hear a supposedly accredited authority give out apparently limited information that supports his supposing.

EDITOR:

The Long Beach City Council's benevolence towards the taxpaying citizens of this city knows no bounds.

Their latest consideration for "we the people" was a lil' ol' 2c tax on each pack of cigarettes. This altruistic piece of business was taken care of just before their junket to Japan —at the taxpayers' expense of course.

First, we had a 5c property tax to help support the Big Blue Buses, which were going to relieve the traffic and parking problem. (We were told that the monies from the 5c tax weren't to be used unless needed, but it seems said monies were very much needed at the moment they were available.)

The cigarette tax? Oh, that is to help pay for parking lots—about $220,000 worth of help for the first one. The $750,000 a year, which will be extracted from "fag puffers" will be used to tear down more buildings to make room to park more cars.

The last parking place that the "city fathers" got into financially is still in the hole—in more ways than one. . . .

Noisy Boats Safer?

EDITOR:

Concerning the article in the January 24 Press-Telegram, "City Aims Curb at Boat Noise."

If they force boat owners to muffle their engines, then the existing law of the use of proper whistle signals when overtaking or meeting another vessel should be enforced. There are also signals to be used upon entering a main channel or rounding a blind bend such as around the Pier J jetty.

It is now possible to hear a fast boat approaching and act accordingly should he be in our danger area.

A muffled boat could sneak up before a slower boat could react to prevent the danger of collision. So—let's have the whistle signals, and safety. A boat owner's wife.

LBJ Far From Alone in Making Bomb Decision

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The picture of President Johnson as the loneliest man in the world battling out within his own skull the agonizing decision about resuming the bombing of North Viet Nam has a certain irony about it which might under other circumstances be amusing.

If ever a man had an oversupply of help in reaching a decision, it is President Johnson in reaching this one—which may have been disclosed by the time this sees print.

Every top official of his government, every member of the House, every member of the Senate, and numberless top military officials active and retired, plus almost everyone with access to paper and a typewriter, is anxious to tell him what to do.

It is also possible that the seeming magnitude of the decision exceeds its true proportions. This is, after all, a debate not about continuing the war, but whether to take up again one part of the operation.

A third comment which might be made is that quite possibly, there is no right decision to be made, whether by the President in solitude or by the President at the center of an army of advisers.

THE FUNDAMENTAL question is not whether the resumption will have a helpful or harmful effect on the pursuit of a main purpose, the defeat or discouragement of an aggressor. It is how to deal with a "war of national liberation" conducted according to the principles of Asiatic communism. Whether the bombing begins again or not, that question will still remain to be answered.

No matter how great the volume of data the President may collect as the raw material for his decision, he is still weighing two unknowns, the long-range intention of the adversary, and the effect of bombing (or of not bombing) upon that intention.

It is quite possible that the adversary intends to keep up what he is doing into the indefinite future, no matter how many bombs fall upon him. It is quite possible, on the other hand, that he might write the present operation off as a good try that didn't work, and act to leave himself free to try something else.

ON ALMOST ANY ONE of the factors being weighed by President Johnson as he proceeded toward decision, it was possible to find two weighty arguments, one on each side.

Does bombing cement the relationship between the North Vietnamese regime and its people? Some say that is always the result of bombing. Others say this result occurs only when the people are spontaneously in sympathy with the regime and its undertaking.

Some say the actual military benefits to United States operations from the bombing are slight, and that even massive air power does not seriously disturb guerrillas. Others say the destruction of communications and supplies, the hampering of movement, the home delivery of the impact of war, all tend to slow the adversary down, to say the least.

Some say that if the bombing is not resumed, the spirit of the South Vietnamese will suffer. Others say that the ground build-up provides all the evidence necessary of the durability of the United States commitment.

Some say that if the pause continues there is still a chance the North will confer about a settlement. Others say they will confer or not confer according to their own judgment.

Some say that to slacken the war would raise fears among other countries about the credibility of the United States commitment. Others say that the bombing is losing us friends all around the world. Some say that the extension of the scope of bombing which might be expected if it is resumed would bring China into the war. Others say the North Vietnamese don't want China in the war.

The lack of firm answers might in itself be reason enough for not acting. The idea is pretty well established in this country, at least, that there is an aggression in Viet Nam and that it ought to be resisted. That can be done without argument. To reach beyond resistance into attacks on the northern homeland from the air would seriously impair the kind of consensus Mr. Johnson likes, in conducting a war as well as in anything else.

Thoughts Crowd Back on This, the Birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt

JANUARY 30 is the birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Ahead of us is the anniversary of that soft April day when death came for him in the Little White House at Warm Springs.

That day had started well. A rather large and ample maid, with whom he liked to talk, had asked him, after the breakfast tray was brought, what he thought about reincarnation. The subject, said the President, interested him. They both agreed to that. He then asked her what incarnation she would choose if it were possible to come back to earth after death. She meditated a moment and said:

"I've thought about it. And I think I'd like to come back as a canary."

F.D.R. took one look at her broadness and burst out laughing.

"Some canary!" he said. And they both laughed.

The final day started well enough.

Franklin D. Roosevelt comes, back to us often, in our memories, in books, plays and articles. We think of him especially in election years as we see and hear the candidates of our time and measure them, in our minds, against the memory of him and his record.

HE KNEW, as well as any of those who have become established by historians as strong presidents, how to make the people see and understand the needs of their time.

The issues were never blurred when he was President. There was never any difficulty of communication. He knew the great importance of leadership's communicating with the people.

This is why, under strong presidents, there seems always so much controversy. The fact is there is a lot of it precisely because the people have understood the issues and have taken sides.

Strong presidents always keep a public dialogue going. There is never apathy, or quiet acceptance of the status quo. It is an interesting thing to contemplate, but the democratic processes of dialogue, debate and participation in issues function better under strong presidents than the conservatives. And this is an unusual thing when one thinks about it.

ONE DAY in the Little White House I watched Franklyn D. Roosevelt use his strong arms to swing himself from a chair to a small short-back seat on wheels, as a conference ended, and spin himself out of the room. He paused at the door, grinned at us, waved his cigarette holder, and vanished with a thrust of his arms.

I recall thinking at the time, with the impact of his complete leg paralysis still heavy upon me, how great are the mind, will, personality and dynamics in a man and how unimportant, relatively, the physical.

The image of outstanding leaders traditionally is one of size. Once the image was that of kings and thrones, elevated to lift them above the common run of people, with crowns on their heads to give them a man-made halo of implied divinity and power. Even now many persons think of size as impressive.

But with F.D.R. it was not muscle or size—it was his inner strength, that mysterious ability to be able to communicate and dramatize issues and events. It was this quality, too, which enabled him to defeat polio, and though completely paralyzed from the waist down, to give people the illusion of being whole.

He was tested severely. He was president during an enormous world depression in which he himself, and, more important, the government, were symbols of direct personal interest in the welfare of the citizens. He was president during the Second World War. And here again, he, as much as Winston Churchill, became a symbol of liberty and freedom to millions about the world.

One thinks on these things each January.

'Unknown' Is Optimistic Candidate

By P-T Political Editor

THE POLLS are rolling but the chips aren't down yet, in the view of William Penn Patrick, the wealthy Tiburon (Marin County) Republican candidate for governor whom "nobody every heard of."

Patrick is a new millionaire and a new Republican. He says he's worth almost $8 million now as the result of his success in manufacturing Holiday Magic cosmetics at San Rafael, an enterprise employing about 10,000 persons. He says he has already invested almost $250,000 of his own money in his campaign and is willing to go to about $1.5 million. He has cash and pledges of about $300,000 from others.

The 35-year-old candidate barely scores on statewide polls. But he says the battle hasn't really been joined—that Governor Brown's machine hasn't started rolling. When it does, says Patrick, he's confident current figures which show actor Ronald Reagan or former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher defeating Brown will reverse and show that neither can beat him.

"THOU SHALT NOT label," is a 12th Commandment Patrick offers as a complement to State GOP Chairman Dr. Gaylor Parkinson's 11th which enjoins against speaking ill of another Republican.

Patrick says he goes along with Parkinson's idea except if it interferes with legitimate discussion of electability factors of the various Republican entries.

Thus, while he denies he is labeling, he strikes at Reagan as a far right wing type whose speeches are written for him by the John Birch Society and who can't get the Republican votes he needs from his narrow-base approach. Reagan has already been so labeled, says Patrick, and washes his hands of the offense himself.

Christopher has a "cold image" and a record of losses, says Patrick, referring to his unsuccessful races for U.S. Senate and for lieutenant governor. "I think his leadership has been mediocre." When some speak of 25 years' experience, Patrick charges, it's really been one year repeated 25 times.

A DRAMATIC, exciting candidate is what the GOP needs, he says, and is confident Californians will decide he's that man before the June 7 primary comes. The spadework has started in the form of 500 big and expensive billboards, statewide. Some 250 smaller ones are up or scheduled. Radio programs are under way now, many of them in Spanish with the assistance of his Mexican - American wife, the former Marie Olivo. A few days ago he taped an hour of TV material to be used within a month.

Patrick registered Republican in 1962. And that makes it unanimous. Both Reagan and Christopher are former Democrats. He has not worked in political party activities, and says that's an advantage in its sheer detachment from the idea that the party "owns" the candidate.

PATRICK'S preparation has been: "I've worked years to accumulate money for political action. You can't do it without money—not without having to sell off some of yourself."

While he doesn't shrink from headliners Reagan and Christopher, his main objective is Brown. He said at lunch Thursday that he or a representative of his will file legal action charging that Brown or "his corps of henchmen" are engaged in fraud. This has to do with Brown's solicitation of campaign funds from state appointees.

Worse, says Patrick, a Brown agent solicited $1,500 from Patrick's business as a campaign item and when Patrick refused, within a week there was a news release "smearing me and my company."

THE SMEAR which Patrick alleges was in the form of a complaint from the attorney general's office that the cosmetics firm was using misleading advertising in using the word "organic" to describe product qualities. The action was dismissed without prejudice, Patrick said, upon agreement to delete the word from future ads.

Patrick came from a poverty-stricken, 10-child North Carilonia family, worked his way up through a college degree and taught junior high school subjects for three years in West Sacramento before launching his cosmetics business.

Now Patrick would take a "state chamber of commerce" approach to business, cooperate for loans to small businessmen in areas like Watts, end procrastination in smog and rapid transit by stopping concentration on freeways and do something about Brown's appointment of "some of the worst people in history" to state judgeships.

L. A. C. SAYS

A Candidate Who Is Running on Issues

IT WAS REFRESHING to read a campaign letter by a candidate seeking election to the State Assembly. He is not a local candidate, but from the nearby city of Downey. He apparently is not interested in sniping at his fellow candidates—but he is presenting issues that can be effective in gaining support from voters who are unhappy about what has been happening in our state government.

THE CANDIDATE'S name is Bob Corwin. I do not know his party affiliation. But his letter to Gov. Brown gives some of the questions most of us are interested in. They deal with the spiraling cost of state budgets and record of the Brown spending. The statistics given by Mr. Corwin may bore some of our readers. But since they involve their tax payments they should be given careful consideration.

They show the first Brown budget of 1959-60 as $2.1 billion which was an increase over the last budget under Gov. Knight. Each succeeding year was increased until the budget passed for 1966 totaled over $4.2 billion. This 100% increase in seven years is compared with a population increase of about 22%. Now we are told to expect another 7% increase in the budget starting next July. When state government costs increase almost five times as fast as population there is reason to question the soundness of an administration.

IT IS OFTEN argued by the Brown administration that the budget increases are necessary because of our population increases and the services that must be provided. This is a valid reason for some increases. But when they are several times the rate of population increase the question arises at what point must we discourage rather than increase the new residents?

While these new people have increased 22% since Brown took office he has increased the number of state employes by over 43%. The cost of these employes has virtually doubled because of increased number and rates of pay and fringe benefits. There seems no end to the increased obligations of taxpayers for this increased state bureaucracy.

A LARGE PORTION of these increases is paid by increased sales, gasoline, cigarette and use taxes. This means hidden taxes which the average citizen pays with purchases without paying attention to what is added to the actual price of the items purchased. But we are told we must expect even higher taxes on incomes as well as sale and use taxes.

Under the Brown administration the unemployment disability fund has been virtually bankrupted. Last year hospital payments were held up because there was not sufficient funds available. These funds are provided from the tax deducted from the worker's paycheck. The fund continues to be in jeopardy because it has been misused and it is not politically advisable to charge the workers the amount necessary to properly safeguard this worthwhile protection.

THERE ARE MANY issues involving the average citizen's pocketbook which opposition candidates can use in their campaigns. But unfortunately few of them seem interested enough or who are capable of researching to provide sound arguments. Those who do so, as is the Downey candidate, will find voters listening to them and remembering some of the facts. When hit in the pocketbook it makes a real and lasting impression. It is what is needed by the candidates trying to impress voters in this year's election campaigns.—L.A.C.

Praise and Boos Familiar to Rusk

WALTER RIDDER

WASHINGTON — One of the difficulties of being secretary of state is that you have to weather the somewhat mercurial temperment of the public and of the press. You're up one day and down the next — and you never quite know precisely what it is that is causing the change in opinion.

Take the case of Dean Rusk, for instance. He has recently been the subject of editorials and columns praising him for his performance as secretary of state. This praise must be as surprising to Rusk as was the blame which not so long ago was being laid at his door. He is not doing anything any different from the way he has always done, but suddenly it turns out that he is a hero and not the bum which it had previously been said that he was.

ANY MAN who aspires to public life sooner or later gets accustomed to the inexplicable swings in public and newspaper opinion. If he doesn't get accustomed to it, he won't last long in public life.

It is one of the hazards of the trade, at least in the free society in which we live. Russian or Chinese leaders aren't bothered quite so much about that as are those who serve the public in the United States or Great Britain or France, but neither are they totally immune to pressures of public opinion. For one reason or another, Nikita Khrushchev lost the confidence of those who determine things in the Soviet Union and he was unceremoniously dumped from his job as leader.

It wasn't so long ago that along the Washington cocktail party circuit and in the columns of gossip writers that Rusk's stock hit a new low. It was said that it wouldn't be surprising if he was suddenly ousted as secretary of state. It was said that he wasn't forceful enough, that he wasn't giving the President very good advice, that he had lost control of his department and that he didn't possess within him one constructive thought.

It was rather widely agreed that he had to go and at least in Washington one of the more popular parlor games was to guess about his successor. It was tacitly assumed the President didn't think very highly of him and it was quite generally agreed that while he was a good technician, he didn't bring to the job of secretary of state the qualities which were needed to perform adequately in these difficult and complicated times.

NOW SUDDENLY it appears, as one reads the press, that he does after all possess the qualification to be an outstanding secretary of state. Newspaper editorials and columnists have been lauding him as a man of patience and foresight and of able diplomacy and suddenly it appears that he is close to being the indispensable man.

Rusk who has among his other attributes a good sense of humor must be faintly amused by the quick change in his standing. He certainly has not changed himself. He is still the same man who came here five years ago and is operating in the same way as he has always done.

It is, as a matter of fact, far too early to make an assessment of Rusk as secretary of state. There are far too many unresolved questions, far too many policies the ultimate result of which cannot yet be seen to make an accurate appraisal of the job that's being done by the present secretary of state.

Again as a matter of fact, it is always difficult to judge the performance of the secretary of state. Under our system, he is largely the President's man and it is the President who ultimately makes and directs foreign policy.

There have been, of course, exceptions to that rule as in the case of President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. In that case, Dulles appeared to be calling most of the shots.

But by and large it is the President who fashions foreign policy and the exact role of the secretary of state in the creation of those policies is more often than not known only to the two men most intimately involved — the President and the secretary of state.

Anyway, it's nice to see the hard-working and indefatigable Rusk getting praise these days; but as he no doubt knows better than anyone else, the praise of today can be the boos of tomorrow.

Red China Not a Bright Outlook

By Virginia Weldon Kelly
Special Correspondent

SEN. MIKE MANSFIELD, recently in the Far East, believes Red China is evacuating some children and some of the elderly from large South China cities; is beefing up military forces; and has been holding night military maneuvers.

This was his answer when asked if he believes Red China will enter the war if the United States escalates military action in Viet Nam.

The Senate Majority Leader said that even if the USSR refused military aid to Red China, she could fight a guerrilla war of the type which drove Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek from China.

Senator Mansfield said: He disapproves of blockading the North Vietnamese because most of their military material is coming in by rail from China and the USSR.

China must find room for her exploding population now numbering 750 million. Southeast Asia, if under Red China's domination, could absorb only 25 to 30 million but her principal aims are towards Soviet territory.

Since the 17th Century, Russia's imperialism has been directed toward the East. The clash between the USSR and Red China is not ideological but concerns territory and a 4,500-mile border.

Service Academies Make Pitches for Star Athletes

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Congressmen are under the impression that they appoint the cadets to West Point. However, that's not the whole story. The football scouts also have a lot to do with it, and they are now combing the high schools for athletes.

In fact, West Point and Annapolis and the Air Force Academy are all in a hot race right now for both future officers and future athletes.

On the weekend of January 14, for instance, the Army sent Harry's Charter Service to Concordia, Kans., to pick up Mike Reeves, star football player for Concordia High School, and fly him to Kansas City, then to New York, then to West Point. At the Point he was briefed at great length on the advantages of attending that historic military college.

This week or next, Mike Reeves will go to Colorado Springs to be wooed by the Air Force so its football team will be able to defeat the Army and the Navy.

An Army spokesman stated that it is the definite policy of the Army's Athletic Association to woo good students and that 125 students would visit the Point this year. NCAA rules permit an athlete to make one trip to an institution each year and no taxpayers' money is expended, the spokesman said. The alumni foot the bill.

When I called Mike Reeves in Concordia, he said: "These trips don't bother me. I'm getting used to it."

"How did you like West Point?"

"They take things too seriously in the East," he replied. "I think I'll like Colorado Springs better."

THE ISRAELI government has just taken important steps to improve the position of the 300,000 Arabs living inside Israel. Eventually this could help improve the difficult, dangerous deadlock between Israel and the Arab states.

Prime Minister Levi Eshkol, delivering his "state of the union message" to the Knesset, Jan. 12, lifted the ban on the movement of all Bedouins in the south and almost all other Israeli Arabs, except in the north where Israel is extremely narrow—only seven miles in one place — and where the Jordanian-Israeli border is unmarked and almost undefended.

"It is our plan to arrive in the course of a year at the abolition of the military government machinery," Premier Eshkol said.

The military government hitherto has restricted the movement of most Arabs inside Israel so they could not travel without written permission. This was a hangover from the Suez war when Israeli Arabs moved back and forth over the Jordanian border.

Files Getting Too Full at Capital

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — If you placed all the state filing cabinets end to end, by 1990 they would stretch all the way from Sacramento to Los Angeles.

And the numerous documents would reach to the moon.

JAMES McCAULEY

D-Bakersfield, who deplores the mounting paper work that is burying Sacramento.

Casey's answer: utilizing more electronic data processing techniques.

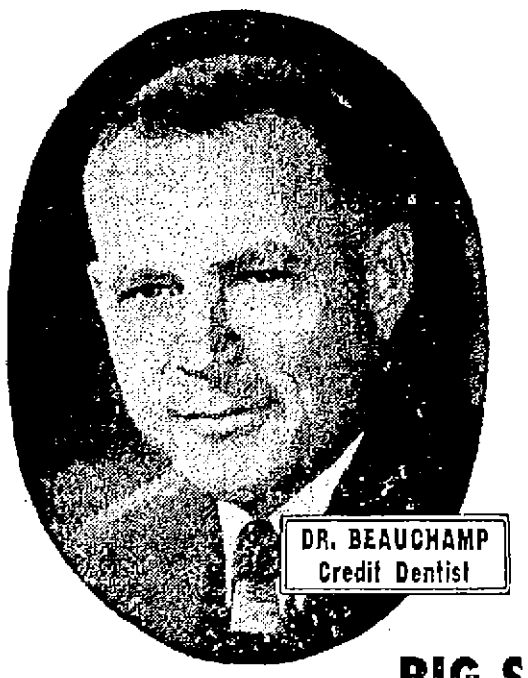
Casey says the state could save $415 million a year by using more computers.

"Under a statewide information system utilizing computer technology, information could be stored utilizing less space with swifter access and the cost of handling would be cut by 20%," forecast Casey.

Significantly, the Sacramento computer cult is growing. It could pave the way for the next salary increases for state employes.



In the recent 4% salary increase recommended for state employes by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, the governor anticipated that a 2% increase in productivity would account for half the cost of the pay raise—$15 million.

It is obvious that electronic data processing is one of the techniques that Sacramento will use to stimulate productivity. Increasingly, state government is turning to the labor-saving devices as private industry.

POLICY WAVERS—Sometimes it depends on who is talking as to Sacramento ground rules. A state information officer last October asserted that the state had begun to negotiate Pacific Coast Freeway land-purchase deals in Long Beach in a few hardship cases. In December, a different division information officer denied it. In January, Mrs. Mary Ball, 801 Cherry Ave., was advised that her hardship-sales deal is under study.

ANY MAN who aspires to public life sooner or later gets accustomed to the inexplicable swings in public and newspaper opinion. If he doesn't get accustomed to it, he won't last long in public life.

It is one of the hazards of the trade, at least in the free society in which we live. Russian or Chinese leaders aren't bothered quite so much about that as are those who serve the public in the United States or Great Britain or France, but neither are they totally immune to pressures of public opinion. For one reason or another, Nikita Khrushchev lost the confidence of those who determine things in the Soviet Union and he was unceremoniously dumped from his job as leader.

It wasn't so long ago that along the Washington cocktail party circuit and in the columns of gossip writers that Rusk's stock hit a new low. It was said that it wouldn't be surprising if he was suddenly ousted as secretary of state. It was said that he wasn't forceful enough, that he wasn't giving the President very good advice, that he had lost control of his department and that he didn't possess within him one constructive thought.

It was rather widely agreed that he had to go and at least in Washington one of the more popular parlor games was to guess about his successor. It was tacitly assumed the President didn't think very highly of him and it was quite generally agreed that while he was a good technician, he didn't bring to the job of secretary of state the qualities which were needed to perform adequately in these difficult and complicated times.

NOW SUDDENLY it appears, as one reads the press, that he does after all possess the qualification to be an outstanding secretary of state. Newspaper editorials and columnists have been lauding him as a man of patience and foresight and of able diplomacy and suddenly it appears that he is close to being the indispensable man.

Rusk who has among his other attributes a good sense of humor must be faintly amused by the quick change in his standing. He certainly has not changed himself. He is still the same man who came here five years ago and is operating in the same way as he has always done.

It is, as a matter of fact, far too early to make an assessment of Rusk as secretary of state. There are far too many unresolved questions, far too many policies the ultimate result of which cannot yet be seen to make an accurate appraisal of the job that's being done by the present secretary of state.

Again as a matter of fact, it is always difficult to judge the performance of the secretary of state. Under our system, he is largely the President's man and it is the President who ultimately makes and directs foreign policy.

There have been, of course, exceptions to that rule as in the case of President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. In that case, Dulles appeared to be calling most of the shots.

But by and large it is the President who fashions foreign policy and the exact role of the secretary of state in the creation of those policies is more often than not known only to the two men most intimately involved — the President and the secretary of state.

Anyway, it's nice to see the hard-working and indefatigable Rusk getting praise these days; but as he no doubt knows better than anyone else, the praise of today can be the boos of tomorrow.

Red China Not a Bright Outlook

By Virginia Weldon Kelly
Special Correspondent

SEN. MIKE MANSFIELD, recently in the Far East, believes Red China is evacuating some children and some of the elderly from large South China cities; is beefing up military forces; and has been holding night military maneuvers.

This was his answer when asked if he believes Red China will enter the war if the United States escalates military action in Viet Nam.

The Senate Majority Leader said that even if the USSR refused military aid to Red China, she could fight a guerrilla war of the type which drove Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek from China.

Senator Mansfield said:

He disapproves of blockading the North Vietnamese because most of their military material is coming in by rail from China and the USSR.

China must find room for her exploding population now numbering 750 million. Southeast Asia, if under Red China's domination, could absorb only 25 to 30 million but her principal aims are towards Soviet territory.

Since the 17th Century, Russia's imperialism has been directed toward the East. The clash between the USSR and Red China is not ideological but concerns territory and a 4,500-mile border.

Service Academies Make Pitches for Star Athletes

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Congressman are under the impression that they appoint the cadets to West Point. However, that's not the whole story. The football scouts also have a lot to do with it, and they are now combing the high schools for athletes.

In fact, West Point and Annapolis and the Air Force Academy are all in a hot race right now for both future officers and future athletes.

On the weekend of January 14, for instance, the Army sent Harry's Charter Service to Concordia, Kans., to pick up Mike Reeves, star football player for Concordia High School, and fly him to Kansas City, then to New York, then to West Point. At the Point he was briefed at great length on the advantages of attending that historic military college.

This week or next, Mike Reeves will go to Colorado Springs to be wooed by the Air Force so its football team will be able to defeat the Army and the Navy.

An Army spokesman stated that it is the definite policy of the Army's Athletic Association to woo good students and that 125 students would visit the Point this year. NCAA rules permit an athlete to make one trip to an institution each year and no taxpayers' money is expended, the spokesman said. The alumni foot the bill.

When I called Mike Reeves in Concordia, he said: "These trips don't bother me. I'm getting used to it."

"How did you like West Point?"

"They take things too seriously in the East," he replied. "I think I'll like Colorado Springs better."

THE ISRAELI government has just taken important steps to improve the position of the 300,000 Arabs living inside Israel. Eventually this could help improve the difficult, dangerous deadlock between Israel and the Arab states.

Prime Minister Levi Eshkol, delivering his "state of the union message" to the Knesset, Jan. 12, lifted the ban on the movement of all Bedouins in the south and almost all other Israeli Arabs, except in the north where Israel is extremely narrow—only seven miles in one place — and where the Jordanian-Israeli border is unmarked and almost undefended.

"It is our plan to arrive in the course of a year at the abolition of the military government machinery," Premier Eshkol said.

The military government hitherto has restricted the movement of most Arabs inside Israel so they could not travel without written permission. This was a hangover from the Suez war when Israeli Arabs moved back and forth over the Jordanian border.

Files Getting Too Full at Capital

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — If you placed all the state filing cabinets end to end, by 1990 they would stretch all the way from Sacramento to Los Angeles.

And the numerous documents would reach to the moon.

JAMES McCAULEY

D-Bakersfield, who deplores the mounting paper work that is burying Sacramento.

Casey's answer: utilizing more electronic data processing techniques.

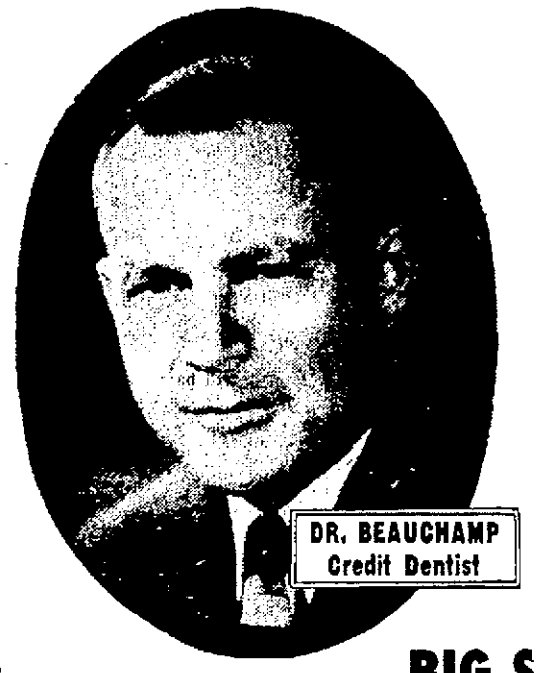
Casey says the state could save $415 million a year by using more computers.

"Under a statewide information system utilizing computer technology, information could be stored utilizing less space with swifter access and the cost of handling would be cut by 20%," forecast Casey.

Significantly, the Sacramento computer cult is growing. It could pave the way for the next salary increases for state employes.

In the recent 4% salary increase recommended for state employes by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, the governor anticipated that a 2% increase in productivity would account for half the cost of the pay raise—$15 million.



It is obvious that electronic data processing is one of the techniques that Sacramento will use to stimulate productivity. Increasingly, state government is turning to the labor-saving devices as private industry.

POLICY WAVERS—Sometimes it depends on who is talking as to Sacramento ground rules. A state information officer last October asserted that the state had begun to negotiate Pacific Coast Freeway land-purchase deals in Long Beach in a few hardship cases. In December, a different division information officer denied it. In January, Mrs. Mary Ball, 801 Cherry Ave., was advised that her hardship-sales deal is under study.

Council, Mayor Pay Hike Urged

A salary increase from $200 to $600 a month for city councilmen, with an additional $200 for the mayor, was proposed Friday by the Long Beach Hotel-Motel Association.

President John P. Loupy of the association noted in a letter to the council that the continuing growth of Long Beach and of its municipal problems "will make more and more demands on the time of elected officials."

He pointed out that other cities in the area have already increased councilmanic pay.

The hotel-motel group was the first to suggest a specific new salary level for council members, although others have endorsed a pay increase in general terms.

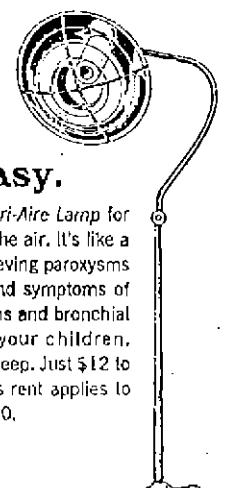
Illinois GOP Backs Percy for Senator

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)—An unprecedented Republican endorsing convention Saturday voted unanimously to back Chicago industrialist Charles H. Percy in his campaign to unseat Sen. Paul H. Douglas, D-Ill.



The action made Percy's nomination as the Republican senatorial candidate almost automatic. A primary must be held in June, but Saturday's vote gave Percy the official backing of the party organization and there is no major opposition to his nomination in sight.

Oil Reports Price, Output Profit Gains

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP) — Improved prices for oil products provided one of the brightest spots in the 1965 economy of the petroleum industry.

About a dozen major companies already have released preliminary estimates of 1965 earnings. Gains involved record production of crude oil and natural gas and record sales of oil and chemical products.

"Most gratifying" was the reaction of E. D. Brockett, Gulf Oil Corp. board chairto the improved domestic products prices of the last nine months of 1965.

Such prices have long been in a depressed state as the industry battled problems of oversupply and excess inventories. There was cautious optimism at the state of 1965 that improved conditions would permit prices to move upward but the year's gains exceeded the boldest forecasts.

* * * *

THE PRICE GAINS were bolstered by the record demand for products, particularly for gasoline.

A 52-city survey completed recently by the Oil and Gas Journay indicates the average price for a gallon of gasoline, exclusive of taxes, increased from 19.5 cents in 1964 to 20.4 cents during 1965.

The survey indicates prices were higher in every major marketing region except the Rockey Mountain area, where a decline from 22 cents to 21.1 cents a gallon was reported.

* * * *

East Coast, 19.4 and 20.5 cents.

South Central, 19.9 and 20.3 cents.

Midwest, 18.9 and 21 cents.

Texas, 18.4 and 18.9 cents.

Rockey Mountains, 22.0 and 21.1 cents.

West Coast, 19.9 and 20.6 cents.

The preliminary 1965 report by Shell Oil Co., with an 18% increase in earnings, reflects the upward trends for both products prices and sales volumes.

* * * *

RICHARD C. MCCURDY, president, said Shell's income from refined products increased 11% while gallonage was up 8%.

He said it is unlikely the percentage gains can be as great in 1966, adding that Shell's gains in 1965 were somewhat above industry — wide averages.

E. L. Steiniger, board chairman for Sinclair Oil, indicated a 30% increase in earnings resulted more from record production and sales than from prices. Steiniger acknowledged prices had improved but said sinclair's 1965 price realizations were the second lowest for any year since 1952.

Steiniger forecast additional profit gains for 1966 but indicated they will result from Sinclair's continuing program to reduce costs and develop new sources of profit.

The Cities Service Co. reported a 23% earnings increase and John L. Burns, chairman, said it represented higher profits in all major areas of operations. In addition to improved prices, Burns credited increased operating efficiencies and a plan of concentrating in areas of greatest profit potential in petroleum and chemicals.

L.A.-Detroit Daily TWA Trips Slated

LOS ANGELES—Acting on a CAB award of unrestricted authority on the Detroit-California route, Trans World Airlines will inaugurate on or about March 28 a daily round-trip between Los Angeles and Detroit.

Concurrently, all TWA operations will switch from Willow Run Airport to the closer-in Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Present plans call for the use of Boeing 707 Star-Stream jets on the route.

TWA previously has been serving Detroit with a CAB restriction requiring an intermediate stop.

THE BUSINESS WEEK

Profit-Taking Feature of Active Stock Trade

By C. J. PARNOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—Profit-taking was the main feature of trading on the New York Stock Exchange last week and the list finished mostly lower. Trading was active.

Some upward pressure was seen in the first two sessions of the week but was more than offset by selling in the remaining three. Particular emphasis was given to some of the recent high-flying secondary and blue chips shares.

Blue chips drifted about throughout the week and finished slightly lower. There did not seem to be a very strong interest in the blue chip sector and perhaps most of the decline stemmed from this lack of interest rather than any significant selling pressure.

* * * *

IN EITHER case, the Dow-Jones industrial average, which nearly crossed the 1,000 mark the previous week, fell 2.79 to 985.35. Rails however, soared 6.17 to a new peak of 263.45. Standard & Poor's composite 500 stock index fell 0.16 to 93.31.

Trading totaled 45,817,110 shares compared with 47,326,480 shares a week before and 30,816,190 shares in the same week last year.

The analysts disagree on what is causing the market's present churning and easier tendency but do agree that the chances of a sharp rise on the near-term are rather dim.

However the experts believe the market's fundamental background and the various bullish technical indications seen in recent performances, particularly the strong rise in the Dow-Jones rail indicator, point to resumption of the up trend fairly soon and the topping of the 1,000 mark in the industrial average not long afterward.

* * * *

OF THE 1,562 issues traded this week, 741 advanced, 275 to new 1965-66 highs, while 696 declined, 72 to new lows.

Roan Selection Trust was the volume leader as it slid ¼ to 9⅞ on 849,200 shares. Commonwealth Oil advances 3¾ to 21½ on 716,200 shares.

American Telephone slid ⅜ to 60⅛ on 765,000 shares. The company said last week it is holding tentative discussions with Western Union on the possibility of selling its TWX system to Western Union. Western Union, also active, rose 6⅞.

Anken Chemical was active. It tumbled 4 points. The company showed its device for printing and developing standard black and white film in a minute last week.

Control Data skidded 1⅝ in active dealing. The company reported sharply lower sales and profits for the six months ended Dec. 31.

* * * *

STEELS were mostly lower. Bethlehem and U.S. Steel, which both reported lower fourth quarter profits but higher 1965 earnings shed 1⅜ and 1⅛ respectively. Republic Steel slid ¾ and 1⅛.

Youngstown Sheet dropped

Autos were depressed by a report of a 5% drop in mid-January auto sales. Chrysler skidded 1¾, Ford ⅞ and General Motors 2. American Motors gained ¾ on the week with the aid of a 1-point rise on Friday. The gain on Friday was sparked by news that a Detroit industrialist had purchased 200,000 shares of AMC stock.

IBM sprinted 6 points on plans for a 3-for-2 stock split. The directors also said they intend to boost the quarterly dividend.

* * * *

ELECTRONICS bounced around during the week but showed some strong gains. Litton sprinted 12⅜, Motorola 8, Magnavox 9, Texas Instruments 7 and Fairchild Camera 16½.

Pennsylvania Railroad advanced 4¼ and New York Central climbed 5¼. Both roads reported higher 1965 earnings.

United Airlines climbed 7¼. The company proposed a 2-for-1 stock split and dividend boost last week. On Friday the company also reported it was filing a new air fare plan with the Civil Aeronautics Board. KLM Royal Dutch was a wide mover but finished unchanged. The Dutch air carrier reported a profit of about $100,000 for 1965 compared with a deficit in 1964.

Northwest Airlines soared 17 points. National climbed 7⅞, Delta 7, Eastern 6⅜ and Braniff 4½. Trans World, which declared its first cash dividend in 30 years last week, added 3⅞.

* * * *

DU PONT SHED 2 points on news of lower 1965 profits. Philip Morris jumped 9⅞ after its directors proposed a 3-for-1 stock split. Standard Brands gained 4⅝ on plans for a 2-for-1 split and dividend boost. Rex Chainbelt rose 4¼ after its directors raised the quarterly payout.

Indications that the administration may abandon its peace effort in Viet Nam and resume bombing in North Viet Nam boosted aircraft shares. Boeing skyrocketed 13¾, Douglas 7⅝, United Aircraft 4½, Bendix 3¼ and North American Aviation 2½.

McKesson & Robbins rose 2½ to 50 after Foremost Dairies made a tentative offer of $51 a share for the stock. Foremost added ⅞. McKesson is seeking an injunction to block the take-over.

* * * *

STANDARD OIL (N.J.) shed 2 on news of lower profits. Socony Mobil rose 1½ on higher 1965 earnings. Schering jumped 5 as did Johnson & Johnson.

Cancer Stamps at Coin, Stamp Exhibit

Commemorative cancer stamps from 28 countries, including the first such stamp, a Swedish 1928, will be on exhibit at the Third Annual Long Beach Coin and Stamp Exhibition Feb. 3-6 in Municipal Auditorium.

The exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Children under 12 admitted free.

The two companies called off their merger discussions. Non-ferrous metals found some support and Reynolds Metals rose 3, Alcoa 2¾, Anaconda 3, International Nickel 3⅜ and Kennecott Copper 4¼.

Oil Reports Price, Output Profit Gains

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Improved prices for oil products provided one of the brightest spots in the 1965 economy of the petroleum industry.

About a dozen major companies already have released preliminary estimates of 1965 earnings. Gains involved record production of crude oil and natural gas and record sales of oil and chemical products.

"Most gratifying" was the reaction of E. D. Brockett, Gulf Oil Corp. board chairto the improved domestic products prices of the last nine months of 1965.

Such prices have long been in a depressed state as the industry battled problems of oversupply and excess inventories. There was cautious optimism at the state of 1965 that improved conditions would permit prices to move upward but the year's gains exceeded the boldest forecasts.

• • • •

THE PRICE GAINS were bolstered by the record demand for products, particularly for gasoline.

A 52-city survey completed recently by the Oil and Gas Journay indicates the average price for a gallon of gasoline, exclusive of taxes, increased from 19.5 cents in 1964 to 20.4 cents during 1965.

The survey indicates prices were higher in every major marketing region except the Rockey Mountain area, where a decline from 22 cents to 21.1 cents a galion was reported.

• • • •

The publication listed these 1964-1965 regional averages:

East Coast, 19.4 and 20.5 cents.

South Central, 19.9 and 20.3 cents.

Midwest, 18.9 and 21 cents.

Texas, 18.4 and 18.9 cents.

Rockey Mountains, 22-0 and 21.1 cents.

West Coast, 19.9 and 20.6 cents.

The preliminary 1965 report by Shell Oil Co., with an 18% increase in earnings, reflects the upward trends for both products prices and sales volumes.

• • • •

RICHARD C. MCCURDY, president, said Shell's income from refined products increased 11% while gallonage was up 8%.

He said it is unlikely the percentage gains can be as great in 1966, adding that Shell's gains in 1965 were somewhat above industry — wide averages.

E. L. Steiniger, board chairman for Sinclair Oil, indicated a 30% increase in earnings resulted more from record production and sales than from prices. Steiniger acknowledged prices had improved but said sinclair's 1965 price realizations were the second lowest for any year since 1952.

Steiniger forecast additional profit gains for 1966 but indicated they will result from Sinclair's continuing program to reduce costs and develop new sources of profit.

The Cities Service Co. reported a 23% earnings increase and John L. Burns, chairman, said it represented higher profits in all major areas of operations. In addition to improved prices, Burns credited increased operating efficiencies and a plan of concentrating in areas of greatest profit potential in petroleum and chemicals.

Profit-Taking Feature of Active Stock Trade

By C. J. PARNOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—Profit-taking was the main feature of trading on the New York Stock Exchange last week and the list finished mostly lower. Trading was active.

Some upward pressure was seen in the first two sessions of the week but was more than offset by selling in the remaining three. Particular emphasis was given to some of the recent high-flying secondary and blue chips shares.

Blue chips drifted about throughout the week and finished slightly lower. There did not seem to be a very strong interest in the blue chip sector and perhaps most of the decline stemmed from this lack of interest rather than any significant selling pressure.

Trading totaled 45,817,110 shares compared with 47,326,480 shares a week before and 30,816,190 shares in the same week last year.

Autos were depressed by a report of a 5% drop in mid-January auto sales. Chrysler skidded 1¾, Ford ⅞ and General Motors 2. American Motors gained ¾ on the week with the aid of a 1-point rise on Friday. The gain on Friday was sparked by news that a Detroit industrialist had purchased 200,000 shares of AMC stock.

READ WHAT REDUCING CRITICS SAY ABOUT PAT WALKER

These Women Are Enjoying The New Year With New Figures Created by Pat Walker

For the past 4 years I avoided getting on the scales completely.

My emotional insecurity increased and I had no interest in nice clothes or any kind of social life.

Now a short time later I wear a size 10 instead of a size 16. I have 10 times the energy compared to when I was dragging around all those extra pounds.

My husband and 4 children are so very proud of me. It is a sure thing for anyone to reduce with Pat Walker's program.

—Mrs. John Holmes, Jr., Woodland Hills

What the Pat Walker Program has done for me it can do for you.

I weighed 196 pounds and wore a size 22 dress. I plodded unhappily down the street with aching back and feet.

With the Pat Walker Program, I have reduced from a size 22 to a size 16 and am still going down.

Every woman who has a weight problem will be greatly benefited by the Pat Walker Program. My husband and friends marvel at my new appearance.

—Mrs. Josephine Conway, San Francisco

We all meet our "Waterloo" sooner or later. Mine was just before last Thanksgiving.

I am only 4 foot, 10 inches and weighed 145 pounds. My short stature added even more pounds to my appearance.

We were to go to a formal dinner and I shopped everywhere for a dress that would help my size 16½ figure. Finding the right dress turned out to be an impossibility. Needless to say we didn't attend and my husband was out $20 for tickets.

It all seemed like a bottomless pit after trying diet pills and other reducing methods.

This brought me finally to the Pat Walker Salon and they were the answer to reducing for me.

Today I am wearing a size 10 and am still going down.

—Mrs. Mary Bessenbach, Reseda

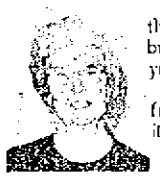
I was at 182 pounds and felt it. I was trying all kinds of diets. None of these worked. I was really tried of being fat.

I've reduced from a size 22½ to a size 16 and am still going down. Now I feel wonderful. I have a lot of pep and I am not tired all the time as before.

I can say by experience about Pat Walker's that they don't care how fat you are or how much you weigh because they are there to help you reduce and they do.

—Mrs. Helen Lynch, Norwalk

I was disgusted with the way I looked and the way I felt.



Now that I have reduced from a size 16 to a perfect size 10 my two children see me as a new mother, full of pep and ready to go.

I have a different outlook on everything and now actually look forward to a new day and social activities.

—Mrs. Gladys Compton, Pasadena

It took me two years of indecision before I finally took the plunge and went to your salon.

You can look like a mattress tied in the middle for just so long or look at your bulges in a three-way mirror and pretend you don't see what you do see.

I went to Pat Walker's and reduced from a size 18 to a size 10. Believe me it's most gratifying.

—Mrs. Lillian Cooney, Lakewood

Three years ago when we moved to Hawaii the pounds were beginning but I paid no attention to the signs. Soon I noticed what was occurring. I was no longer the "Slim Me" of my working days. My husband said "Go to Pat Walker's."

It is with great pleasure that I write this to you. I can look at myself in the mirror and say thank you for giving me back my slim figure.

—Mrs. Lea R. Raybin, Honolulu

Due to a personal problem and illness I became disillusioned, unhappy and confused. Out of boredom I began to eat more and as a result gained weight until I became a bulging size 16.

I decided I had to change my life and reducing was most important. I enrolled in the Pat Walker reducing Program.

The greatest day of my life was when I bundled my size 16 clothes into my car and took them to be altered to fit my new trim size 12 figure.

—Mrs. Kathleen Breaux, Lakewood

Since I am only 5 feet in height I made up my mind to really do something about my weight when I saw 130 pounds on the scales.

I never thought I'd reduce to 120 again. Well, I'm now down to 110 and will continue to reduce until I am down to bone structure.

I feel so light and different and was highly complimented recently by a sales clerk. It's a wonderful feeling after reducing at Pat Walker's.

—Mrs. Bea Symonds, Honolulu

I wish there was some way to let more women know about your wonderful method for taking off unwanted fat and excess inches.

I have struggled with the weight problem for the last twenty five years.

Now, in a very short time I have reduced from a size 18 to a size 12 and still going down.

Thank you for making it possible.

—Mrs. Fern E. Smith, Sepulveda

For years I fought the "Battle of the Bulge." Crash diets, home exercises and other methods all produced discouraging results.

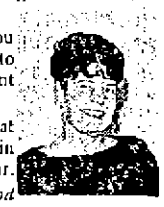
One day in desperation I answered a Pat Walker ad with not too confident hope.

Well, I found out! It's unbeljevable! I reduced from a size 22½ to a size 14 and am still going down. I also reduced fifteen years in appearance.

My health is better and life is once again a pleasure to live, thanks to Pat Walker.

—Mrs. Matilda Kettle, San Francisco

Last year I went to a New Year's party wearing a size 50 dress. I looked for all kinds of excuses not to go. It's awful to dread what most everyone looks forward to. But when you're so overweight you feel so conspicuous and have that "left-out feeling."



In fact my weight and inch losses are proof that the Pat Walker Program works. I am down to a size 14 and that's a long way from the size 50 that I was.

I'm a "new me" inside and out; a whole new personality as a result of my new figure and for all this I have Pat Walker to thank.

—Barbara Kiefer, Torrance

I weighed 225 pounds and wore a size 44 dress. Dieting alone had never changed the shape of things for me. I just got hungrier.

Unless you have experienced it you can't really know how frustrating it is to have been fat all your life. Each year meant more unhappiness and more insults.

—Mrs. Lois W. Skinner, Lakewood

My only regret at this time about the Pat Walker Program is that I waited so long. I could have been enjoying my new figure years ago.

Like many others I read her ads and thought this just couldn't happen to me. I had been overweight most of my adult life.

I believe I tried most every new diet or reducing fad that came along.

Now that I am a perfect size 8 instead of my former size 18 I feel like a new person and have had more compliments in the past few months than I have had all my life. I have the highest regard for Miss Walker and her staff.

—Mrs. La Verne Daniel, Pasadena

I have always been dubious about answering advertisements regarding reducing. I am so glad my better judgment told me to call Pat Walker's.

I have reduced my 5 foot 1 inch figure from a size 14 to a size 10 and am still going down. With the Pat Walker program one does not lose weight in just one place but it comes off where you need to lose it.

I am happy to say I am now able to wear the clothes that were too small before and I feel like walking straight and tall.

—Ellen W. Humes, Sherman Oaks

I was skeptical about going to Pat Walker's but I had a figure problem to cope with and I had already tried everything else I could think of.

It seems too good to be true but even with the typical teenage eating habits I actually lost ten pounds in one week.

The world takes on a whole new look when you have a nice figure. I wish I had started sooner.

—Miss Charlene Carson, Lakewood

For many years, it seems like forever I was hiding my figure under a boxy suit or coat, huge handbags and full skirts.

My problems were all from the waist down. I had given up capris and told everyone I didn't like the beach when the real truth was I was ashamed to wear a bathing suit.

I'm proud to say I'm finished with my treatments. Now I wear a size 10 dress. Before I wore a size 16. I had to because my hips and thighs were so bulgy. I lost 7 inches in my hips and 5 inches on each thigh and my legs look decent again. I'm proud to say I went to Pat Walker's.

—Mrs. Jackie Stevens, Seal Beach

I had been overweight ever since I was knee-high to a grasshopper. I thought I was born to be fat and had to adjust to it.

After seeing some snapshots of myself, I was amazed at how extremely heavy I looked and such poor posture.

I tried dieting for about three months and lost only seven pounds. I tried exercising but gave it up. Who wants to roll all over the floor anyway?

I read some Pat Walker ads and, with my husband's encouragement decided to give it a try.

I reduced from a size 18 to a size 12. My husband, children and friends have complimented me many times on my new figure. Thank you Miss Walker.

—Mrs. Irene P. Souza, Kailua

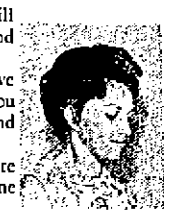
I was a victim of the overweight problem for many years. I knew about and tried other methods to reduce. I was a 174 pound size 20.

I was miserable being so overweight and resembled a stuffed sausage. I never looked stylish or attractive. Whatever I liked came in sizes much too small.

What a thrill it is to be both slim and trim. I am now a size 12. No more suits and dresses in those unattractive large sizes for me now.

With the Pat Walker reducing Program I obtained the most benefit in reducing and the utmost satisfaction out of the time spent doing it.

—Irma B. Goldstine, San Francisco



Like so many women, I thought my figure problems were so very special that nothing could be done. I weighed about 175 pounds and had tried to reduce many times but could not get below 160 pounds.

I am a very happy patron of Pat Walker and rightfully so. I had figure problems and Pat Walker did something about them. I'm 29 years old and for the first time in 13 years I can't wait for summer to come because I'm going to spend time at the beach as I promised my children and I will feel at ease in a bathing suit.

—Jean Hudgins, Lakewood

When a woman has to buy a size 18 she has to buy what is offered and not the styles she wants.

I am now down to a size 12 and will soon be down to my normal size 10 and am so proud of the new me.

I now know that everything I have read about Pat Walker and the results you get by going to her salons are all true and even more so.

I thought about it for months before calling Pat Walker. I just wish I had done it long before.

—Mrs. Doris George, Bellflower

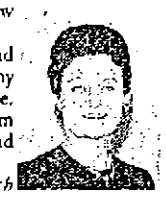
Being overweight was no fun and I was constantly feeling tense, irritable and ill at ease because no matter what I wore the clothes just didn't fit properly.

I have reduced from a size 16 to a size 10 and am still going down.

The way these treatments have helped me reduce is proof positive that any woman who uses Pat Walker's marvelous program will be pleasantly surprised by the wonderful results.

—Mrs. Francis J. Stack, Honolulu

When I first went to Pat Walker's I weighed 169 pounds and wore a size 18. I had tried many times before to lose weight but always gained it back.



I've lost 40 pounds and will soon be the size 12 my husband so very well remembers me as being.

Now I enjoy going places and being with friends without being self-conscious about being overweight. Thanks to Miss Walker and her wonderful program.

—Mrs. Joyce M. Fisher, San Francisco

I had a beautiful figure before I had my two children. Then my weight went up to over 170 pounds. I tried everything to reduce but nothing worked.

I will always be grateful that I saw your ad and decided to give it a try.

Now I'm down to 128 pounds and wear size 12. I feel like a million and my husband is so very proud of my appearance.

I sincerely recommend your program to anyone who wants to lose weight and feel better.

—Mrs. Janette Gleason, Long Beach

I was fat, frustrated and frumpy. For eight years I had tried every pill, powder, potion, and diet in an effort to reduce. My bulging hips and thighs defied them all. I began to think myself as a hopelessly fat woman.

I really went to Pat Walker's to prove that no treatment or method could reduce my hips and thighs. I was so delightfully and completely wrong.

I sincerely advise any woman who thinks she is a hopeless case to go to a Pat Walker Salon.

—Mrs. Marie V. Hernandez, Lakewood

My unattractive figure almost wrecked a good marriage. Well, with kindness and understanding Pat Walker showed me how I could go down to the size 12.

Well, this is one patron who will praise you everywhere. You have given me back my happy marriage.

Now I again have pride in my appearance and enjoy buying the pretty dresses I had to pass up in the past.

You did this for me and forever and always I will be grateful to you and your company.

—Irma Binder, Honolulu

I had become a 200 pound size 20. I was sluggish and suffered from being overweight.

I decided this being overweight had gone far enough and started the Pat Walker Reducing Program.

I am now down to a size 14 and still going down. My husband is delighted with my progress and the way I look.

—Mrs. Rosemary Barto, Lakewood

I sincerely advise any woman who thinks she is a hopeless case to go to a Pat Walker Salon.

—Mrs. Marie V. Hernandez, Lakewood

My unattractive figure almost wrecked a good marriage. Well, with kindness and understanding Pat Walker showed me how I could go down to the size 12.

Well, this is one patron who will praise you everywhere. You have given me back my happy marriage.

Now I again have pride in my appearance and enjoy buying the pretty dresses I had to pass up in the past.

You did this for me and forever and always I will be grateful to you and your company.

—Irma Binder, Honolulu

I had become a 200 pound size 20. I was sluggish and suffered from being overweight.

I decided this being overweight had gone far enough and started the Pat Walker Reducing Program.

I am now down to a size 14 and still going down. My husband is delighted with my progress and the way I look.

—Mrs. Rosemary Barto, Lakewood

My only regret at this time about the Pat Walker Program is that I waited so long. I could have been enjoying my new figure years ago.

Like many others I read her ads and thought this just couldn't happen to me. I had been overweight most of my adult life.

I believe I tried most every new diet or reducing fad that came along.

Now that I am a perfect size 8 instead of my former size 18 I feel like a new person and have had more compliments in the past few months than I have had all my life. I have the highest regard for Miss Walker and her staff.

—Mrs. La Verne Daniel, Pasadena

I weighed 225 pounds and wore a size 44 dress. Dieting alone had never changed the shape of things for me. I just got hungrier.

Unless you have experienced it you can't really know how frustrating it is to have been fat all your life. Each year meant more unhappiness and more insults.

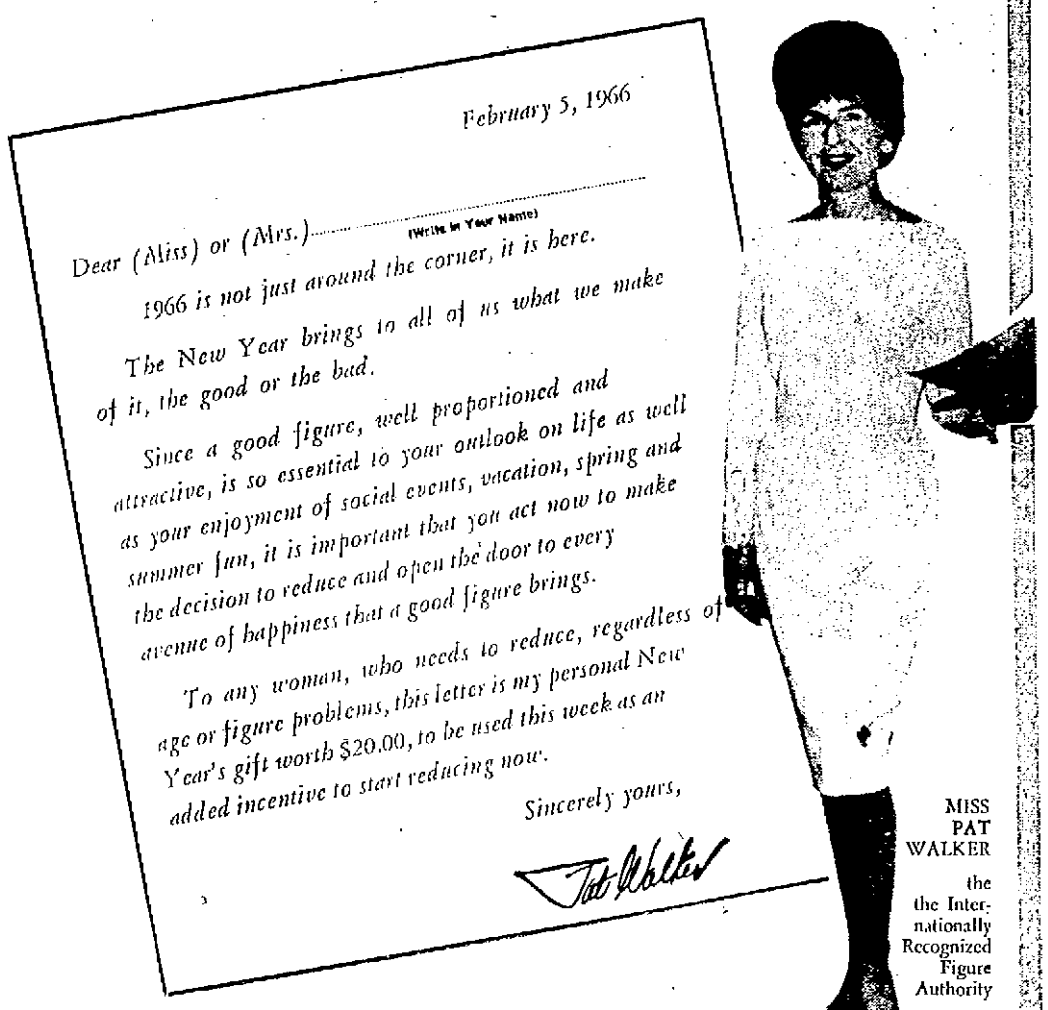
—Mrs. Lois W. Skinner, Lakewood

I have always been dubious about answering advertisements regarding reducing. I am so glad my better judgment told me to call Pat Walker's.

I have reduced my 5 foot 1 inch figure from a size 14 to a size 10 and am still going down. With the Pat Walker program one does not lose weight in just one place but it comes off where you need to lose it.



I am happy to say I am now able to wear the clothes that were too small before and I feel like walking straight and tall.

—Ellen W. Humes, Sherman Oaks

Crack in Pro Football's Pot of Gold

Revolt Threat by Veterans

NEW YORK (AP)—Pro football, which found a pot of gold at the end of a television rainbow and now is painting its players green, is heading for a revolt among veterans over the astoundingly lucrative contracts that have been given to rookies.

Stories reporting dissatisfaction among veteran players have been rising to the surface. The big blow-up could come at contract-signing time.

Here's what has popped up recently:

—San Diego coach and general manager, Sid Gillman, revealed that Ernie Ladd and Earl Faison, two all-American Football League defensive standouts, have "insisted on bonuses before signing a contract."

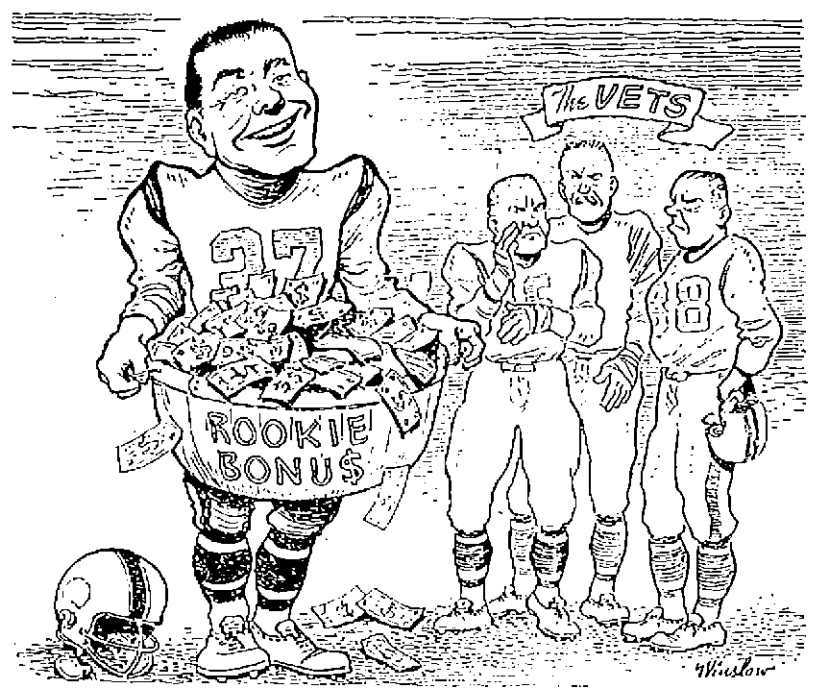
—AFL commissioner Joe Foss, in voiding a trade involving Ladd and Faison on charges tampering by Houston owner Bud Adams, quoted Ladd as saying, "if the man (Adams) is willing to give up four players for me, he must be willing to give up a lot of money."

—The St. Louis Globe-Democrat quoted a source close to the Cardinals of the National League as saying that some veterans "were in a state of near mutiny" last season when they began "probing rookies about their salaries and found most of them were making unrealistic sums."

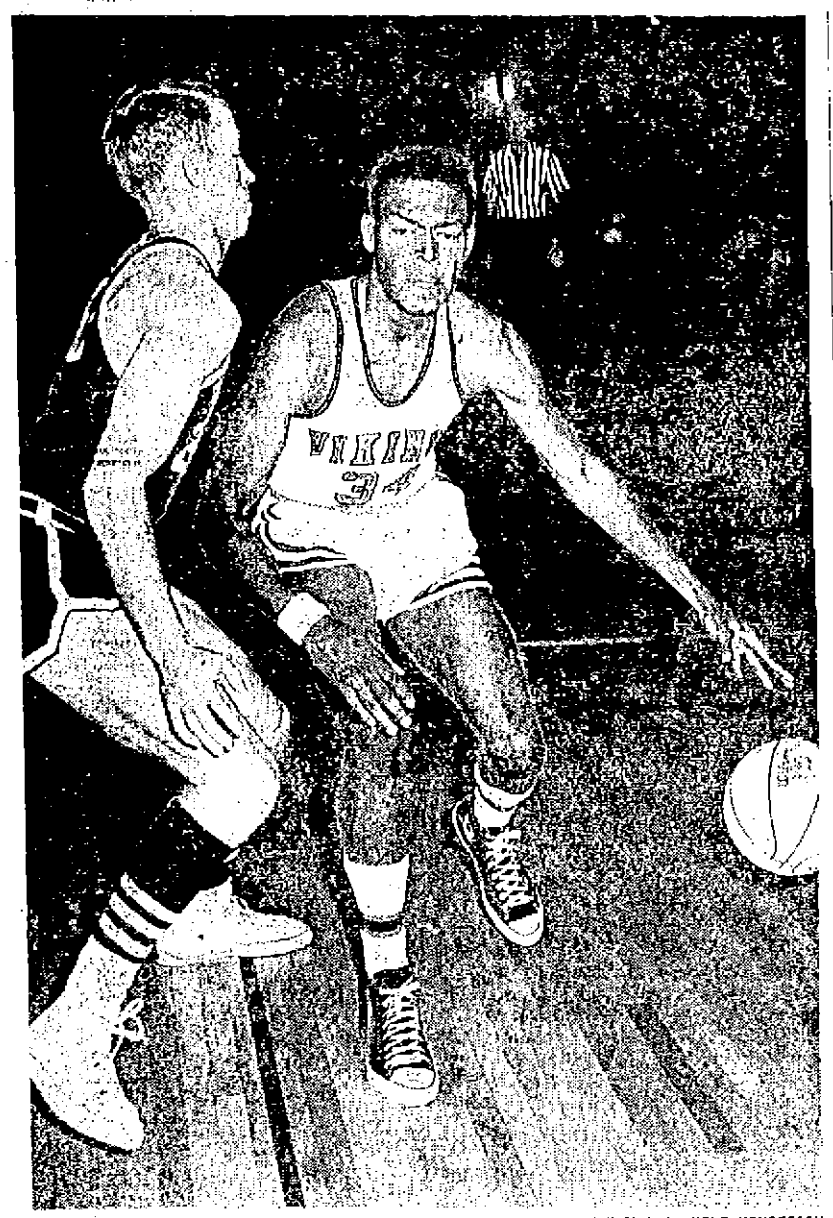
—Nick Buoniconti, all-AFL linebacker for the Boston Patriots, said "if the clubs can hand blank checks to rookies, they can give veterans what they are worth." He also said if he wasn't happy "It might subconsciously affect my play . . . so I'd rather play out my option."

—Ladd and Faison had announced they were playing out their options along with four other AFL players — Buffalo kicker Pete Gogolak, Kansas City tackle Ed Budde, Denver defensive back Goose Gonsoulin and flanker Bo Roberson, who played with both Oakland and Buffalo. Budde and Roberson now are signed but the others remain unsigned.

—Ray Nitschke, Green Bay linebacker, was the only NFL player to state publicly he was playing out his option, but he eventually signed. However, it is known that some NFL players went through the 1965 season without renewing their contracts.



What apparently is happening—and there's little doubt that the six-figure, no-cut contracts for rookies have triggered the storm—is that the veteran players are using the option clause in their contract as a lever in an attempt to get heftier salaries.



In pro football, if a player signs for one year he is under option to play for the same team the following year. If he doesn't sign for the second year, he plays out his option, at a 10% decrease in salary.

At the end of the second year, which comes officially on May 1, he can sign with the same team again or become a free agent, making his own deal with another club in any league.

Four rookies reportedly signed contracts worth $500,000 or more—Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski of Green Bay, Johnny Roland of St. Louis, and Tommy Nobis of Atlanta.

AFL boss Foss says it is "demoralizing for other members of a team to know that a youngster just out of college is getting three times as much as a veteran."

Vikings Whistle to 99-85 Victory

By GARY RAUSCH

With over-officiating playing a large role, Long Beach City College staged another winning performance Saturday evening, 99-85, over Cerritos.

The Vikings, aided by two zealous officials, reeled off a 59-40 halftime lead, surged to a 30-point edge early in the second half and then were forced to fight for their lives when the zebra stripes pulled a reversal of form in the last 15 minutes.

LBCC's 21st victory was spiced with 50 personal fouls, three disqualifications and two technical fouls. The teams went to the free throw line 73 times and converted 48.

Cerritos was damaged beyond repair when forward Dean Duistermars and guard Manuel Terrazas were tagged with four personals in the first half.

Duistermars was charged with a technical and his fifth personal in the second half, and joined teammate Bill Plank and Viking Joe Ware on the disqualified list.

When the final buzzer sounded, Terrazas and Rich Brown of the Falcons and Carey Bailey, Bill Connolly and Bennie Richard had all made it through with four fouls while LBCC coach Chuck Kane chalked up the other technical.

"They (the officials) destroyed the game," said the mild-mannered Viking mentor later.

Still there was a great deal of basketball played, though Long Beach would just as soon forget seeing its 30-point lead cut in half.

Also in double figures were Connolly (17), Ware (14) and Mack Calvin (11). Cerritos' well-balanced attack found six men in double-digits.

Long Beach didn't find the range until nearly five minutes elapsed but took the lead and extended it to 14 points on 11 consecutive points by Connolly midway through the half.

Then ball control infractions and the Vikes' own sloppy, complacent play saw Cerritos outscore the hosts, 18-3, in the next five minutes. But Mel Reed and Calvin came off the bench to regain the momentum and hold it to the end.

Rig in Fiery Crackdown on Angels

By ROSS NEWHAN

Bill Rigney's ulcer is fine, thank you, but he can no longer stomach the lethargy which gripped the Angels during their final season in Chavez Ravine.

In a remarkably frank interview via telephone from his Walnut Creek home Friday, Rigney outlined a stringent new philosophy which could considerably alter the Angels' existing management-athlete relationship and stimulate a dividend for Anaheim's $24 million investment.

"We have reached a point where we can grow stagnant in the second division or we can shake ourselves and make a run for it," began Rigney.

"I am concerned with how we go about making that run," he continued. "We are certainly equipped to give 100% every day in Anaheim and that is something we did not do in Chavez Ravine.

BILL RIGNEY
Country Club Pro?

"We may be beat this year because the other club is better, but it will not be because we didn't go to bed at night. I will not allow this team to leave its desire on the golf course or in a bar."

Rigney has been polishing the new image to present as a spring training inaugural address and now he paused, sprayed his tonsils and returned to the rostrum, presenting the I, P-T with an exclusive preview.

"I have been wanting to get this off my chest all winter and it's better that my players start thinking about it even before they get to spring training.

"It's true, we didn't have any get-up-and-go last year. We displayed a consistent lack of initiative. Maybe it was just because we were moving out of the Ravine or maybe Dean Chance's poor start got everyone off wrong.

"I have even heard that the Angels organization is nothing more than a country club. Well, Palm Springs may present a country club atmosphere, but as long as I'm manager I will not tolerate any attitude leading to that impression.

"We're going to resolve this thing on the first day of spring training. We're going to go about the whole operation differently because we can't play in Anaheim the way we closed out the Ravine.

"If a get-tough policy is necessary, then it's a get-tough policy it will be. If I have to stop all recreation I will. If it takes us from 9 to 5 to get the job done then my players will never see a golf course.

"This affects everyone, the stars, the shortstop and catcher included. I don't mean they didn't hustle last year, but they are better players than they showed. Somewhere along the line their desire waned."

Hints that an iron hand would guide the ship to Anaheim this year were dropped by general manager Fred Haney when he criticised the club's complacency during an interview with the I, P-T several weeks ago.

L. B. State Breaks Into Win Column in Final Seconds

By DOUG IVES

Center Ed Tucker drove the length of the court for a lay-in with 37 seconds to go and John Chambers sank four free throws in the waning moments as Long Beach State broke into the CCAA win column after five tries with a 65-59 victory over arch-rival Los Angeles State.

A crowd of about 1,000 in the LBSC gym witnessed one of the sloppiest games played there in several years, but also one in which the 49ers survived a rough and tumble contest with their last-minute heroics.

The decisive basket was Tucker's lay-in, and it never should have happened. Grabbing the rebound on a missed LASC shot, the 215-pounder sped up the sidelines, defied three defenders and calmly put the ball in the hoop as coach Dick Perry heaved a sigh of relief.

Just a few moments earlier, the 49ers had stalled for 40 seconds trying to preserve a three-point lead, and it was Perry's intention for Tucker to hold the ball. But the Topeka, Kansas, native had other ideas, and who's to argue with success.

The basket made the score 61-57, then 10 seconds later Chambers hit two free throws when Diablo Joe Barnes fouled out. He was the fourth LASC player to be whistled out in a game which produced 46 fouls.

After Ken Ellsworth scored for L.A. State with 19 seconds to go, Chambers added his second pair from the line at 0:09 to complete an 18-point evening. He led all scorers.

* * * *

THE 49ERS narrowly averted losing their fifth consecutive CCAA game when both Chambers and John Broeske missed two free throws apiece in a 30-second span in the last two minutes, but the Diablos failed to take advantage of the break by missing five field goal tries.

The first 10 minutes were superbly played, then as the game got rougher, both teams piled one mistake upon another and shot poorly. L.B. State finished with 35% from the field and L.A. State 32. From the line, both were a miserable 52%.

The 49ers put on one of their better defensive efforts, especially guard Chuck Hagen who held Diablo ace Ellsworth to 12 points. With Hagen's tight guard, the LASC sharpshooter missed 15 shots.

Long Beach led 35-31 at intermission with the final 4½ minutes of the first half producing no baskets and only three free throws, all by 49er sub Marlin Tarpley.

EASILY GATHERS STRUB RICHES

Record Win by Bold Bidder

By ERNIE MASON

Bold Bidder ran the fastest mile and a quarter in Santa Anita history Saturday as he captured the $134,500 Charles H. Strub Stakes by nearly a half-dozen lengths in 1:59⅗.

Given a superlative ride by Willie Shoemaker, Bold Bidder ran away from his 13 rivals and was just coasting at the finish. Isle of Greece finished second while the favored Terry's Secret was third and O'Hara finished fourth.

Bold Bidder's winning time clipped a fifth of a second off the track record set by Round Table in 1958 and equalled in the Strub Stakes two years ago by Gun Bow.

The victory was the first at the meeting in three starts for Bold Bidder but the crowd of 56,000 made him the second choice to Terry's Secret at 7-2 odds. Bold Bidder returned $9.60, $5.20 and $3.20. Isle of Greece paid $5.00 and $3.00 while Terry's Secret returned $2.60.

For Shoemaker, the victory was his 66th in a $100,000 race. The remarkable string began in the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity in 1951, the forerunner of the Strub.

"He ran like a wild horse—he was a real tiger," said Shoemaker of Bold Bidder.

Jockey Walter Blum, who rode Isle of Greece, said: "My horse ran the best race of his life, but that other horse just wouldn't quit."

Of the favored Terry's Secret, jockey Alex Maese sadly admitted, "he didn't have the big run today."

Bold Bidder, a speed horse, had the disadvantage of breaking from the outside post position and had to move gradually to the leaders in the long run in front of the stands to the first turn.

Sir Caesar shot to the front at the break and Isle of Greece followed the leader. But as they neared the turn, Bold Bidder was in third place and Shoemaker then began his gradual move on the lead.

Coming into the backstretch, Sir Caesar had his lead cut to less than a length with Bold Bidder in second position and Isle of Greece third.

By the time the field hit the second turn, Shoemak-

Rig in Fiery Crackdown on Angels

By ROSS NEWHAN

Bill Rigney's ulcer is fine, thank you, but he can no longer stomach the lethargy which gripped the Angels during their final season in Chavez Ravine.

In a remarkably frank interview via telephone from his Walnut Creek home Friday, Rigney outlined a stringent new philosophy which could considerably alter the Angels' existing management-athlete relationship and stimulate a dividend for Anaheim's $24 million investment.

"We have reached a point where we can grow stagnant in the second division or we can shake ourselves and make a run for it," began Rigney.

"I am concerned with how we go about making that run," he continued. "We are certainly equipped to give 100% every day in Anaheim and that is something we did not do in Chavez Ravine.

"We may be beat this year because the other club is better, but it will not be because we didn't go to bed at night. I will not allow this team to leave its desire on the golf course or in a bar."

Rigney has been polishing the new image to present as a spring training inaugural address and now he paused, sprayed his tonsils and returned to the rostrum, presenting the I, P-T with an exclusive preview.

"I have been wanting to get this off my chest all winter and it's better that my players start thinking about it even before they get to spring training.

"It's true, we didn't have any get-up-and-go last year. We displayed a consistent lack of initiative. Maybe it was just because we were moving out of the Ravine or maybe Dean Chance's poor start got everyone off wrong.

"I have even heard that the Angels organization is nothing more than a country club. Well, Palm Springs may present a country club atmosphere, but as long as I'm manager I will not tolerate any attitude leading to that impression.

"We're going to resolve this thing on the first day of spring training. We're going to go about the whole operation differently because we can't play in Anaheim the way we closed out the Ravine.

"If a get-tough policy is necessary, then it's a get-tough policy it will be. If I have to stop all recreation I will. If it takes us from 9 to 5 to get the job done then my players will never see a golf course.

"This affects everyone, the stars, the shortstop and catcher included. I don't mean they didn't hustle last year, but they are better players than they showed. Somewhere along the line their desire waned."

Hints that an iron hand would guide the ship to Anaheim this year were dropped by general manager Fred Haney when he criticised the club's complacency during an interview with the I, P-T several weeks ago.

By DOUG IVES

Center Ed Tucker drove the length of the court for a lay-in with 37 seconds to go and John Chambers sank four free throws in the waning moments as Long Beach State broke into the CCAA win column after five tries with a 65-59 victory over arch-rival Los Angeles State.

A crowd of about 1,000 in the LBSC gym witnessed one of the sloppiest games played there in several years, but also one in which the 49ers survived a rough and tumble contest with their last-minute heroics.

The decisive basket was Tucker's lay-in, and it never should have happened. Grabbing the rebound on a missed LASC shot, the 215-pounder sped up the sidelines, defied three defenders and calmly put the ball in the hoop as coach Dick Perry heaved a sigh of relief.

Just a few moments earlier the 49ers had stalled for 40 seconds trying to preserve a three-point lead, and it was Perry's intention for Tucker to hold the ball. But the Topeka, Kansas, native had other ideas, and who's to argue with success.

The basket made the score 61-57, then 10 seconds later Chambers hit two free throws when Diablo Joe Barnes fouled out. He was the fourth LASC player to be whistled out in a game which produced 46 fouls.

After Ken Ellsworth scored for L.A. State with 19 seconds to go, Chambers added his second pair from the line at 0:09 to complete an 18-point evening. He led all scorers.

* * * *

THE 49ERS narrowly averted losing their fifth consecutive CCAA game when both Chambers and John Broeske missed two free throws apiece in a 30-second span in the last two minutes, but the Diablos failed to take advantage of the break by missing five field goal tries.

The first 10 minutes were superbly played, then as the game got rougher, both teams piled one mistake upon another and shot poorly. L.B. State finished with 35% from the field and L.A. State 32. From the line, both were a miserable 52%.

The 49ers put on one of their better defensive efforts, especially guard Chuck Hagen who held Diablo ace Ellsworth to 12 points. With Hagen's tight guard, the LASC sharpshooter missed 15 shots.

Long Beach led 35-31 at intermission with the final 4½ minutes of the first half producing no baskets and only three free throws, all by 49er sub Marlin Tarpley.

EASILY GATHERS STRUB RICHES

Record Win by Bold Bidder

By ERNIE MASON

Bold Bidder ran the fastest mile and a quarter in Santa Anita history Saturday as he captured the $134,500 Charles H. Strub Stakes by nearly a half-dozen lengths in 1:59⅗.

Given a superlative ride by Willie Shoemaker, Bold Bidder ran away from his 13 rivals and was just coasting at the finish. Isle of Greece finished second while the favored Terry's Secret was third and O'Hara finished fourth.

Bold Bidder's winning time clipped a fifth of a second off the track record set by Round Table in 1958 and equalled in the Strub Stakes two years ago by Gun Bow.

The victory was the first at the meeting in three starts for Bold Bidder but the crowd of 56,000 made him the second choice to Terry's Secret at 7-2 odds. Bold Bidder returned $9.60, $5.20 and $3.20. Isle of Greece paid $5.00 and $3.00 while Terry's Secret returned $2.60.

For Shoemaker, the victory was his 66th in a $100,000 race. The remarkable string began in the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity in 1951, the forerunner of the Strub.

"He ran like a wild horse—he was a real tiger," said Shoemaker of Bold Bidder.

Jockey Walter Blum, who rode Isle of Greece, said: "My horse ran the best race of his life, but that other horse just wouldn't quit."

Of the favored Terry's Secret, jockey Alex Maese sadly admitted, "he didn't have the big run today."

Bold Bidder, a speed horse, had the disadvantage of breaking from the outside post position and had to move gradually to the leaders in the long run in front of the stands to the first turn.

Sir Caesar shot to the front at the break and Isle of Greece followed the leader. But as they neared the turn, Bold Bidder was in third place and Shoemaker then began his gradual move on the lead.

Coming into the backstretch, Sir Caesar had his lead cut to less than a length with Bold Bidder in second position and Isle of Greece third.

By the time the field hit the second turn, Shoemak-

'Win or Else,' Bryant's Formula

Bear Bryant, as expected, stole the show Saturday when the Long Beach Century Club's first Clinic of Champions was staged at Edgewater Inn.

The University of Alabama head coach and athletic director, whose team was named by Associated Press as college club-of-the-year, was dressed in informal Southern California attire and even with more than 600 Southland coaches in attendance was as much at ease as if he were possum-hunting with Phil Harris in the South.

Success of the clinic was indicated not only in the whopping attendance figure, but also in the caliber of coaches on hand. Leading the parade were John McKay of USC and Sid Gillman of San Diego's Chargers, both with their entire staffs present.

McKay opened the clinic by advising the coaches to "take home your notes—you might not understand them at once."

With that, Bryant took over, and without further elaboration, here's the comments of a man with a 159-51-14 record in 21 seasons.

"I'M GOING TO TALK to you men just as if I was talking to my players," drawled the Southerner. "When a kid comes to me and asks me about coaching I simply tell him, 'coaching is winning—nothing else.' The goodies will come with winning. Like Red Sanders said, 'winning isn't the main thing, it's the only thing.'

"A coach and a player must be willing to make any sacrifice to win. The coach must be prepared to work 16-18-20 hours a day.

"Any coach who works for me—and that goes for you men, too—should know how to discipline himself before he disciplines the players.

"A coach needs fear to be a success. You need fear to win. I remember my fear in the old days—going back to handling mules at 4 a.m. I still keep that thought in mind. Handling mules doesn't pay as much as coaching.

BRYANT BROKE UP the audience with his next statement: "Nobody likes to get cut-up by press, radio or television. Or I might add some magazine." (The group gladly recalled the Bryant-Wally Butts story which resulted in a $10,000,000 suit against the magazine.)

"That's where discipline comes in. You've got to discipline yourself all the time. You can't let your wife get you down nor go to practice thinking about a $10,000,000 lawsuit. You just take it out on your kids and then you're not a winning coach anymore.

BRYANT THEN COMMENTED on desire. "It's always nice to have players with ability, but I'd rather surround myself with men of desire. If I see a coach or player without desire, the fellow isn't going to be around me long.

"Like baseball, for instance. I'd rather have a .200 hitter with desire and who'll win for me, than the .400 hitter whose team always loses.

"Surround yourself with winners. At the start of this season I had a little runt who didn't stand up to my waist and another kid who was on the fourth team. I noticed in practice these kids were all over the field, so I moved them both to the top. We went to a bowl game and won with both these kids starring. Without them I'd probably have been in front of a TV set on New Year's Day.

"On the other hand, not all these college all-Americas are the kind of kids I want. For instance, last December I flew to another part of the country to interview a big-name prospect. On the way home I told one of my assistants that we didn't want the boy. After a three-hour talk, the only thing he discussed was how much time he'd have to spend practicing.

"He didn't talk about the team or about winning, just about how much he'd have to work. I don't want that player on my club, although the boy's now with another team in my conference and probably some day will come back and beat me."

"PLAN FOR EVERYTHING," continued Bryant. "Every day I have a plan for everybody. I change those plans if a practice or a game goes bad because I know then that I was wrong. Even if I win and I think my plan went wrong, I'll use another plan next week.

"I even plan Wednesday what to say to the press Saturday, whether I win or lose. Even on Thursday I have a plan for NEXT WEEK'S GAME. I don't wait until Sunday to concentrate on the following game.

"The most important thing for a head coach is to know when to use the words, I, we and they. If things going bad, I tell the fellows it was MY fault. If we did well, I say THEY did a heckuva job.

"Some coaches tell the press that mistakes beat their teams. To hell with that. If my team loses, I tell the boys and press that I am responsible.

"MY planning was wrong and that's why we lost the game. You don't blame the other fellow and win football games."

Thus, the success story of Paul W. Bryant.

Blades Settle for 3-3 Tie on Disputed Goal

By RICH ROBERTS

The Blades, who usually come out on the short end, at least came out even against the Vancouver Canucks, 3-3, Saturday night.

The second largest Western Hockey League crowd of the season at the L.A. Sports Arena, 8,226, was treated to a strong last-period comeback by the Blades on a pair of goals by Norm Johnson, and nobody left during 10 minutes of high-pressure overtime.

It was the Blades' first tie of the season and the first time they haven't lost to Vancouver in eight games.

Vancouver had a 2-0 lead after the first period, but Johnson's goals put the Blades in front, 3-2, halfway through the last period only to have a recent teammate, Gordy Vejprava, come back to force the deadlock on a disputed goal.

Jake Hendrickson scored the other Blade goal afler Bryan Hextall and Larry Popein hit for Vancouver.

The Blades weren't too happy with the tie, claiming Vejprava was offside when he made it 3-3 with 4½ minutes to go.

Coach Lynn Patrick, who just last week blasted a Victoria linesman for allowing the decisive goal in a loss up north, said, "You expect to get the worst of it on the road, but we get it at home, too. Vejprava was across the blue line before the puck."

Vejprava, traded to Vancouver for Buddy Boone early this season, showed no remorse about breaking his old friends' hearts.

"I got to say it feels good," he said. "Offside? I don't think I was. I was at the red line looking for (Jack) Evans to give me the puck, and when he passed it I just took off."

Vejprava broke through defensemen Bob Wilson and Ray LaRose, faked goalie Marcel Pelletier out and down and hit an open net.

Popein, a National League veteran, scored Vancouver's second goal while killing a penalty, cashing in a breakaway.

But Hendrickson matched that feat to bring the Blades back to 2-1 midway in the middle period. With Howie Young in the penalty box, Hendrickson picked up the puck from Pelletier in his own end and the Canucks gave him a wide berth all the way down the rink.

It was Pelletier's fifth assist of the season — four more than any other WHL goalie.

The Blades hung in limbo for the next 18 minutes, as if trying to decide whether to fight for it or forget it.

Then Johnson took charge and suddenly they were on top, 3-2. At 9:07 of the last period, their steady center caromed a 30-footer off the cross bar to tie it at 2-2, then 2½ minutes later jabbed in Jim Baird's rebound at the corner.

BLUE LINES: Cliff Pennington, who had played in only one game since December, was released by Blades. He has applied for reinstatement as an amateur. The Boston Bruins retained his professional services. . . . The shakeup in the Blades' front office left Jim Smith out in the cold. He did not suit up. . . . The Blades play at Seattle tonight, Vancouver Tuesday and Portland Wednesday, then return home to meet Victoria Thursday and Saturday. . . . In a bench-ball thriller between the first two periods, the Blade Boosters, using their own referee and getting all the breaks, licked out against the valiant but outgunned hockey writers. . . . Vancouver's Bob McCusker had to leave for repairs in the second period after Howie Young sliced his cheek. McCusker was hit by getup on as Young skated by wielding a wicked stick. . . . Saturday's crowd was topped this season only by Wednesday's 8,129. . . . Howie Hughes of Vancouver had scored 26 points (6 goals, 20 assists) on the Blades during Into Saturday's game, more than any other player in the league this season.

With five minutes left in the game, Santa Clara had a seven-point lead but USC pulled to within four points with two minutes left. Paulson drew fouls from the pressing Trojans and turned them into a five-for-five closing performance.

Duke, Kentucky Tack Up Wins

Compiled from Wire Records.

Duke's top-ranked basketball team pulled away from North Carolina State in the last seven minutes Saturday for an 84-77 victory, 13th in a row for the once-beaten Blue Devils.

Jack Marin, benched with four fouls, came back and scored seven crucial points in the final half to help Duke clinch its seventh Atlantic Coast Conference win in eight starts.

Marin was high scorer for Duke with 20 points. Pete Coker and Eddie Beidenbach had 25 each for State. The game was tied 17 times.

LOUIE Dampier led second-ranked Kentucky to its best defensive performance of the season as the Wildcats overwhelmed Auburn 115-78 in a Conference game.

Auburn never challenged, but refused to yield until the opening minute of the second half. The Wildcats took a 13-point halftime advantage and added four quick baskets and a free throw after intermission while Auburn was scoreless.

Dampier forsook his usual long-range bombing in favor of driving lay-ups. He had 11 field goals and 10 of 13 free throws for 32 points. The win was Kentucky's 14th without a loss.

Michigan got a scare from stubborn Wisconsin but the Wolverines eked out a 69-67 victory to remain unbeaten in the Big 10 race.

All-America Cazzie Russell scored 21 points, far below his season average of 30 per game, to lead the winners. He was held to one field goal in the second half and didn't get on the scoreboard in the half until 10 minutes were gone.

A closing spurt led by Jimmy Walker brought third-ranked Providence from behind in the second half to stave off an upset bid and produce an 80-77 victory over Niagara.

Walker produced 15 of the 33 points for the Friars in the comeback effort. He wound up with 30 points. Niagara lost four men on fouls.

A tap-in field goal by Glinder Torain with 35 seconds remaining fired the Dayton Flyers to a 79-76 triumph over St. Joseph's.

Loyola of Chicago, down by as many as 12 points in the final half, stormed back in the final two minutes to defeat Kansas State 76-70 for the Ramblers 13th consecutive win.

Billy Smith led Loyola with 21 points while Doug Wardlaw kicked in with 19, 17 of them in the second half.

Vanderbilt, apparently looking ahead to the Kentucky game next week, experimented with a mixture of defenses and led all the way in posting a 98-66 victory over LSU. Clyde Lee led the winners with 24 points.

WASHINGTON ran away in the second half and blitzed a touring Hawaii club, 87-58.

Led by Stan Washington's 22 points, Michigan State trounced Northwestern 77-68 to hang on to second place in Big 10 play.

Louisville handed Bradley its worst defeat of the season, drubbing the Braves 103-71. Westley Unseld scored 24 points and picked off 19 rebounds to lead the winners.

IS TITLE ON LINE IN LAKER CLASH?

By DOUG IVES

The NBA's Western Division title could be virtually decided tonight when the front-running Lakers take on their nearest challenger, the Baltimore Bullets, before an anticipated 13,000 fans in the L.A. Sports Arena, starting at 7:05.

A Laker victory would boost the division lead to five games with 24 to play, meaning they could play .500 ball down the stretch and Baltimore would have to finish 18-6 to overtake them.

On the other hand, a win by the Bullets would trim the Laker margin to three games and make it possible for Baltimore to tie the Lakers by beating them in their three remaining head-on meetings.

Obviously, tonight's game is the most pivotal of the year for the Lakers, and coach Fred Schaus is thereby happy to have his pivot position entrusted to Leroy Ellis. He scored 19 points Friday.

NL Draws Wrath of Wisconsin

MILWAUKEE (AP) —Circuit Judge Elmer T. Roller ordered the National League Saturday to show cause why the trial date for Wisconsin's anti-trust suit should not be advanced.

Roller had set the date last week for March 7. But Saturday he signed an order to the National League to show cause at 10 a.m. Monday why the trial should not be advanced no later than Feb. 21.

Earlier Saturday, Atty. Gen. Bronson la Follette said he would seek the earlier trial date because of the league's "open defiance" of the Wisconsin court.

Warren Giles, president of the league, said Friday the league had authorized the Braves to fulfill their obligation in Atlanta and disregarded an order issued by Judge Roller Thursday to prepare to play in Milwaukee this season.

"In view of the open defiance by the National League of the lawful orders of the Wisconsin court," La Follette said, "the State of Wisconsin will request Judge Elmer Roller to advance the trial date of March 7 so that effective relief may be obtained well in advance of the baseball season."

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, the Braves opened the sale of tickets for opening day, April 12, and continued to insist they will be there for the opening game in the city's new $18 million stadium.

The Braves said they would begin accepting mail order tickets Saturday and would start over-the-counter sales Feb. 15.

12,500 See 'Trotters Have a Lark

By DAVE DANIEL

The Harlem Globetrotters proved again Saturday night that they are still the undisputed kings of laugh-provoking basketball before 12,500 fans in the Long Beach Arena.

Meadowlark Lemon, whose famous antics have dubbed him the clown prince, provided the spark — both for the Trotters and for the fans. He scored 22 points and parlayed most of them into laughs.

Now in their 40th year and working toward win No. 8,500, the Trotters were backed by former all-Americas Hallie Bryant and Connie Hawkins, and the humorous dribbling of Freddie Neal.

Ageless Satchel Paige, legendary baseball pitcher who was with Kansas City last season, joined the Trotters in their famous baseball routine to the delight of the crowd.

By the way, the final score was 85 for the Trotters to 76 for the opposing Washington Generals.

3 Match Races, No Real Match at Lions Strip

It was the night of the match race at Lions Drag Strip Saturday night before 5,155 fans, but the matches turned out to be all one-sided.

Jack Ewell of Long Beach defeated former Indianapolis 500 driver Art Malone in two straight runs. Ewell drove his Chrysler powered fuel dragster to a speed of 197.96 mph in 8.12 seconds.

In the other fuel dragster match race, the defending AHRA National champ wasted little time in defeating Tom Hoover in two straight. Sutherland of Downey went 200.44 mph in 7.87 seconds, which was top time of the meet.

Arnie Besiwick of Morrison, Ill. and Al Van Der Woulde of Culver City called their super stock match race a draw at one win apiece. Besiwick won the first round with a speed of 144 mph, but broke his Pontiac GTO and could not get it repaired for the second run until 11 p.m. The final round was called because it was too late.

'Win or Else,' Bryant's Formula

Bear Bryant, as expected, stole the show Saturday when the Long Beach Century Club's first Clinic of Champions was staged at Edgewater Inn.

The University of Alabama head coach and athletic director, whose team was named by Associated Press as college club-of-the-year, was dressed in informal Southern California attire and even with more than 600 Southland coaches in attendance was as much at ease as if he were possum-hunting with Phil Harris in the South.

Success of the clinic was indicated not only in the whopping attendance figure, but also in the caliber of coaches on hand. Leading the parade were John McKay of USC and Sid Gillman of San Diego's Chargers, both with their entire staffs present.

McKay opened the clinic by advising the coaches to "take home your notes—you might not understand them at once."

With that, Bryant took over, and without further elaboration, here's the comments of a man with a 159-51-14 record in 21 seasons.

"I'M GOING TO TALK to you men just as if I was talking to my players," drawled the Southerner. "When a kid comes to me and asks me about coaching I simply tell him, 'coaching is winning—nothing else.' The goodies will come with winning. Like Red Sanders said, 'winning isn't the main thing, it's the only thing.'

"A coach and a player must be willing to make any sacrifice to win. The coach must be prepared to work 18-18-20 hours a day.

"Any coach who works for me—and that goes for you men, too—should know how to discipline himself before he disciplines the players.

"A coach needs fear to be a success. You need fear to win. I remember my fear in the old days—going back to handling mules at 4 a.m. I still keep that thought in mind. Handling mules doesn't pay as much as coaching.

BRYANT BROKE UP the audience with his next statement: "Nobody likes to get cut-up by press, radio or television. Or I might add some magazine." (The group clearly recalled the Bryant-Wally Butts story which resulted in a $10,000,000 suit against the magazine.)

"That's where discipline comes in. You've got to discipline yourself all the time. You can't let your wife get you down nor go to practice thinking about a $10,000,000 lawsuit. You just take it out on your kids and then you're not a winning coach anymore.

BRYANT THEN COMMENTED on desire. "It's always nice to have players with ability, but I'd rather surround myself with men of desire. If I see a coach or player without desire, the fellow isn't going to be around me very long.

"Like baseball, for instance. I'd rather have a .200 hitter with desire and who'll win for me, than the .400 hitter whose team always loses.

"Surround yourself with winners. At the start of this season I had a little runt who didn't stand up to my waist and another kid who was on the fourth team. I noticed in practice these kids were all over the field, so I moved them both to the top. We went to a bowl game and won with both these kids starring. Without them I'd probably have been in front of a TV set on New Year's Day.

"On the other hand, not all these college all-Americas are the kind of kids I want. For instance, last December I flew to another part of the country to interview a big-name prospect. On the way home I told one of my assistants that we didn't want the boy. After a three-hour talk the only thing he discussed was how much time he'd have to spend practicing.

"He didn't talk about the team or about winning, just about how much he'd have to work. I don't want that player on my club, although the boy's now with another team in my conference and probably some day will come back and beat me."

"PLAN FOR EVERYTHING," continued Bryant. "Every day I have a plan for everybody. I change those plans if a practice or a game goes bad because I know then that I was wrong. Even if I win and I think my plan went wrong, I'll use another plan next week.

"I even plan Wednesday what to say to the press Saturday, whether I win or lose. Even on Thursday I have a plan for NEXT WEEK'S GAME. I don't wait until Sunday to concentrate on the following game.

"The most important thing for a head coach is to know when to use the words, I, we and they. If things going bad, I tell the fellows it was MY fault. If we did well, I say THEY did a heckuva job.

"Some coaches tell the press that mistakes beat their teams. To hell with that. If my team loses, I tell the boys and press that I am responsible.

"MY planning was wrong and that's why we lost the game. You don't blame the other fellow and win football games."

Thus, the success story of Paul W. Bryant.

Blades Settle for 3-3 Tie on Disputed Goal

By RICH ROBERTS

The Blades, who usually come out on the short end, at least came out even against the Vancouver Canucks, 3-3, Saturday night.

The second largest Western Hockey League crowd of the season at the L.A. Sports Arena, 8,226, was treated to a strong last-period comeback by the Blades on a pair of goals by Norm Johnson, and nobody left during 10 minutes of high-pressure overtime.

It was the Blades' first tie of the season and the first time they haven't lost to Vancouver in eight games.

Vancouver had a 2-0 lead after the first period, but Johnson's goals put the Blades in front, 3-2, halfway through the last period only to have a recent teammate, Gordy Vejprava, come back to force the deadlock on a disputed goal.

Jake Hendrickson scored the other Blade goal after Bryan Hextall and Larry Popein hit for Vancouver.

The Blades weren't too happy with the tie, claiming Vejprava was offside when he made it 3-3 with 4½ minutes to go.

Coach Lynn Patrick, who just last week blasted a Victoria linesman for allowing the decisive goal in a loss up north, said, "You expect to get the worst of it on the road, but we get it at home, too. Vejprava was across the blue line before the puck."

Vejprava, traded to Vancouver for Buddy Boone early this season, showed no remorse about breaking his old friends' hearts.

"I got to say it feels good," he said. "Offside? I don't think I was. I was at the red line looking for (Jack) Evans to give me the puck and when he passed it I just took off."

Vejprava broke through defensemen Bob Wilson and Ray LaRose, faked goalie Marcel Pelletier out and down and hit an open net.

But Hendrickson matched that feat to bring the Blades back to 2-1 midway in the middle period. With Howie Young in the penalty box, Hendrickson picked up the puck from Pelletier in his own end and the Canucks gave him a wide berth all the way down the rink.

It was Pelletier's fifth assist of the season — four more than any other WHL goalie.

The Blades hung in limbo for the next 18 minutes, as if trying to decide whether to fight for it or forget it.

Then Johnson took charge and suddenly they were on top, 3-2. At 9:07 of the last period, their steady center caromed a 30-footer off the cross bar to tie it at 2-2, then 2½ minutes later Jabbed in Jim Baird's rebound at the corner.

BLUE LINES: Cliff Pennington, who had played in only one game since December, was released by the Blades. He has applied for reinstatement as an amateur. The Boston Bruins retained his professional services. The shakeup in the Blades' line left Brian Smyth out in the cold. He did not suit up. The Blades play at Seattle tonight, Vancouver Tuesday and Portland Wednesday, then return home to meet Victoria Thursday and Saturday. . . . In a broom-ball thriller between the first two periods, the Blade Boosters, using their own referee and getting all the breaks, lost out against the valiant but outmanned hockey writers. . . .

Vancouver's Bob McCusker had to leave for repairs in the second period after Howie Young sliced his cheek. McCusker was just getting up as Young skated by wielding a wicked stick. . . . Saturday's crowd was topped this season only by Wednesday's 8,329. . . . Howie Hughes of Vancouver had scored 14 points in 6 goals, 8 assists) on the Blades, going into Saturday's game, more than any other player in the league this season.

Duke, Kentucky Tack Up Wins

Compiled from Wire Reports.

Duke's top-ranked basketball team pulled away from North Carolina State in the last seven minutes Saturday for an 84-77 victory, 13th in a row for the once-beaten Blue Devils.

Jack Marin, benched with four fouls, came back and scored seven crucial points in the final half to help Duke clinch its seventh Atlantic Coast Conference win in eight starts.

Marin was high scorer for Duke with 20 points. Pete Coker and Eddie Beidenbach had 25 each for State. The game was tied 17 times.

LOUIE Dampier led second-ranked Kentucky to its best defensive performance of the season as the Wildcats overwhelmed Auburn 115-78 in a Conference game.

Auburn never challenged, but refused to yield until the opening minute of the second half. The Wildcats took a 13-point halftime advantage and added four quick baskets and a free throw after intermission while Auburn was scoreless.

Dampier forsook his usual long-range bombing in favor of driving lay-ups. He had 11 field goals and 10 of 13 free throws for 32 points. The win was Kentucky's 14th without a loss.

Michigan got a scare from stubborn Wisconsin but the Wolverines eked out a 69-67 victory to remain unbeaten in the Big 10 race.

All-America Cazzie Russell scored 21 points, far below his season average of 30 per game, to lead the winners. He was held to one field goal in the second half and didn't get on the scoreboard in the half until 10 minutes were gone.

A closing spurt led by Jimmy Walker brought third-ranked Providence from behind in the second half to stave off an upset bid and produce an 80-77 victory over Niagara.

Walker produced 15 of the 33 points for the Friars in the comeback effort. He wound up with 30 points. Niagara lost four men on fouls.

A tap-in field goal by Glinder Torain with 35 seconds remaining fired the Dayton Flyers to a 79-76 triumph over St. Joseph's.

Loyola of Chicago, down by as many as 12 points in the final half, stormed back in the final two minutes to defeat Kansas State 76-70 for the Ramblers 13th consecutive win.

Billy Smith led Loyola with 21 points while Doug Wardlaw kicked in with 19, 17 of them in the second half.

Vanderbilt, apparently looking ahead to the Kentucky game next week, experimented with a mixture of defenses and led all the way in posting a 98-66 victory over LSU. Clyde Lee led the winners with 24 points.

WASHINGTON ran away in the second half and blitzed a touring Hawaii club, 87-58.

Led by Stan Washington's 22 points, Michigan State trounced Northwestern 77-68 to hang on to second place in Big 10 play.

Louisville handed Bradley its worst defeat of the season, drubbing the Braves 103-71. Westley Unseld scored 24 points and picked off 19 rebounds to lead the winners.

IS TITLE ON LINE IN LAKER CLASH?

By DOUG IVES

The NBA's Western Division title could be virtually decided tonight when the front-running Lakers take on their nearest challenger, the Baltimore Bullets, before an anticipated 13,000 fans in the L.A. Sports Arena, starting at 7:05.

A Laker victory would boost the division lead to five games with 24 to play, meaning they could play .500 ball down the stretch and Baltimore would have to finish 18-6 to overtake them.

On the other hand, a win by the Bullets would trim the Laker margin to three games and make it possible for Baltimore to tie the Lakers by beating them in their three remaining head-on meetings.

Obviously, tonight's game is the most pivotal of the year for the Lakers, and coach Fred Schaus is thereby happy to have his pivot position entrusted to Leroy Ellis. He scored 19 points Friday.

NL Draws Wrath of Wisconsin

MILWAUKEE (AP) —Circuit Judge Elmer T. Roller ordered the National League Saturday to show cause why the trial date for Wisconsin's anti-trust suit should not be advanced.

Roller had set the date last week for March 7. But Saturday he signed an order to the National League to show cause at 10 a.m. Monday why the trial should not be advanced no later than Feb. 21.

Earlier Saturday, Atty. Gen. Bronson la Follette said he would seek the earlier trial date because of the league's "open defiance" of the Wisconsin court.

Warren Giles, president of the league, said Friday the league had authorized the Braves to fulfill their obligation in Atlanta and disregarded an order issued by Judge Roller Thursday to prepare to play in Milwaukee this season.

"In view of the open defiance by the National League of the lawful orders of the Wisconsin court," La Follette said, "the State of Wisconsin will request Judge Elmer Roller to advance the trial date of March 7 so that effective relief may be obtained well in advance of the baseball season."

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, the Braves opened the sale of tickets for opening day, April 12, and continued to insist they will be there for the opening game in the city's new $18 million stadium.

The Braves said they would begin accepting mail order tickets Saturday and would start over-the-counter sales Feb. 15.

12,500 See 'Trotters Have a Lark

By DAVE DANIEL

The Harlem Globetrotters proved again Saturday night that they are still the undisputed kings of laugh-provoking basketball before 12,500 fans in the Long Beach Arena.

Meadowlark Lemon, whose famous antics have dubbed him the clown prince, provided the spark — both for the Trotters and for the fans. He scored 22 points and parlayed most of them into laughs.

Now in their 40th year and working toward win No. 8,500, the Trotters were backed by former all-Americas Hallie Bryant and Connie Hawkins, and the humorous dribbling of Freddie Neal.

Ageless Satchel Paige, legendary baseball pitcher who was with Kansas City last season, joined the Trotters in their famous baseball routine to the delight of the crowd.

By the way, the final score was 85 for the Trotters to 76 for the opposing Washington Generals.

RICH ROBERTS

Here Today, And Gone, Gone, Gone

"We're primarily concerned with the comedy style basketball, but we must play basketball in order to get a lead. If we lose that'd be a tragedy. People wouldn't like that too well . . . be like murdering Santa Claus."

The big man rolled over in bed—another bed in another room in another hotel in another town that could hardly wait until the Harlem Globetrotters got there.

"Sometimes we forget which town we played in last night," sighs Hallie Bryant. "Myself, if I say it's Tuesday it might be Wednesday or Thursday, if I'm just waking up."

Over in another room a flock of 45-rpm's are strewn over the floor while a tiny, travel-worn portable phonograph blares rock 'n' roll. A bigger man reaches down to shut it off.

"Let's see," says Connie Hawkins, "we played—oh, yeah—Ventura last night and I think we go to San Diego tonight. How far's San Diego? Two-and-a-half hours?"

He groans. "No, it's not much of a life for a married man. She travels a little bit to see me, but mostly she stays home in Pittsburgh with our little girl. I manage to call home less than my roommate, Miller Davis. He calls home every night. We keep the phone pretty well tied up."

THEY MAY NOT REMEMBER, but "last night" Bryant and Hawkins played in Long Beach. This afternoon they play at the L.A. Sports Arena. Monday they play in San Bernardino.

That's the way it is with the Globetrotters—here today, gone tomorrow. Bryant's more fortunate, being a bachelor, but Hawkins manages to reconcile his career to marriage, in a shrugging sort of way.

Between them they've seen more of the world than the astronauts, and visited more foreign capitals than Averill Harriman, all the while playing basketball against a team they could beat any day of the week and twice on Sunday and usually do.

Bryant, a 9-year Trotter, never has lost to the Washington Generals or whatever else they've called these traveling patsies that provide a tailor-made setup anywhere on earth. But he won't knock 'em, either.

"They're a professional team, too," he points out earnestly. "They don't just lie down and let us beat 'em to death. They try to give us a good game, and most of the time they do. We play quite a bit of competitive ball here."

BRYANT HAD SOME all-America mention at Indiana U. and a tryout with the St. Louis Hawks, but has never regretted casting his lot with the Globetrotters.

"I did want to see quite a bit of the world," he says, "so I think things turned out for the better."

Hawkins, who played a season at Iowa, joined the Trotters four years ago when the American Basketball League—remember the Long Beach Chiefs?—went broke.

"I enjoy what I'm doing now more so than competitive basketball," he says, but quickly picks up Bryant's cue. "Well, actually we're playing competitive basketball but . . . well, like Meadowlark Lemon, the antics that he put on out there—you know, the fellows as a whole team, they'll have me laughing all the time."

Most of the Globetrotter repertoire has the air of spontaneity, and Hawkins insists that much of it really is ad lib material.

"Every day they get something new going on out there. Actually, I don't participate in too much of the comedy, and we have basically a rather routine show. But a lot of it is also creative. They amaze me some nights out there—they really do. Some nights I'll be laughing harder than the crowd."

TOGETHER, HAWKINS and Bryant have been to countries that Rand McNally is still trying to find—some 87 in all. Some they liked, some they didn't, but all they found interesting.

"Once we spent 17 days behind the Iron Curtain," Bryant recalls. "I was kinda glad to get out of there. We felt like people were watching us all the time, every place we went. It's not too good a feeling."

"I didn't like it, either," Hawkins says. "It was strange. We'd have capacity crowds and right after the game the streets would be empty. It was sort of dead.

"During the daytime when we got a chance to walk around you see everybody walking around with briefcases under their arms. About nine out of 10 people have some type of brief case. I don't think they'll even be talking to each other . . . just walking along, like spies, like they're spying on each other."

COMPETITIVE OR NOT, the Globetrotters are easily adapted to playing under any sort of conditions.

"One time in Germany—can't remember just where," Bryant says, "we even played in a swimming pool. It was the only place they had, so they hung a basket at each end and we played."

It was drained, of course?

"No, as a matter of fact it had two or three feet of water in it. We couldn't dribble very well, so we just passed the ball around a lot."

Hawkins tells of playing in a bull ring in Spain where "the blood was still on the ground," but perhaps his most awesome experience was performing before three consecutive capacity crowds in the ancient Colosseum at Athens.

"I was afraid they were going to turn those lions loose any minute," he recalls.

Miami Hires George Wilson

Lemm Back as Oilers Coach

GEORGE WILSON
Defects From NFL

Ex-Detroit Coach Gets 3-Yr. Pact

MIAMI (AP) — George Wilson, who led the Detroit Lions to a championship his first season and then resigned amid controversy two years ago, was named head coach of the Miami Dolphins Saturday.

Wilson, 51, signed a three-year contract with the new American Football League entry and immediately began looking for a staff.

He said he would hire six assistants, which would give the Dolphins one of the three largest coaching staffs in professional football.

THE SELECTION was announced by Dolphin president Joe Robbie, who called Wilson "a lifetime winner."

"We think we got the most experienced and best man available," Robbie told a press conference.

Wilson, a former Northwestern and Chicago Bear end, has been a coach since 1947. Last season, he was an assistant to the Washington Redskins.

The season before he quit the Detroit Lions where he had built a 54-45-6 record, plus the world championship in 1957 and three playoff bowl victories. His assistants had been fired from under him, and he said he doubted he could control his staff any longer.

"It took me 20 years to find a coaching home in Miami," Wilson said, "but I finally made it."

HE SAID he was impressed with the college and AFL draft selections of Joe Thomas, director of player personnel.

One of the first things Wilson said he would look for would be a linebacker coach.

"The linebackers sort of get lost in the shuffle in most places," he said. "We don't want that to happen here."

Robbie said he and Wilson would select a training camp within 80 miles of Miami to open preseason practice in mid-July.

WALLY LEMM
Oilers' 6th Coach

Houston Extends 'Long' Contract

HOUSTON (UPI) — Wally Lemm, who brought the Houston Oilers their last American Football League championship in 1961, was rehired Saturday by the Oilers.

The Lemm appointment finally rounded out a top-level administrative shakeup that saw former head coach Hugh (Bones) Taylor leave in a huff after a 4-10 season and a new three-year contract that never materialized.

The 46-year-old Lemm was the coach of the year of the AFL in 1961 when he guided the Oilers to 10 straight victories and their second straight championship after duties following the fifth game of the season.

Lemm is the sixth head coach to be named by the Oilers since they came into the AFL in 1960.

The Oilers said they gave Lemm a "long term contract," but terms of the deal were not released. Lemm said it was for "more than a year."

Lemm was fired this month as head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League. He left Houston to join the Cardinals in 1962.

Lemm was bounced by the Cardinals in a dispute over whether he would move his home from Lake Bluff, Ill., to St. Louis. He had piloted the Cardinals to a 27-20-3 record during the past four seasons, including a second-place finish in 1964 and third place in 1963.

Lucky Yields to Rain

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Rain and gale winds forced postponement Saturday of the third round of the $57,000 Lucky International golf tournament.

Rain in moderate to heavy amounts, pushed by winds up to 40 miles per hour, lashed Harding Park's 6,692-yard par-71 layout and Steve Shabala, acting PGA tournament supervisor, finally called it off at mid-day after first ordering a 45 minute delay in play.

The postponement left Frank Beard, 26 year old Louisville, Ky., star still out in front with a three-stroke lead at the end of 36 holes.

★ ★ ★ ★

IF WEATHER permits, the third round will be played today with the final 18 on Monday.

Beard's total at the halfway point was 66-67—133, nine under par, with Dave Ragan, Larry Mowry, Ray Floyd and golfing buddies Mike Souchak and Ken Venturi all tied at 136.

Twenty pros had completed play when Shabala ordered the postponement.

Lost in the deluge were two fine 69's, two under par, turned in by Ted Makalena of Honolulu and ex-Marine Phil Rodgers. Their 54-hole totals would have been even par 213s.

Venturi, asked what he was doing when officials cancelled the round, said:

"The backstroke, what else?"

Slow Mile Triumph by Grelle

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Veteran Jim Grelle ran away from the field to win the mile in a disappointing 4:08.8 in the sixth Oregon indoor track and field meet Saturday night.

Bob Day of UCLA defeated Gerry Lindgren of Washington State in a collegiate indoor record time of 8:33 for the two-mile. Lindgren's time was 8:34.

Otis Burrell, Nevada high jumper, soared 7-2¼. It was only three quarters of an inch under the all-time collegiate best, set by John Thomas.

Grelle, who upset Kenya's Kipchoge Keino at Los Angeles last week in 4:00.9, said before the meet he would run only to win and he stuck to his word.

He ran just off the pace most of the way and sprinted into the lead with two laps to go in the 11-lap race.

Oregon's Dave Wilborn was second in 4:12.4 and Oregon freshman Roscoe Divine was third in the same time.

Al Rockwell of Brigham Young captured the 60-yard high hurdles in a meet record-equalling 7.2 seconds.

In the 1,000-yard run, UCLA's Dennis Breckow whipped Oregon's Wade Bell in 2:11.3. Bell was timed in 2:12.8.

Lawson Shatters Boston Record

Combined Wire Services

BOSTON—John Lawson of Kansas shattered the two-mile meet record by nearly nine seconds, and Willie Davenport of Southern University equalled a 24-year-old 45-yard hurdles mark to highlight the 77th Boston Athletic Assn. indoor track meet here Saturday.

Lawson jumped ahead and outran everyone handily to finish in 8:39.8, shattering Irish Tom O'Riordan's 1964 standard of 8:48.0. But Lawson was well off the indoor mark of 8:30.7.

Davenport scaled the hurdles in 5.4 seconds to equal Charles Hlad's mark set back in 1942.

Others who equalled indoor and meet marks were Theron Lewis of Southern U. and Sam Perry of Fordam. Lewis clocked 48.0 in the 440 to tie Wendell Mottley's 1964 record, and Perry flashed 5.3 to equal the Boston standard held by five others.

Other winners were Czechoslovakia's Joseph Odlozil in the mile at a slow 4:05.2, Richard Ross with a high jump of 7 feet, Tom Farrell at 1:09.5 in the 600 and Canada's Bill Crothers in the 1,000 at 2:09.9.

'It's All Been an Act,' Clay

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Cassius Clay says his weigh-in tantrums, "I am the greatest" front, and other eccentricites attributed to the heavyweight champion are just an act.

In a five-part interview with Philadelphia sportscaster Jim Leaming (KYW-TV) Clay also said boxing's survival depends more on "more white hopes," that he does not have nor need a killer instinct, plans to get married again, and may become a world traveler when his ring career is over.

Clay says his pronouncements of invincibility, his poetry gimmick and other unusual actions were all part of a carefully planned program to lead him to the heavyweight title. He claims it all started while watching a wrestling program on television.

"There was the wrestler, I think his name was Gorgeous George," says Clay. "He was shouting 'I'm going to annihilate the bum, kill him, pull his hair, he better not show up.'"

Clay said he decided to become the bad guy as a gimmick to help make himself a gate attraction.

This he claims, started him waxing poetic predictions on the outcome of his fights, screaming his invincibility, describing himself as beautiful. "I talk too much because it makes people come and see me, hoping I'll get beat," he says.

"I tricked them in. Of course I had to back up what I said. I did and I ran after the fight to the bank."

ANGEL CRACKDOWN--

have employed a "common sense" curfew and there have been few major fines since the firm of Chance and Belinsky was severed. Golf and other diversions have been allowed during the spring and will continue to be "unless," said Rigney, "my players show more desire in getting to the golf course than they do the ballpark."

Rigney revealed that the new policy was born of the Angels' failure to deal heavily in the trading market this winter.

"We decided," he confided, "to either make a lot of personnel changes or toughen up our approach. We didn't make the changes so we are going to change the attitude of the personnel we do have.

"I am, of course, concerned with what my players do off the field because it goes hand-in-hand with what they do on the field and, more important, how they go about doing it.

"Some of the players have been traveling a one-way street and you take out of this game only what you put in it. They were young before — virtually babies—but they are all 23 and 24 now. They are experienced and they have more at stake this year than ever before.

"In the past, we have allowed them to be masters of their own destiny. That failed, and so from now on the 24 hours of each day will be done my way. We must bring our pattern of play up to our capabilities."

What are those capabilities?

"All I know," said Rigney, "is that Minnesota won it last year by finding a way to play the game that was entirely new to them. Sure, the Yankees went to the hospital, but the Twins hustled and ran right by everyone.

"My players know what is expected of them. Disciplinary action shouldn't be necessary. They had the spirit once—in '62."

The shadow of Anaheim Stadium will extend over Palm Springs.

"We owe the people spending all the money more than they received last year," said Rigney. "If it takes us from 9 to 5 we'll give it to them."

BILL BRADLEY
All-America Ideal

He's In a Rut

Bradley, a Scholar on Basketball Court, Winner of Sullivan Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Bradley, the spectacular basketball star who epitomized the all-America ideal, was named the winner Saturday of the Sullivan Award as 1965's top U. S. amateur athlete.

The former Princeton player, now a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, was chosen in a poll of 486 sportsmen, sports writers and broadcasters conducted by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Bradley is the first basketball player ever selected for the award, which was established in 1930, and the first team sport athlete to be named since Army football star Arnold Tucker was chosen in 1916.

Swimmer Don Schollander was last year's winner.

Bradley was placed first on 124 ballots, second on 67 and third on 31, and received 852 points on a 5-3-1 basis.

Behind him in the voting came five track and field men—Ralph Boston, Randy Matson, Marine Lt. Billy Mills, the late Capt. Ron Zinn and Gerry Lindgren. Cathy Ferguson, the swimmer from Los Angeles, was seventh.

Bradley climaxed his sensational collegiate career by leading Princeton to a surprise third place in the NCAA tournament. He was the complete player—exciting, unselfish, inspiring and amazingly talented.

Boston, who set the world broad jump record of 27 feet, 4¾ inches, received 82 first-place votes and 707 points. Matson, the mammoth shot putter from Texas A&M whose 70-7 effort shattered the world record, got 75 firsts and 635 points.

Mills, the long distance runner, was given 53 first and 603 points while Zinn, a former walking champion who was killed in Viet Nam last July while serving as an Army captain, received 61 firsts and 448 points.

"At the moment my studies at Oxford are more important than basketball," he said. "My first concern is to concentrate on my studies at Oxford. Then I want to go home and study law. He still enjoys the occasional game of basketball but he's quick to point out that playing the game in Europe—occasionally when he turns out for Simmenthal of Milan—is far different from playing in college in the U. S. It's much more relaxing.

Voting in the 1965 Sullivan Award competition, with first-place votes in parentheses and points on a 5-3-1 basis:

1. Bill Bradley, basketball 12	852
2. Ralph Boston, track 82	707
3. Randy Matson, track 75	635
4. Billy Mills, track 53	603
5. Capt. Ron Zinn, track 61	448
6. Gerry Lindgren, track 37	357
7. Cathy Ferguson, swimming 10	182
8. Kenny Wiesenhahn, swimming 13	138
9. Dick Roth, swimming 13	134
10. Jim Ryun, track 7	106

Here Today, And Gone, Gone, Gone

"We're primarily concerned with the comedy style basketball, but we must play basketball in order to get a lead. If we lose that'd be a tragedy. People wouldn't like that too well . . . be like murdering Santa Claus."

The big man rolled over in bed—another bed in another room in another hotel in another town that could hardly wait until the Harlem Globetrotters got there.

"Sometimes we forget which town we played in last night," sighs Hallie Bryant. "Myself, if I say it's Tuesday it might be Wednesday or Thursday, if I'm just waking up."

Over in another room a flock of 45-rpm's are strewn over the floor while a tiny, travel-worn portable phonograph blares rock 'n' roll. A bigger man reaches down to shut it off.

"Let's see," says Connie Hawkins, "we played—oh, yeah—Ventura last night and I think we go to San Diego tonight. How far's San Diego? Two-and-a-half hours?"

He groans. "No, it's not much of a life for a married man. She travels a little bit to see me, but mostly she stays home in Pittsburgh with our little girl. I manage to call home less than my roommate, Miller Davis. He calls home every night. We keep the phone pretty well tied up."

THEY MAY NOT REMEMBER, but "last night" Bryant and Hawkins played in Long Beach. This afternoon they play at the L.A. Sports Arena. Monday they play in San Bernardino.

That's the way it is with the Globetrotters—here today, gone tomorrow. Bryant's more fortunate, being a bachelor, but Hawkins manages to reconcile his career to marriage, in a shrugging sort of way.

Between them they've seen more of the world than the astronauts, and visited more foreign capitals than Averill Harriman, all the while playing basketball against a team they could beat any day of the week and twice on Sunday and usually do.

Bryant, a 9-year 'Trotter, never has lost to the Washington Generals or whatever else they've called these traveling patsies that provide a tailor-made setup anywhere on earth. But he won't knock 'em, either.

"They're a professional team, too," he points out earnestly. "They don't just lie down and let us beat 'em to death. They try to give us a good game, and most of the time they do. We play quite a bit of competitive ball here."

BRYANT HAD SOME all-America mention at Indiana U. and a tryout with the St. Louis Hawks, but has never regretted casting his lot with the Globetrotters.

"I did want to see quite a bit of the world," he says, "so I think things turned out for the better."

Hawkins, who played a season at Iowa, joined the 'Trotters four years ago when the American Basketball League—remember the Long Beach Chiefs?—went broke.

"I enjoy what I'm doing now more so than competitive basketball," he says, but quickly picks up Bryant's cue. "Well, actually we're playing competitive basketball but . . . well, like Meadowlark Lemon, the antics that he put on out there—you know, the fellows as a whole team, they'll have me laughing all the time."

Most of the Globetrotter repertoire has the air of spontaneity, and Hawkins insists that much of it really is ad lib material.

"Every day they got something new going on out there. Actually, I don't participate in too much of the comedy, and we have basically a rather routine show. But a lot of it is also creative. They amaze me some nights out there—they really do. Some nights I'll be laughing harder than the crowd."

TOGETHER, HAWKINS and Bryant have been to countries that Rand McNally is still trying to find—some 87 in all. Some they liked, some they didn't, but all they found interesting.

"Once we spent 17 days behind the Iron Curtain," Bryant recalls. "I was kinda glad to get out of there. We felt like people were watching us all the time, every place we went. It's not too good a feeling."

"I didn't like it, either," Hawkins says. "It was strange. We'd have capacity crowds and right after the game the streets would be empty. It was sort of dead.

"During the daytime when we got a chance to walk around you see everybody walking around with briefcases under their arms. About nine out of 10 people have some type of brief case. I don't think they'll even be talking to each other . . . just walking along, like spies, like they're spying on each other."

COMPETITIVE OR NOT, the Globetrotters are easily adapted to playing under any sort of conditions.

"One time in Germany—can't remember just where," Bryant says, "we even played in a swimming pool. It was the only place they had, so they hung a basket at each end and we played."

It was drained, of course?

"No, as a matter of fact it had two or three feet of water in it. We couldn't dribble very well, so we just passed the ball around a fot."

Hawkins tells of playing in a bull ring in Spain where "the blood was still on the ground," but perhaps his most awesome experience was performing before three consecutive capacity crowds in the ancient Colosseum at Athens.

"I was afraid they were going to turn those lions loose any minute," he recalls.

ARNIE NEEDS A NAVY
Arnie's Army became amphibious Saturday when rain soaked the Harding Park golf course and washed out third round of the Lucky International. Here Palmer watches greenkeeper sweep water off seventh green.

Lucky Yields to Rain

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Rain and gale winds forced postponement Saturday of the third round of the $57,000 Lucky International golf tournament.

Rain in moderate to heavy amounts, pushed by winds up to 40 miles per hour, lashed Harding Park's 6,692 yard par-71 layout and Steve Shabala, acting PGA tournament supervisor, finally called it off at mid-day after first ordering a 45 minute delay in play.

The postponement left Frank Beard, 26 year old Louisville, Ky., star still out in front with a three-stroke lead at the end of 36 holes.

IF WEATHER permits, the third round will be played today with the final 18 on Monday.

Beard's total at the halfway point was 66-67—133, nine under par, with Dave Ragan, Larry Mowry, Ray Floyd and golfing buddies Mike Souchak and Ken Venturi all tied at 136.

Twenty pros had completed play when Shahala ordered the postponement.

Lost in the deluge were two fine 69's, two under par, turned in by Ted Makalena of Honolulu and ex-Marine Phil Rodgers. Their 54-hole totals would have been even par 213s.

Venturi, asked what he was doing when officials cancelled the round, said:

"The backstroke, what else?"

Miami Hires George Wilson

GEORGE WILSON
Defects From NFL

Ex-Detroit Coach Gets 3-Yr. Pact

MIAMI (UPI)—George Wilson, who led the Detroit Lions to a championship his first season and then resigned amid controversy two years ago, was named head coach of the Miami Dolphins Saturday.

Wilson, 51, signed a three-year contract with the new American Football League entry and immediately began looking for a staff.

He said he would hire six assistants, which would give the Dolphins one of the three largest coaching staffs in professional football.

THE SELECTION was announced by Dolphin president Joe Robbie, who called Wilson "a lifetime winner."

"We think we got the most experienced and best man available," Robbie told a press conference.

Wilson, a former Northwestern and Chicago Bear end, has been a coach since 1947. Last season, he was an assistant to the Washington Redskins.

The season before he quit the Detroit Lions where he had built a 54-45-6 record, plus the world championship in 1957 and three playoff bowl victories. His assistants had been fired from under him, and he said he doubted he could control his staff any longer.

"It took me 29 years to find a coaching home in Miami," Wilson said, "but I finally made it."

HE SAID he was impressed with the college and AFL draft selections of Joe Thomas, director of player personnel.

One of the first things Wilson said he would look for would be a linebacker coach.

"The linebackers sort of get lost in the shuffle in most places," he said. "We don't want that to happen here."

Robbie said he and Wilson would select a training camp within 80 miles of Miami to open preseason practice in mid-July.

WALLY LEMM
Oilers' 6th Coach

Houston Extends 'Long' Contract

HOUSTON (UPI) — Wally Lemm, who brought the Houston Oilers their last American Football League championship in 1961, was rehired Saturday by the Oilers.

The Lemm appointment finally rounded out a top-level administrative shakeup that saw former head coach Hugh (Bones) Taylor leave in a huff after a 4-10 season and a new three-year contract that never materialized.

The 46-year-old Lemm was the coach of the year of the AFL in 1961 when he guided the Oilers to 10 straight victories and their second straight championship after duties following the fifth game of the season.

Lemm is the sixth head coach to be named by the Oilers since they came into the AFL in 1960.

The Oilers said they gave Lemm a "long term contract," but terms of the deal were not released. Lemm said it was for "more than a year."

Lemm was fired this month as head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League. He left Houston to join the Cardinals in 1962.

Lemm was hounced by the Cardinals in a dispute over whether he would move his home from Lake Bluff, Ill., to St. Louis. He had piloted the Cardinals to a 27-26-3 record during the past four seasons, including a second place finish in 1964 and third place in 1963.

Slow Mile Triumph by Grelle

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Veteran Jim Grelle ran away from the field to win the mile in a disappointing 4:08.8 in the sixth Oregon indoor track and field meet Saturday night.

Bob Day of UCLA defeated Gerry Lindgren of Washington State in a collegiate indoor record time of 8:33 for the two-mile. Lindgren's time was 8:34.

Otis Burrell, Nevada high jumper, soared 7-2¼. It was only three quarters of an inch under the all-time collegiate best, set by John Thomas.

Grelle, who upset Kenya's Kipchoge Keino at Los Angeles last week in 4:00.9, said before the meet he would run only to win and he stuck to his word.

He ran just off the pace most of the way and sprinted into the lead with two laps to go in the 11-lap race.

Oregon's Dave Wilborn was second in 4:12.4 and Oregon freshman Roscoe Divine was third in the same time.

Al Rockwell of Brigham Young captured the 60-yard high hurdles in a meet record-equalling 7.2 seconds.

In the 1,000-yard run, UCLA's Dennis Breckow whipped Oregon's Wade Bell in 2:11.3. Bell was timed in 2:12.8.

Lawson Shatters Boston Record

Combined Wire Services

BOSTON—John Lawson of Kansas shattered the two-mile meet record by nearly nine seconds, and Willie Davenport of Southern University equalled a 24-year-old 45-yard hurdles mark to highlight the 77th Boston Athletic Assn. indoor track meet here Saturday.

Lawson jumped ahead and outran everyone handily to finish in 8:39.8, shattering Irish Tom O'Riordan's 1964 standard of 8:48.0. But Lawson was well off the indoor mark of 8:30.7.

Davenport scaled the hurdles in 5.4 seconds to equal Charles Hlad's mark set back in 1942.

Others who equalled indoor and meet marks were Theron Lewis of Southern U. and Sam Perry of Fordam. Lewis clocked 48.0 in the 440 to tie Wendell Mottley's 1964 record, and Perry flashed 5.3 to equal the Boston standard held by five others.

Other winners were Czechoslovakia's Joseph Odlozil in the mile at a slow 4:05.2, Richard Ross with a high jump of 7 feet, Tom Farrell at 1:09.5 in the 600 and Canada's Bill Crothers in the 1,000 at 2:09.0.

'It's All Been an Act,' Clay

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Cassius Clay says his weigh-in tantrums, "I am the greatest" front, and other eccentricites attributed to the heavyweight champion are just an act.

In a five-part interview with Philadelphia sportscaster Jim Leaming (KYW-TV) Clay also said boxing's survival depends more on "more white hopes," that he does not have nor need a killer instinct, plans to get married again, and may become a world traveler when his ring career is over.

Clay says his pronouncements of invincibility, his poetry gimmick and other unusual actions were all part of a carefully planned program to lead him to the heavyweight title. He claims it all started while watching a wrestling program on television.

"There was the wrestler, I think his name was Gorgeous George," says Clay. "He was shouting 'I'm going to annihilate the bum, kill him, pull his hair, he better not show up."

Clay said he decided to become the bad guy as a gimmick to help make himself a gate attraction.

This he claims, started him waxing poetic predictions on the outcome of his fights, screaming his invincibility, describing himself as beautiful. "I talk too much because it makes people come and see me, hoping I'll get beat," he says.

"I tricked them in. Of course I had to back up what I said. I did and I ran after the fight to the bank."

ANGEL CRACKDOWN--

have employed a "common sense" curfew and there have been few major fines since the firm of Chance and Belinsky was severed. Golf and other diversions have been allowed during the spring and will continue to be "unless," said Rigney, "my players show more desire in getting to the golf course than they do the ballpark."

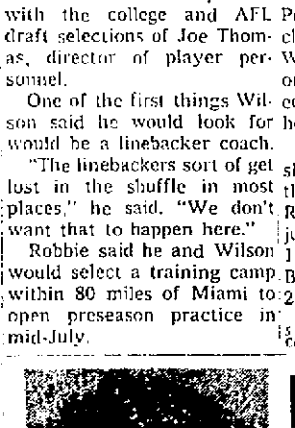
Rigney revealed that the new policy was born of the Angels' failure to deal heavily in the trading market this winter.

"We decided," he confided, "to either make a lot of personnel changes or toughen up our approach. We didn't make the changes so we are going to change the attitude of the personnel we do have.

"I am, of course, concerned with what my players do off the field because it goes hand-in-hand with what they do on the field and, more important, how they go about doing it.

"Some of the players have been traveling a one-way street and you take out of this game only what you put in it. They were young before — virtually babies—but they are all 23 and 24 now. They are experienced and they have more at stake this year than ever before.

"In the past, we have allowed them to be masters of their own destiny. That failed, and so from now on the 24 hours of each day will be done my way. We must bring our pattern of play up to our capabilities."



What are those capabilities?

"All I know," said Rigney, "is that Minnesota won it last year by finding a way to play the game that was entirely new to them. Sure, the Yankees went to the hospital, but the Twins hustled and ran right by everyone.

"My players know what is expected of them. Disciplinary action shouldn't be necessary. They had the spirit once—in '62."

The shadow of Anaheim Stadium will extend over Palm Springs.

"We owe the people spending all the money more than they received last year," said Rigney. "If it takes us from 9 to 5 we'll give it to them."

BILL BRADLEY
All-America Ideal

He's In a Rut

Bradley, a Scholar on Basketball Court, Winner of Sullivan Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Bradley, the spectacular basketball star who epitomized the all-America ideal, was named the winner Saturday of the Sullivan Award as 1965's top U.S. amateur athlete.

The former Princeton player, now a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, was chosen in a poll of 486 sportsmen, sports writers and broadcasters conducted by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Bradley is the first basketball player ever selected for the award, which was established in 1930, and the first team sport athlete to be named since Army football star Arnold Tucker was chosen in 1946.

Swimmer Don Schollander was last year's winner.

Bradley was placed first on 124 ballots, second on 67 and third on 31, and received 852 points on a 5-3-1 basis.

Behind him in the voting came five track and field men—Ralph Boston, Randy Matson, Marine Lt. Billy Mills, the late Capt. Ron Zinn and Gerry Lindgren. Cathy Ferguson, the swimmer from Los Angeles, was seventh.

Bradley climaxed his sensational collegiate career by leading Princeton to a surprise third place in the NCAA tournament. He was the complete player—exciting, unselfish, inspiring and amazingly talented.

Boston, who set the world broad jump record of 27 feet, 4¾ inches, received 82 first-place votes and 707 points. Matson, the mammoth shot putter from Texas A&M whose 70-7 effort shattered the world record, got 75 firsts and 635 points.

Mills, the long distance runner, was given 53 first and 603 points while Zinn, a former walking champion who was killed in Viet Nam last July while serving as an Army captain, received 61 firsts and 448 points.

"At the moment my studies at Oxford are more important than basketball," he said. "My first concern is to concentrate on my studies at Oxford. Then I want to go home and study law." He still enjoys the occasional game of basketball but he's quick to point out that playing the game in Europe—occasionally when he turns out for Simmenthal of Milan—is far different from playing in college in the U.S. It's much more relaxing.

Voting in the 1965 Sullivan Award competition, with first-place votes in parentheses and points on a 5-3-1 basis:

1. Bill Bradley, basketball 12 (82) 852
2. Ralph Boston, track 82 707
3. Randy Matson, track 75 635
4. Billy Mills, track 53 603

A New Face for Candlestick

SAN FRANCISCO—Within a few days, perhaps early this week, Mayor John Shelley of this city is expected to announce plans to expand and renovate Candlestick Park so it can be used by the 49ers of the National Football League as well as the Giants for baseball.

Discussions in recent weeks have been based on expanding Candlestick to 62,000 seats . . . possibly in time for the 49ers to play in the bay front stadium by the 1967 season; no later than in 1968.

The plan that appears most favorable to all concerned provides for double-decked, movable stands being installed in right field to seat 15,000.

Mounted on huge rubber tires or on tracks, they would roll in for football and be stationed along the sidelines. They would then be rolled back to right field for baseball.

Currently, the 49ers play at Kezar Stadium in Golden Gate Park. It seats 59,700.

Only 55,000 of the 62,000 seats planned in the expansion of Candlestick would be good for football . . . but the 49ers still would be way ahead of the game in preferred seating.

Where they only have 13,000 seats between the two goal lines at Kezar, the 49ers would have 28,000 seats in this same space at Candlestick. And this, club spokesmen point out, would spur season ticket sales—the backbone of any pro football club.

★ ★ ★ ★

CANDLESTICK ORIGINALLY WAS designed as an all-purpose stadium rather than just a baseball park. In fact, the Oakland Raiders of the AFL did play football there in 1961 before moving to their own side of the bay.

The Raiders' basic complaint about Candlestick as a football stadium was the same as it is for baseball—too much wind.

The Giants, who hold a 35-year contract on Candlestick, say there is "no problem" in letting the 49ers share the stadium. Schedules would be adjusted to prevent conflict.

Furthermore, in the event the Giants would win a pennant, the 49ers already have agreed to play elsewhere—probably Kezar—until after the World Series.

The reason final plans have not been formulated sooner is the question of which of three ways would be used to finance the project: (1) out of general city funds; (2) by a special bond issue, or (3) by the non-profit corporation (Stadium, Inc.) which was formed to originally build the park.

ALVIN K. BROWNE, PRESIDENT of Stadium, Inc., went on record the past week that the stadium should be acquired lock, stock and barrel by the city. And the sooner the better because city bonds not only can be sold at a much lower interest rate, but city ownership would permit more flexibility in the operation and maintenance of the park.

For instance, the Giants hold fast to their contract which directs all building and improvements to the city, yet the city's purse strings have been shut tight, while Stadium, Inc., which handles the financing for Candlestick, has been reluctant to do anything constructive.

As a result, Candlestick lacks many of the refinements found in newer parks and it also is referred to as a "pig sty."

There are no elevators or escalators in the stadium; one whole section is still without seats, and talk of landscaping the park and painting the bare concrete walls have been just that in recent years—talk.

However, all these items probably will be included in any new building project. Already, a new $1½ million scoreboard is in the works.

CANDLESTICK WAS THE FIRST of eight new ball parks which have been built or will be completed within the next year since the Giants and Dodgers made their important move west in 1958. These stadiums represent a total investment of $175 million.

A half-dozen other cities are either starting new stadiums or will do so within a few months.

Candlestick was the cheapest of the new stadiums. It cost only $14½ million—about seven for construction, 3½ for land costs, and four for sewage and access roads. Thus, there is ample room to develop it up to the point of parks built more recently at a cost still considerably less.

The new seats would cost around $3 million while improvements and landscaping would run no more than another million.

BROWNE REVEALS THAT THE PARK will be paid for well ahead of schedule—another reason why the city can't go wrong in acquiring it. Revenue from the park has been well above original estimates and this will be bolstered with both the Giants and 49ers using it.

Already $2,345,000 has been paid off on the $5 million city bond issue which was authorized on a 15-year basis and Browne says "the deadline of 1973 will be bettered."

Of the $5½ million which Stadium, Inc., borrowed from private capital, $806,000 has been paid back and based on present conditions, these bonds will be completely retired well ahead of their maturity dates—1988 on some and 1993 on others.

The last fiscal year, Stadium, Inc., turned over $440,000 from parking and concession revenue to the city for maintenance of the park. In addition, it settled the final suits totaling $2½ million for work done on Candlestick that wasn't in the original contract for a sum of $525,000.

Candlestick is more than paying for itself, and with the 49ers moving in, can well afford the improvements.

Ted .400 Hitter With Flyrod, Too

Ted Williams was stretched on the rubbing table while Jack Fadden, the Red Sox trainer, kneaded the expensive flexors, probed the priceless extensors. The trainer worked in silence, and as the warmth of the liniment seeped in, Williams drifted into reverie.

"I may not be the greatest hitter of all-time," he mused aloud, "but I am the best dam' flycaster and fisherman ever waded a stream."

He did not belabor the point. Whatever else may be said of Theodore Samuel Williams, he was always a realist, quick to recognize and acknowledge talent in anybody. Including himself.

Being a realist, he must have been confident the baseball writers would vote him into the Hall of Fame. As a player he had his quarrels with individual reporters, and perhaps some of the 20 voters who left his name off their ballots did so out of animosity, but this was a national vote. Twenty-five per cent of the Baseball Writers' membership weren't going to be blinded by prejudice.

So his election could have been no great surprise to him. He welcomed it with the graceful good humor that is as real in him as graceless ill-temper can be.

Admitting that adverse criticism had often riled him, he said that it probably had helped him as a player, too, spurring him to extra effort.

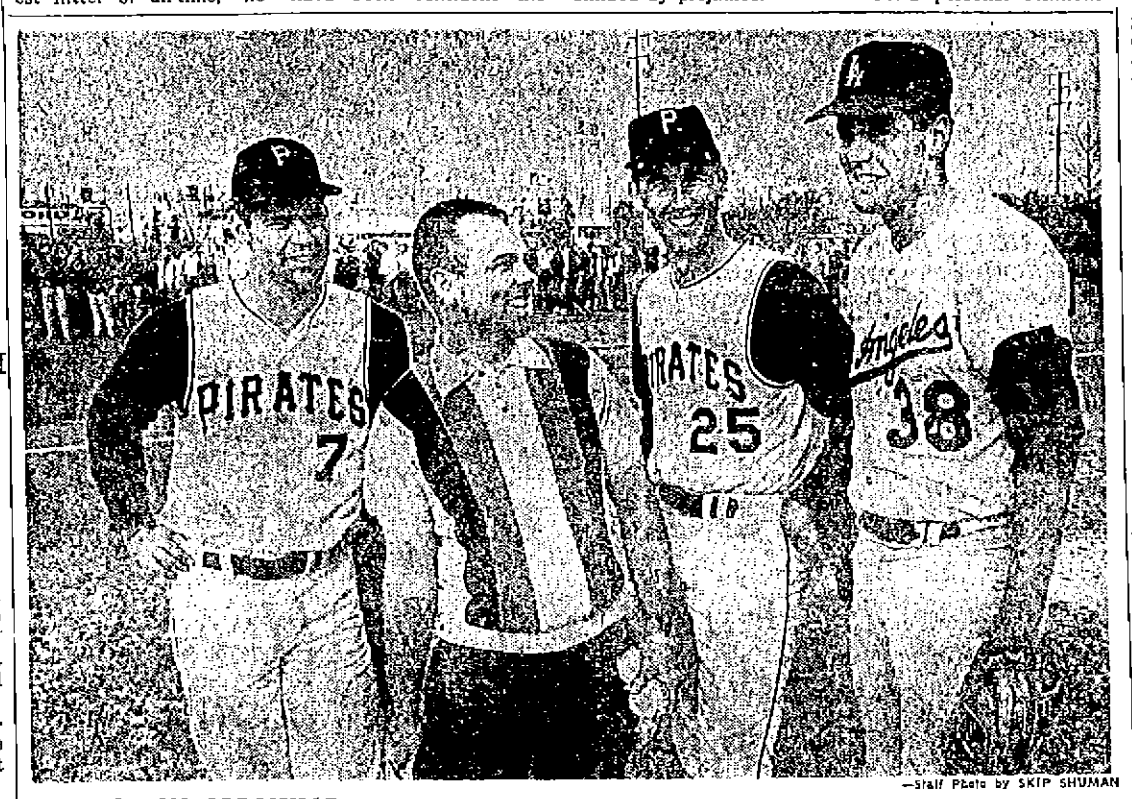
Ted's personal relations with the electors never were an important factor and shouldn't have been emphasized as they were. It is a libel on voters and it demeans the men already in the Hall of Fame to picture this as a popularity contest where likes and dislikes decide the election and winners qualify on charm.

Barring crooks and others guilty of conduct clearly detrimental to the game, candidates should be measured on performance alone.

On that basis, Ted made it to Cooperstown away back in 1941 when he batted .406. The story of that season's conclusion has been worn to a frazzle — how Williams brought an average of .39955 to Philadelphia for the last doubleheader against the Athletics, declined Joe Cronin's invitation to sit out the games and protect the mark which would have appeared as .400 in the records went to bat eight times and made six hits.

The Philadelphia side of the story is not so well-known. Before the Red Sox arrived in town, Al Horwits, the official scorer, told his colleagues in the press box: "I'm going to score very tight. If Ted hits .400, and I hope he does, he has to earn it. He'll get no edge on the close ones."

Connie Mack told Frank Hayes, the catcher: "If first base is open and it means the ball game, it's all right to put Williams on. Otherwise, I want you to pitch to him, just the way you would any other time."



It wasn't an easy day for the Philadelphia pitchers, but the official scorer never had a worry. First time up, Williams hit a screaming drive to right field. On his second trip, the ball cleared the fence. He made two more clean singles in the first game, singled again in the second, and then smashed a loudspeaker horn in right center with a bomb good for two bases.

Although he packed it in as a player five years ago, he still belongs to the Red Sox, whose roster identifies him as "executive assistant." The Sox have been paying him $50,000 a year since he closed with a monstrous home run on Sept. 26, 1960.

In the years when his salary was $125,000 a year, he was taking about $65,000 in cash and leaving the rest in a fund for deferred payments. When he retired, he still had $300,000 due him, and that takes him through 1966.

CLINICALLY SPEAKING

Dodgers Pick Garrett; LBCC Star to A's

NEW YORK (UPI) — Heisman trophy winner Mike Garrett and three other top flight football stars were among 197 players selected Saturday in major league baseball's free agent draft.

Garrett was drafted by the Dodgers for their Albuquerque farm club in a special phase of the draft.

Bob Biletnikoff, University of Miami (Fla.) quarterback, was drafted by the New York Yankees; Fred Mazurek of the Washington Redskins and former U. of Pittsburgh quarterback was selected by the Pittsburgh Pirates, and Archie Roberts, who starred for Columbia and is a member of the Cleveland Browns, was taken by Cincinnati for its Knoxville farm team.

The drafting of Garrett was a speculation move by the Dodgers. When deciding between pro football and baseball, Garrett termed the decision the hardest of his life. However, now having been made, its doubtful the Kansas City Chiefs will allow a $350,000 property to play two sports.

The Dodgers also drafted two pitchers, John Herbst, 21, of North Hollywood and James Roberts of Quinton, Alabama. The Angels made two selections, drafting shortstop Jim Vopicka of Brookfield, Ill., and catcher Ron Cherry of Sun Valley, Calif.

Meanwhile, Long Beach City College's record-breaking pass receiver and all-Metropolitan Conference catcher Ron Drake was drafted by Kansas City. Boston plucked 19-year-old Anaheim hurler Dick Baney.

A total of 102 players were drawn in the special phase of the draft that involved free agents who were selected during last June and September drafts, but failed to sign because they wanted more money or desired to remain in school.

The regular phase of the draft was then conducted for free agents.

Both squads will have World Series flavor also. Manager Gene Mauch of the National League has Lou Johnson and Al Ferrara from the Dodgers while Rigney will use Minnesota pitcher Jim Merritt.

Orange County will rely heavily on the play of the Mata brothers — Eddy and Ronald. The three brothers along with team captain Joe Grundtner have been the backbone of the team's offensive attack all year.

In the team's first meeting the Maccabees fell behind, 3-0, at halftime, but battled back and with five minutes to go tied the match. After playing for 2½ hours, the game was called a tie, but today there must be a winner.

A New Face for Candlestick

SAN FRANCISCO—Within a few days, perhaps early this week, Mayor John Shelley of this city is expected to announce plans to expand and renovate Candlestick Park so it can be used by the 49ers of the National Football League as well as the Giants for baseball.

Discussions in recent weeks have been based on expanding Candlestick to 62,000 seats . . . possibly in time for the 49ers to play in the bay front stadium by the 1967 season; no later than in 1968.

The plan that appears most favorable to all concerned provides for double-decked, movable stands being installed in right field to seat 15,000.

Mounted on huge rubber tires or on tracks, they would roll in for football and be stationed along the sidelines. They would then be rolled back to right field for baseball.

Currently, the 49ers play at Kezar Stadium in Golden Gate Park. It seats 59,700.

Only 55,000 of the 62,000 seats planned in the expansion of Candlestick would be good for football . . . but the 49ers still would be way ahead of the game in preferred seating.

Where they only have 13,000 seats between the two goal lines at Kezar, the 49ers would have 28,000 seats in this same space at Candlestick. And this, club spokesmen point out, would spur season ticket sales—the backbone of any pro football club.

CANDLESTICK ORIGINALLY WAS designed as an all-purpose stadium rather than just a baseball park. In fact, the Oakland Raiders of the AFL did play football there in 1961 before moving to their own side of the bay.

The Raiders' basic complaint about Candlestick as a football stadium was the same as it is for baseball—too much wind.

The Giants, who hold a 35-year contract on Candlestick, say there is "no problem" in letting the 49ers share the stadium. Schedules would be adjusted to prevent conflict.

Furthermore, in the event the Giants would win a pennant, the 49ers already have agreed to play elsewhere—probably Kezar—until after the World Series.

The reason final plans have not been formulated sooner is the question of which of three ways would be used to finance the project: (1) out of general city funds; (2) by a special bond issue, or (3) by the non-profit corporation (Stadium, Inc.) which was formed to originally build the park.

ALVIN K. BROWNE, PRESIDENT of Stadium, Inc., went on record the past week that the stadium should be acquired lock, stock and barrel by the city. And the sooner the better because city bonds not only can be sold at a much lower interest rate, but city ownership would permit more flexibility in the operation and maintenance of the park.

For instance, the Giants hold fast to their contract which directs all building and improvements to the city, yet the city's purse strings have been shut tight, while Stadium, Inc., which handles the financing for Candlestick, has been reluctant to do anything constructive.

As a result, Candlestick lacks many of the refinements found in newer parks and it also is referred to as a "pig sty."

There are no elevators or escalators in the stadium; one whole section is still without seats, and talk of landscaping the park and painting the bare concrete walls have been just that in recent years—talk.

However, all these items probably will be included in any new building project. Already, a new $1½ million scoreboard is in the works.

CANDLESTICK WAS THE FIRST of eight new ball parks which have been built or will be completed within the next year since the Giants and Dodgers made their important move west in 1958. These stadiums represent a total investment of $175 million.

A half-dozen other cities are either starting new stadiums or will do so within a few months.

Candlestick was the cheapest of the new stadiums. It cost only $14½ million—about seven for construction, 3½ for land costs, and four for sewage and access roads. Thus, there is ample room to develop it up to the point of parks built more recently at a cost still considerably less.

The new seats would cost around $3 million while improvements and landscaping would run no more than another million.

BROWNE REVEALS THAT THE PARK will be paid for well ahead of schedule—another reason why the city can't go wrong in acquiring it. Revenue from the park has been well above original estimates and this will be bolstered with both the Giants and 49ers using it.

Already $2,345,000 has been paid off on the $5 million city bond issue which was authorized on a 15-year basis and Browne says "the deadline of 1973 will be bettered."

Of the $5½ million which Stadium, Inc., borrowed from private capital, $806,000 has been paid back and based on present conditions, these bonds will be completely retired well ahead of their maturity dates—1988 on some and 1993 on others.

The last fiscal year, Stadium, Inc., turned over $440,000 from parking and concession revenue to the city for maintenance of the park. In addition, it settled the final suits totaling $2½ million for work done on Candlestick that wasn't in the original contract for a sum of $525,000.

Candlestick is more than paying for itself, and with the 49ers moving in, can well afford the improvements.

BOLD BIDDER went to the front early from the outside, was well rated to the stretch and remaining unattended drew off through the final furlong to win as if much the best. ISLE OF GREECE, racing well off the inner rail along the backstretch, was clear of horses, moved closer on the far turn then was no match for the winner when the real test came. TERRY'S SECRET, outrun early, made a weak bid nearing the stretch while still on the outside of horses and could get no nearer in the drive though hard urged. O'HARA, slow away from the gate, began to move up nearing the three-quarters when free of horses but lost much of his punch in the drive. ROYAL GUNNER saved ground all the way to no avail. CHOSUN VICTORY lost ground. Arksroni raced on the outside of horses and tired. SIR CAESAR made his move early.

SNOW HITS BOWIE

Point De Jour, First Family Win

Combined from Wire Reports

First Family registered a mild surprise but Point De Jour saved the chalk players at Hialeah Saturday with their victories in the two divisions of the $27,900 Palm Beach Handicap on the infield grass course.

Point De Jour, ridden by Canadian jockey Ron Turcotte, carried high weight of 121 pounds in a one-length victory over Kentucky Jug. Carry Forward 2nd was third another three quarters of a length behind.

Point De Jour was the favorite of the rainy day crowd of 21,958 and paid $5.00, $3.60 and $3.20 across the board. Kentucky Jug was worth $6.20 and $4.60, while Carry Forward 2nd returned $6.00 to show.

First Family, despite his impressive stakes credentials, rewarded his backers with a liberal $18.40, $9.40 and $6.40. Munden Point's mutuels were $11.40 and $8.60 and Western Warrior paid $3.80.

Bowie race course, closed two days after an 11-inch snowfall Wednesday, canceled its last race Saturday as a new storm dumped more snow on the Maryland track.

Snow fell steadily all day, causing Bowie officials to recall another Saturday snow storm in 1958 when about 1,000 fans were marooned overnight by a 16-inch snowfall.

At the end of that program about 5,500 persons still were at Bowie. A railroad train took out most of them but the others stayed overnight, unable to move their cars in the big drifts.

For hunch bettors, Monday's program offers some interesting possibilities: Arctic Spin in the second, Frosty Scope and Stormy Outlook in the fifth and Irish Frost in the seventh.

Battler Star scored a two-length victory in the $10,000-added Thelma Stakes at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans.

Battler Star, timed in 1:17 1/5, paid $30.40, $9.40 and $3.80. Dutch Maid returned $3.60 and $2.60, while Champagne Woman paid $2.60.

Islanders, Kearsarge Cage Meet Favorites

The antisubmarine aircraft carrier USS Kearsarge and the Long Beach Naval Station Islanders have been installed co-favorites in the 11th Naval District's Northern Division basketball tournament.

Play in the double elemination affair opens at 3:15 Monday in Long Beach Naval Station's Main Gym. Four first round games will be run off the first day.

The championship game will be Friday, 8 p.m., with both finalists qualifying for district play, scheduled Feb. 7-11, also at Long Beach Naval Station.

The other teams are the USS Walke, Los Alamitos Naval Air Station, Pt. Mugu Naval Air Station, China Lake Naval Ordnance Test Station, Long Beach Naval Shipyard and El Toro Marines.

The Islanders are coached by Larry Hanson, coach at high scoring Los Angeles Jefferson High, and have played a rugged pre-tournament schedule.

Kearsarge's team is a smooth five that has made a big impression during its regular season in league play.

Bracket drawing will be at 9 a.m. Monday, Mary Spall, Naval Station Special Services sports director announced Saturday.

Shoe Rides 'Tiger' to Strub Victory

er had Bold Bidder in front as Sir Caesar began fading. It was not until the field hit the stretch that Terry's Secret got his first call as he came from far back.

But by that time it was too late. Bold Bidder in smooth strides increased his lead while Isle of Greece lost ground in his first attempt at the classic mile and a quarter distance. At the finish, Bold Bidder had a six-lenth margin over Isle of Greece while Terry's Secret was five lengths behind the second horse.

The Strub win was the richest of Bold Bidder's career with a return of $89,500 for John R. Gaines who leased the colt from owner Paul Falkenstein of California with an option to purchase him.

For Shoemaker it was his fourth win in the Strub stakes and its predecessor, the Maturity. The famed jockey won in 1964 with Gun Bow, in 1961 with Prove It and in 1951 with Great Circle.

Although Isle of Greece could not match Bold Bidder's stretch run, he earned $20,000 for second with Terry's Secret getting $15,000 for third and O'Hara earning $10,000 for fourth.

Sports In Brief

Voting time of the 1966 college basketball all-America is just around the corner, and for the first time in three years the fabulous Bill Bradley of Princeton is not a candidate.

Bradley, who graduated last year, was selected to the dream team two of the three years his name was put under consideration.

Cazzie Russell of Michigan's Big Ten champions is the only player back from the 1965 all-America. Right now it appears as if Cazzie will be a repeater.

Other top contenders are Jim Walker of Providence, Clyde Lee of Vanderbilt, Dave Bing of Syracuse, That Jaracz of Kentucky, Henry Finkel of Dayton and Jack Marin of Duke.

PARNELLI JONES has given the Indianapolis 500 a new breath of life. The Memorial Day Classic may now be more than a battle of Fords.

Parnelli drove a new supercharged, rear-engine Offenhauser to an unofficial world's one mile paved track record of 123.49 mph at Phoenix International Raceway. The old record was by a Ford at 121.45 mph. The Fords had dominated action at Indy, and it appeared as if the Offenhauser had seen its last days until Jones gave it a new life.

The lead now goes to Steve LeCrane, who shot a par 72 Saturday, and now has a nine stroke lead over Joe Huber, who has a two round total of 226. Beman quit after the 12th hole Saturday complaining of a swollen tendon in his right hand.

BOLD BIDDER went to the front early from the outside, was well rated to the stretch and remaining unattended drew off through the final furlong to win as it much the best. ISLE OF GREECE, racing well off the inner rail along the backstretch, was clear of horses, moved closer on the far turn then was no match for the winner when the real test came. TERRY'S SECRET, outrun early, made a weak bid nearing the stretch while still on the outside of horses and could get no nearer in the drive though hard urged. O'HARA, slow away from the gate, began to move up nearing the three-quarters when free of horses but lost much of his punch in the drive. ROYAL GUNNER saved ground all the way to no avail. CHOSUN VICTORY lost ground. Arksroni raced on the outside of horses and tired. SIR CAESAR made his move early.

SNOW HITS BOWIE

Combined from Wire Reports

First Family registered a mild surprise but Point De Jour saved the chalk players at Hialeah Saturday with their victories in the two divisions of the $27,900 Palm Beach Handicap on the infield grass course.

First Family provided veteran stakes rider Larry Adams with his first handicap victory of the winter in scoring a 2¼ length victory over Mauden Point in the first division of the Palm Beach. The favored Western Warrior finished third another head back.

Point De Jour, ridden by Canadian jockey Ron Turcotte, carried high weight of 121 pounds in a one-length victory over Kentucky Jug. Carry Forward 2nd was third another three quarters of a length behind.

Point De Jour was the favorite of the rainy day crowd of 21,958 and paid $5.00, $3.60 and $3.20 across the board. Kentucky Jug was worth $6.20 and $4.60, while Carry Forward 2nd returned $6.00 to show.

First Family, despite his impressive stakes credentials, rewarded his backers with a liberal $18.40, $9.40 and $6.40. Munden Point's mutuels were $11.40 and $8.60 and Western Warrior paid $3.80.

DeSpirito won the first race with Keenpop for a $39.20 win mutuel and Harris took the second with Cretaceious, who returned $53.60 for $2.

Bowie race course, closed two days after an 11-inch snowfall Wednesday, canceled its last race Saturday as a new storm dumped more snow on the Maryland track.

Snow fell steadily all day, causing Bowie officials to recall another Saturday snow storm in 1958 when about 1,000 fans were marooned overnight by a 16-inch snow fall.

At the end of that program about 5,500 persons still were at Bowie. A railroad train took out most of them but the others stayed overnight, unable to move their cars in the big drifts.

For hunch bettors, Monday's program offers some interesting possibilities: Arctic Spin in the second, Frosty Scope and Stormy Outlook in the fifth and Irish Frost in the seventh.

Battler Star scored a two-length victory in the $10,000-added Thelma Stakes at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans.

Battler Star, timed in 1:17 1/5, paid $39.40, $9.40 and $3.80. Dutch Maid returned $3.60 and $2.60, while Champagne Woman paid $2.60.

Islanders, Kearsarge Cage Meet Favorites

The antisubmarine aircraft carrier USS Kearsarge and the Long Beach Naval Station Islanders have been installed co-favorites in the 11th Naval District's Northern Division basketball tournament.

Play in the double elimination affair opens at 3:15 Monday in Long Beach Naval Station's Main Gym. Four first round games will be run off the first day.

The championship game will be Friday, 8 p.m., with both finalists qualifying for district play, scheduled Feb. 7-11, also at Long Beach Naval Station.

The other teams are the USS Walke, Los Alamitos Naval Air Station, Pt. Mugu Naval Air Station, China Lake Naval Ordnance Test Station, Long Beach Naval Shipyard and El Toro Marines.

The Islanders are coached by Larry Hanson, coach at high scoring Los Angeles Jefferson High, and have played a rugged pre-tournament schedule.

Kearsarge's team is a smooth five that has made a big impression during its regular season in league play.

er had Bold Bidder in front as Sir Caesar began fading. It was not until the field hit the stretch that Terry's Secret got his first call as he came from far back.

But by that time it was too late. Bold Bidder in smooth strides increased his lead while Isle of Greece lost ground in his first attempt at the classic mile and a quarter distance. At the finish, Bold Bidder had a six-lenth margin over Isle of Greece while Terry's Secret was five lengths behind the second horse.

The Strub win was the richest of Bold Bidder's career with a return of $89,500 for John R. Gaines who leased the colt from owner Paul Falkenstein of California with an option to purchase him.

For Shoemaker it was his fourth win in the Strub stakes and its predecessor, the Maturity. The famed jockey won in 1964 with Gun Bow, in 1961 with Prove It and in 1951 with Great Circle.

Although Isle of Greece could not match Bold Bidder's stretch run, he earned $20,000 for second with Terry's Secret getting $15,000 for third and O'Hara earning $10,000 for fourth.

Voting time of the 1966 college basketball all-America is just around the corner, and for the first time in three years the fabulous Bill Bradley of Princeton is not a candidate.

Bradley, who graduated last year, was selected to the dream team two of the three years his name was put under consideration.

Cazzie Russell of Michigan's Big Ten champions is the only player back from the 1965 all-America. Right now it appears as if Cazzie will be a repeater.

Other top contenders are Jim Walker of Providence, Clyde Lee of Vanderbilt, Dave Bing of Syracuse, That Jaracz of Kentucky, Henry Finkel of Dayton and Jack Marin of Duke.

PARNELLI JONES has given the Indianapolis 500 a new breath of life. The Memorial Day Classic may now be more than a battle of Fords.

Parnelli drove a new supercharged, rear-engine Offenhauser to an unofficial world's one mile paved track record of 123.49 mph at Phoenix International Raceway. The old record was by a Ford at 121.45 mph. The Fords had dominated action at Indy, and it appeared as if the Offenhauser had seen its last days until Jones gave it a new life.

NATION'S BEST OFF AND SAILING THURSDAY

Congressional Cup Draws Salty Field

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

The Congressional Cup Race, which some day may mean as much to the West Coast as does the America Cup Race to the Eastern seaboard, will be run on the Olympic-type course off the tip of the Long Beach Breakwater this week, starting Thursday. It will be, as it was in 1965, under the auspices of the Long Beach Yacht Club.

Meanwhile, there is a runoff at 10 a.m. today for three yacht clubs, Seal Beach, Cabrillo Beach and Los Angeles. In the first runoff, those clubs finished in a three-way tie. The two leading boats today will be added to the eight clubs already booked for the Congressional.

The sponsoring LBYC's entry, Harry Moloscho's Gypsy, already has been selected after a runoff of several Cal 40s weeks ago. The Cal 40 again is the boat selected for the Congressional because of its tremendous record in the 1965 race.

That means that each club entered must use the Cal 40. Its crew and gear may be selected by the skipper of each boat, and he may use his own wisdom as to what goes aboard.

The second sailing of the Congressional has been scheduled for four days, Thursday through Sunday. However, given good weather, the races can be concluded in three days, which means that the winning craft will be known sometime Saturday afternoon.

The Congressional is different from the ordinary type of sailing race in which each craft competes with all others at one time. In the Congressional, two boats are pitted against each other at one time. Before the series ends, each boat will have competed against all other nine boats in the race. That means 45 two-boat races and a real challenge for any sailing skipper.

Sen. Thomas Kuchel, R-Calif., and Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, who were largely responsible for acquiring the Congressional Cup for the LBYC, will be honorary cochairmen of the 1966 series, even though duties in Congress may keep them in Washington.

In addition to the LBYC and the two winners of today's runoff, others in the race will be the following:

Larchmont YC, New York, Dolly, with Arthur Knapp Jr. as skipper; St. Francis YC, San Francisco, Hanalei, Dennis Jordan; San Diego YC, Blue Marlin, J. G. Driscoll, (this is the defending champion); Bayview YC, Detroit, boat not named, Carter Sales Jr. and Skip Grow, joint skippers; Southern YC, New Orleans, boat not named, Carl Hadden Jr.; Del Rey YC, Primera, Bob Metzner, and Newport Harbor YC, Holiday, Too, Robert M. Allan Jr.

The Congressional Cup will remain in the custody of the LBYC as long as the club exists. The name of each year's winner will be engraved on the cup and the winner will receive a small replica of the beautiful silver trophy.

Much interest in the Congressional was stirred when a group of Long Beach yachtsman, headed by Don Leedom and LBYC Commodore William Dalessi, went to the meeting of the North American Yacht Racing Union in New York two weeks ago and presented motion pictures of the 1965 Congressional.

Provided there were room for more, no doubt there would be a score of other entries. However, the Congressional always will be limited to 10 vessels.

HOCKEY TALK

No One Has Died on the Ice, but This Was Close

By RICH ROBERTS

A hockey player never has died on the ice, but none has come closer than Buddy Boone of the Blades.

Boone swallowed his tongue after a collision in last Wednesday's game against Vancouver and all but suffocated in full view of 2,329 L. A. Sports Arena spectators.

He was already unconscious when trainer Jack Curran pried open his jaws with a special instrument and snagged his tongue out of his throat, allowing him to breathe again.

It would not be an exageration to propose that Curran saved Boone's life.

As the Blades were carrying the puck out of their own end, Boone slipped on the rough ice — which referee Lloyd Gilmour the same night had called "the worst I've ever seen."

As he slipped he ran into Vancouver defenseman Dunc McCallum, whose knee came down in Buddy's stomach, causing Boone to gasp with such force that his tongue was sucked into his throat.

"I think the guy who fell on me was more scared than I was, if that's possible," Boone laughed later, displaying a yellowish bruise under his breastbone. "That's an awful feeling — fighting for air and you can't get a thing. I tried to get up, then I fell back down and then I don't remember much."

Curran, fortunately, was only about 40 feet away at the Blades' bench.

"I thought he'd just lost his wind," Jack said, "so I opened the door like I always do to be ready in case I had to get out there. Then I saw him get up clutching at his mouth with his gloves and I thought, 'Hell, I can't wait for the whistle. I gotta get out there now!'

"When I got to him I thought he'd gotten his gum stuck—he always chews gum when he plays—but then I saw his leg twitching and I knew he'd swallowed his tongue. So I pried his jaws open and got his tongue out."

* * * *

IN THE meantime, captain Marc Boileau had immediately rushed over to the officials' table to escort team physician Julius Weiner onto the ice, but Curran had the situation under control by the time Weiner arrived.

Although Boone was wheeled away on a stretcher and this was late in the second period, he recovered quickly to start the third.

Curran's special instrument is a two-inch conic spiral made of black plastic called an "oral screw."

"I always have it in my pocket, but this is only the third time I've ever had to use it," he says. "When a man swallows his tongue the natural reaction is to tighten the jaws. Before you can get his tongue out you have to get his jaws open, and that's where this thing comes in handy."

BOONE

* * * *

"There's another way you can do it," he adds. "Just hit 'em in the mouth as hard as you can. A broken jaw's better than suffocating."

How long could a man live without assistance after swallowing his tongue?

"Not very long," says Curran, who has never waited to find out.

Dodger Minors, Rockets Vie Today

By CHUCK MEDICK

The Long Beach Rockets will try to make it two in a row over the Dodger Minor Leaguers at Blair Field at 1:30 p.m. today.

Last week the Rockets bats exploded for seven runs in the fourth inning, and the result was an 11-4 win for Jack Graham's boys.

Not to be overlooked was the excellent control exhibited by Don Rowe, Butch Hughes and Jim Parks. The visitors received no bases on balls.

Jim Campanis, former Fullerton High star and son of Dodger farm director Al Campanis, will be behind the plate for Tom La Sorda's Dodgers. Campanis led the Dodger attack last week with three singles.

Albert Thompson, who made his debut with the Rockets a sensational one, getting a leadoff double and a bases clearing triple in the same inning, will be in left field.

25 Yachts Begin Race to Acapulco

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A fleet of 25 yachts starts wooing fickle winds today in the biennail 1,430-mile race to Acapulco, Mexico.

Howard Ahmanson's Sirius II won in 1964 by cutting 3½ hours off the previous fastest time. It took Sirius II only 8 days, 9 hours, 15 minutes and 54 seconds to cross the finish line, beating the nearest boat by 10 hours.

The over-all handicap winner two years ago, Ash Bown's Carousel, is not entered this year. Jim Kilroy's Kialoa II is rated a top contender in the Class A group. Kilroy is making his fourth race and won in 1962 with the original Kialoa.

School will be held at three sites — Veterans Stadium diamonds, off Clark and south of Carson; El Dorado Park, 2800 Studebaker Road; and Park Ave. Field, 4601 E. 10th St.

Midwinter Entries Set Record

The Southern California Yachting Assn., meeting last week at the Los Angeles Athletic Club in Los Angeles to brief the press on the 37th Midwinter Regatta, announced that 1,100 or more boats would participate in 84 classes this year.

That will set an all-time record for participating sailing craft in any regatta at any time of year. The Midwinter will begin Feb. 18 and continue through Feb. 20, and five yacht clubs will sponsor the events.

Those will be the Long Beach YC, Seal Beach YC, Cabrillo Beach YC, Alamitos Bay YC and the Los Angeles YC.

As the patriarch of the respected and recognized off-season regattas, the Midwinter is unique in that it is made possible by the SCYA and the participating clubs, plus usual favorable Southern California weather.

In addition to sponsoring 18 classes of sailboat races, the Long Beach YC is staging a predicted log race for an ever-increasing number of powerboats.

The SCYA is meeting at the Long Beach YC next Saturday morning for breakfast to outline more plans for the Midwinter, and to meet the skippers of the Congressional Cub Series, who will be completing their races that weekend.

Sportfishing Accord is Near

There are several subjects today—too much salt in the Salton Sea, foreigners fishing commercially in the Gulf of California, the California Fish and Wildlife Plan and the near-accord of the sportfishermen on the anchovy problem.

It seems to me that the last subject on that list is the most important. As has been discussed in previous columns, the lack of togetherness of the California Wildlife Federation and the Ocean Fish Protective Association has been most deplorable.

The CWF wrote an initiative petition to require the Fish and Game Commission to assume complete control of the anchovies and sardines without interference from the legislature. The plan was sent to the attorney general's office for study. Then the OFPA stepped in and opposed the petition on the grounds that it did not go far enough.

Now the OFPA has come up with this version: "The Fish and Game Commission shall have exclusive powers relating to the protection, propagation and preservation of the sardine, anchovy, Pacific mackerel and jack mackerel, provided, however, that anchovies may not be taken for purposes of reduction for five years pending the scientific research of the relationship of the anchovy to ocean sportfishing."

THE TWO INITIATIVE PLANS are so close that many observers feel that the SWF-OFPA conflict will be settled within a few days and the new proposal submitted to the attorney general for titling. With a virtual order that no anchovies may be taken for reduction for five years, it's possible that the attorney general may throw out the whole thing. Especially if he consults members of the legislature or Gov. Brown!

Perhaps I'm being pessimistic, but I am dealing realistically with this problem. I hope for the sake of unity that the attorney general will title the proposal and that it becomes a part of next November's ballot, and I'll work just as hard as anybody for its passage.

Meanwhile, there are other factors in the anchovy battle. The sportfishing operators of Southern California have united in what currently is called the Sportfishing Association, Inc. They have not approved the CWF-OFPA initiative; neither have they disapproved it.

A spokesman said yesterday: "The association wishes to back the sportsmen and will support any plan that will save anchovies and make for better fishing. The owners, skippers and landing operators feel that more research is needed before reduction of anchovies starts on a big scale.

"They feel that it is better to try for such control through the Fish and Game Commission than through the legislature. When an accord is reached, they are ready to support the plan financially as far as is possible, and will help obtain the needed number of signatures for such an initiative."

THERE IS ANOTHER PROBLEM, and a far more serious one, with which the ocean fishermen and the sportfishing industry must contend. That is the continued encroachment of Japanese and Russian fishing vessels on the west coast of the United States and in the Gulf of California.

The Russians already are taking "experimental catches" of fish in the Gulf of California and off Baja California. Tass, the Soviet news agency admitted the other day that the Russian fishermen were having a look "at the anchovies, sardines and other fish in the Gulf of California."

Another source revealed last week that the Japanese, who started their long-line operations off the Mexican coast 10 years ago, have skyrocketed their fish catches to an astronomical figure. In 1956 the Japanese caught 100 marlin on their long lines.

The same source said that the Japanese had caught 125,700 marlin in 1963, with figures still unavailable for 1964 and 1965. For an eight-year period, long-line Japanese caught 148,100 marlin, to say nothing of sailfish, all kinds of tuna and other fish.

The current issue of Sports Illustrated says that longlining actually threatens the game fish populations of all the oceans.

BAJA CALIFORNIA RESORT owners, who earn their livelihood catering to the sportsmen, mostly Americans, have asked the Mexican government to intervene in the problem before the great fish supply of Baja California and the Gulf of California is exhausted.

Immediately the Mexico City News, an English-language daily backed a proposal to include all of the Gulf of California as Mexican territory. The 650-mile-long Gulf, presently regarded as open sea, is the favorite spot for the Japanese and now the Russians.

The News says: "A constitutional amendment could make it a closed-water area, entirely under Mexican supervision, and would ban foreign fishing without a special permit from the Mexican government." The News asked the government to act quickly.

It appears now that Mexico and U.S. sporting magazines, which have advertised the Gulf of California as the "fish trap of the world," have done such a good job that other countries are determined to get a share—and a lion's one.

Sports Illustrated points out, however, that not only Japanese and Russians are getting their shares, but that Norwegians are off the U.S. eastern coast, presumably catching sharks, but getting swordfish and other game fish. Canadians are using long lines for swordfish, and even the U.S. commercials have gone to that type of fishing in the Atlantic.

'Sleeping Beauty' Opening Smooth

By DANIEL CARIAGA

Entertaining in every way is the Lakewood Philharmonic Association's first presentation of 1966, Tschaikovsky's ballet, "The Sleeping Beauty," which opened Friday night in City College Auditorium. Final performances take place next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Choreographer-director Valerie Silver has assembled once again a polished, balanced production featuring a capable cast of young dancers costumed impeccably.

With over 55 (by our count) participants, and multiple changes for many of those, this is a large-scale production, indeed. Yet opening night was remarkably smooth, not only in the confident dancing on the stage, but also in almost all technical aspects of the production.

* * * *

THE ONE exception, oddly enough, is the music, the recorded performance of which is suspiciously uneven, leading us to guess that more than one recording was used.

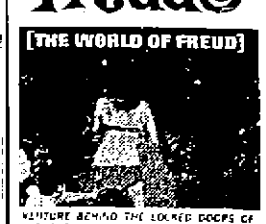
Fortunately, the visual pleasures of the production held our interest even when our ears were being irritated.

Those pleasures begin with the costume designs of Betty Evers, of course, the unelaborate but thoroughly effective sets of Maxine Merlino, and the creative lighting of Larry Tower. They are completed in some excellent dancing from the cast.

Reva Pincusoff, the Princess Aurora Friday night (she alternates with Julie Freeman in the part), danced with polish, aplomb and that solidity of technique which always puts an audience at ease.

* * * *

THE LILAC FAIRY was Hope Henry, another lovely dancer whose technical equipment is a joy to watch. Vassya Dolokhov, Miss Pincusoff's Prince Charming (Cary LaSpina alternates), was an admirable partner, an outstanding soloist.



Candy Evers danced well, though she looked more like Salome than Carabosse. Charles Wise and Ruth Leeson were the king and queen; Charles Pressy the prime minister.

In Act III, Suzanne Rosecrans and Cary LaSpina were brilliant Bluebirds. Also outstanding in this portion were Marjorie Mosier and Janice Borner as Puss in Boots and the White Kitten; and Candace Barker and Jimmy Mercer as Red Riding Hood and the Wolf.

Many others, both on and off the stage, contributed to the success of the ballet. May their efforts be rewarded with full houses at the final performances next weekend.

As the Blades were carrying the puck out of their own end, Boone slipped on the rough ice — which referee Lloyd Gilmour the same night had called "the worst I've ever seen."

As he slipped he ran into Vancouver defenseman Dunc McCallum, whose knee came down in Buddy's stomach, causing Boone to gasp with such force that his tongue was sucked into his throat.

"I think the guy who fell on me was more scared than I was, if that's possible," Boone laughed later, displaying a yellowish bruise under his breastbone. "That's an awful feeling — fighting for air and you can't get a thing. I tried to get up, then I fell back down and then I don't remember much."

Curran, fortunately, was only about 40 feet away at the Blades' bench.

"I thought he'd just lost his wind," Jack said, "so I opened the door like I always do to be ready in case I had to get out there. Then I saw him get up clutching at his mouth with his gloves and I thought, 'Hell, I can't wait for the whistle. I gotta get out there now!'

"When I got to him I thought he'd gotten his gum stuck—he always chews gum when he plays—but then I saw his leg twitching and I knew he'd swallowed his tongue. So I pried his jaws open and got his tongue out."

* * * *

IN THE meantime, captain Marc Boileau had immediately rushed over to the officials' table to escort team physician Julius Weiner onto the ice, but Curran had the situation under control by the time Weiner arrived.

Although Boone was wheeled away on a stretcher and this was late in the second period, he recovered quickly to start the third.

Curran's special instrument is a two-inch conic spiral made of black plastic called an "oral screw."

"I always have it in my pocket, but this is only the third time I've ever had to use it," he says. "When a man swallows his tongue the natural reaction is to tighten the jaws. Before you can get his tongue out you have to get his jaws open, and that's where this thing comes in handy."

BOONE

CURRAN inserts the instrument in the corner of the mouth and pries open the jaws with a couple of quick twists between the teeth.

"There's another way you can do it," he adds. "Just hit 'em in the mouth as hard as you can. A broken jaw's better than suffocating."

How long could a man live without assistance after swallowing his tongue?

"Not very long," says Curran, who has never waited to find out.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Sportfishing Accord is Near

There are several subjects today—too much salt in the Salton Sea, foreigners fishing commercially in the Gulf of California, the California Fish and Wildlife Plan and the near-accord of the sportfishermen on the anchovy problem.

It seems to me that the last subject on that list is the most important. As has been discussed in previous columns, the lack of togetherness of the California Wildlife Federation and the Ocean Fish Protective Association has been most deplorable.

The CWF wrote an initiative petition to require the Fish and Game Commission to assume complete control of the anchovies and sardines without interference from the legislature. The plan was sent to the attorney general's office for study. Then the OFPA stepped in and opposed the petition on the grounds that it did not go far enough.

Now the OFPA has come up with this version: "The Fish and Game Commission shall have exclusive powers relating to the protection, propagation and preservation of the sardine, anchovy, Pacific mackerel and jack mackerel, provided, however, that anchovies may not be taken for purposes of reduction for five years pending the scientific research of the relationship of the anchovy to ocean sportfishing."

THE TWO INITIATIVE PLANS are so close that many observers feel that the SWF-OFPA conflict will be settled within a few days and the new proposal submitted to the attorney general for titling. With a virtual order that no anchovies may be taken for reduction for five years, it's possible that the attorney general may throw out the whole thing. Especially if he consults members of the legislature or Gov. Brown!

Perhaps I'm being pessimistic, but I am dealing realistically with this problem. I hope for the sake of unity that the attorney general will title the proposal and that it becomes a part of next November's ballot, and I'll work just as hard as anybody for its passage.

Meanwhile, there are other factors in the anchovy battle. The sportfishing operators of Southern California have united in what currently is called the Sportfishing Association, Inc. They have not approved the CWF-OFPA initiative; neither have they disapproved it.

A spokesman said yesterday: "The association wishes to back the sportsmen and will support any plan that will save anchovies and make for better fishing. The owners, skippers and landing operators feel that more research is needed before reduction of anchovies starts on a big scale.

"They feel that it is better to try for such control through the Fish and Game Commission than through the legislature. When an accord is reached, they are ready to support the plan financially as far as is possible, and will help obtain the needed number of signatures for such an initiative."

THERE IS ANOTHER PROBLEM, and a far more serious one, with which the ocean fishermen and the sportfishing industry must contend. That is the continued encroachment of Japanese and Russian fishing vessels on the west coast of the United States and in the Gulf of California.

The Russians already are taking "experimental catches" of fish in the Gulf of California and off Baja California. Tass, the Soviet news agency admitted the other day that the Russian fishermen were having a look "at the anchovies, sardines and other fish in the Gulf of California."

Another source revealed last week that the Japanese, who started their long-line operations off the Mexican coast 10 years ago, have skyrocketed their fish catches to an astronomical figure. In 1956 the Japanese caught 100 marlin on their long lines.

The same source said that the Japanese had caught 125,700 marlin in 1963, with figures still unavailable for 1964 and 1965. For an eight-year period, long-line Japanese caught 148,100 marlin, to say nothing of sailfish, all kinds of tuna and other fish.

The current issue of Sports Illustrated says that longlining actually threatens the game fish populations of all the oceans.

BAJA CALIFORNIA RESORT owners, who earn their livelihood catering to the sportsmen, mostly Americans, have asked the Mexican government to intervene in the problem before the great fish supply of Baja California and the Gulf of California is exhausted.

Immediately the Mexico City News, an English-language daily backed a proposal to include all of the Gulf of California as Mexican territory. The 650-mile-long Gulf, presently regarded as open sea, is the favorite spot for the Japanese and now the Russians.

The News says: "A constitutional amendment could make it a closed-water area, entirely under Mexican supervision, and would ban foreign fishing without a special permit from the Mexican government." The News asked the government to act quickly.

It appears now that Mexico and U.S. sporting magazines, which have advertised the Gulf of California as the "fish trap of the world," have done such a good job that other countries are determined to get a share—and a lion's one.

Sports Illustrated points out, however, that not only Japanese and Russians are getting their shares, but that Norwegians are off the U.S. eastern coast, presumably catching sharks, but getting swordfish and other game fish. Canadians are using long lines for swordfish, and even the U.S. commercials have gone to that type of fishing in the Atlantic.

Midwinter Entries Set Record

The Southern California Yachting Assn., meeting last week at the Los Angeles Athletic Club in Los Angeles to brief the press on the 37th Midwinter Regatta, announced that 1,100 or more boats would participate in 84 classes this year.

That will set an all-time record for participating sailing craft in any regatta at any time of year. The Midwinter will begin Feb. 18 and continue through Feb. 20, and five yacht clubs will sponsor the events.

Those will be the Long Beach YC, Seal Beach YC, Cabrillo Beach YC, Alamitos Bay YC and the Los Angeles YC.

As the patriarch of the respected and recognized off-season regattas, the Midwinter is unique in that it is made possible by the SCYA and the participating clubs, plus usual favorable Southern California weather.

In addition to sponsoring 18 classes of sailboat races, the Long Beach YC is staging a predicted log race for an ever-increasing number of powerboats.

The SCYA is meeting at the Long Beach YC next Saturday morning for breakfast to outline more plans for the Midwinter, and to meet the skippers of the Congressional Cup Series, who will be completing their races that weekend.

Dodger Minors, Rockets Vie Today

By CHUCK MEDICK

The Long Beach Rockets will try to make it two in a row over the Dodger Minor Leaguers at Blair Field at 1:30 p.m. today.

Last week the Rockets bats exploded for seven runs in the fourth inning, and the result was an 11-4 win for Jack Graham's boys.

Not to be overlooked was the excellent control exhibited by Don Rowe, Butch Hughes and Jim Parks. The visitors received no bases on balls.

Jim Campanis, former Fullerton High star and son of Dodger farm director Al Campanis, will be behind the plate for Tom La Sorda's Dodgers. Campanis led the Dodger attack last week with three singles.

Albert Thompson, who made his debut with the Rockets a sensational one, getting a leadoff double and a bases clearing triple in the same inning, will be in left field.

25 Yachts Begin Race to Acapulco

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A fleet of 25 yachts starts wooing fickle winds today in the biennial 1,430-mile race to Acapulco, Mexico.

Howard Ahmanson's Sirius II won in 1964 by cutting 3½ hours off the previous fastest time. It took Sirius II only 8 days, 9 hours, 15 minutes and 54 seconds to cross the finish line, beating the nearest boat by 10 hours.

The over-all handicap winner two years ago, Ash Bown's Carousel, is not entered this year. Jim Kilroy's Kialoa II is rated a top contender in the Class A group. Kilroy is making his fourth race and won in 1962 with the original Kialoa.

'Sleeping Beauty' Opening Smooth

By DANIEL CARIAGA

Entertaining in every way is the Lakewood Philharmonic Association's first presentation of 1966, Tschaikovsky's ballet, "The Sleeping Beauty," which opened Friday night in City College Auditorium. Final performances take place next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Choreographer-director Valerie Silver has assembled once again a polished, balanced production featuring a capable cast of young dancers costumed impeccably.

With over 55 (by our count) participants, and multiple changes for many of those, this is a large-scale production, indeed. Yet opening night was remarkably smooth, not only in the confident dancing on the stage, but also in almost all technical aspects of the production.

* * * *

THE ONE exception, oddly enough, is the music, the recorded performance of which is suspiciously uneven, leading us to guess that more than one recording was used.

Fortunately, the visual pleasures of the production held our interest even when our ears were being irritated.

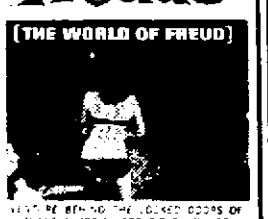
Those pleasures begin with the costume designs of Betty Evers, of course, the unelaborate but thoroughly effective sets of Maxine Merlino, and the creative lighting of Larry Tower. They are completed in some excellent dancing from the cast.

Reva Pincusoff, the Princess Aurora Friday night (she alternates with Julie Freeman in the part), danced with polish, aplomb and that solidity of technique which always puts an audience at ease.

* * * *

THE LILAC FAIRY was Hope Henry, another lovely dancer whose technical equipment is a joy to watch. Vassya Dolokhov, Miss Pincusoff's Prince Charming (Cary LaSpina alternates), was an admirable partner, an outstanding soloist.

Candy Evers danced well, though she looked more like Salome than Carabosse. Charles Wise and Ruth Leeson were the king and queen; Charles Pressy the prime minister.



In Act III, Suzanne Rosecrans and Cary LaSpina were brilliant Bluebirds. Also outstanding in this portion were Marjorie Mosier and Janice Borner as Puss in Boots and the White Kitten; and Candace Barker and Jimmy Mercer as Red Riding Hood and the Wolf.

Many others, both on and of the stage, contributed to the success of the ballet. May their efforts be rewarded with full houses at the final performances next weekend.

RITA HAYWORTH
'Love Goddess'

By ROBERT MUSEL

NICE, France (UPI) — Despite the way it sounded the waiter's intentions were good.

"Miss Hayworth," he said haltingly, "My mother loved all your pictures."

Rita Hayworth's smile turned fleetingly into a wince. It was not the reminder the honey-blonde who used to be called "The Love Goddess" wanted to hear.

Some of the other stars present missed the waiter's fumbling attempt at gallantry. But one who didn't said later that Rita had seemed for a moment "like a bird with a hurt wing."

If this is a difficult period for Miss Hayworth in her career it is possibly because unlike Ingrid Bergman, she has not come to terms with the fact that movie audiences may not want to see a love scene between a young male star and a mature woman star, no matter how beautiful.

WHATEVER the years may do off-screen, the camera will always have a love affair with Rita's face. It is the face of a star, and oddly, considering her long experience, a shy star. She speaks quietly, only when spoken to, and hates being interviewed.

"I'm an actress," she said," and I don't see why I shouldn't play romantic roles if a suitable one comes along. I don't feel that time enters into it automatically. I played a mother years ago in a Clifford Odets play and more recently in 'Circus World.' On the other hand I've only just finished a film, 'The Money Trap' with Glenn Ford and in that I play his ex-girl friend."

I ASKED Rita about her daughter by Aly Khan, Princess Yashmin.

"She's 15 and a half now," said Rita, "no braces anymore and a pretty face. She hasn't said yet whether she wants to act."

"Your figure hasn't changed."

"No," said Rita," It hasn't really. I keep in trim by dancing, playing golf, swimming and exercise."

We chatted about her husbands — Orson Welles who was number two and father of her 20-year-old daughter, Rebecca, is now a mountain of a man."

"He was so handsome," she said. Of Aly Khan she recalled how a hotel in Madrid which bars show business people gladly welcomed her when she was Princess Rita.

"Miss Hayworth," he said, "Will you sign our distinguished visitors book?"

RITA HAYWORTH and Glenn Ford are reunited for the first time since "Gilda" in "The Money Trap." Miss Hayworth plays a waitress; Ford a detective.

THE SOVIET STAGE
Socialist Realism Gets Sexier

By ALINE MOSBY

MOSCOW (UPI)—The beginnings of "avant-garde" theater is electrifying Moscow.

Sex and occasional political innuendo has given a shot in the arm to Moscow thater that has traditionally concentrated on "Socialist Realism" with a Communist message or on the classics.

To foreign observers, the new plays that are being staged at three lively theaters here are about as politically explosive as a Boy Scout meeting, but to Muscovites, unaccustomed even to a whisper of free expression, the three theaters are the talk of the city.

* * * *

NOWADAYS when you say you are going to the theater, Russians don't ask what play you will see but which theater you're going.

If it's the Sovremennik (Contemporary) Theater, Leninsky Komsomol (named after the Communist Youth League) or Taganka Theater then you're "in."

The Leninsky Komsomol specializes in plays about problems of youth and is jammed to the last seat nightly, mainly with modestly dressed teen-agers.

* * * *

ONE OF the plays of this repertory theater is "The Making of a Movie." Like most offerings of this company it combines glimpses of Soviet politics and illicit love.

The play tells about a young man who wants to make a "progressive" film. He is warned by a party official, a friend, that he'd better stop his work to avoid problems, the hero decides to continue making his film, but he compromises by changing it.

Many Russians excitedly see in this lukewarm plot a reference to the days when ex-premier Nikita Khrushchev meddled in the arts.

The audience was even more agog over the love affair of the hero and a beautiful girl. They spend three days in a Black Sea resort hotel whose proprietor, according to the plot, makes a fat profit by renting rooms to unmarried lovers. Such subjects until recently just were not portrayed on the stage of this semi-Victorian society.

* * * *

IN ANOTHER play at this theater, "Nice Boys," a 16-year-old girl gives herself to her boy friend before he marches off to serve in the navy during World War II. "Don't worry, you won't get pregnant," he assures the crying girl. But she is weeping because she didn't fulfill her production quota at the local collective farm.

Another boy who goes to war was described in the epilogue as a Jewish doctor who died in prison in 1953. To the audience this was a clear reference to the "Doctors Plot" when Stalin had his Jewish doctors arrested, and some died in prison from torture.

The other boys portrayed in the play all are killed in action. Such pessimistic, downbeat endings are not consistent with Soviet ideology and quite new here.

At the Taganka Theater the young technicians go in for trick lighting, such as blinding the audience with spotlights so they can't see the scenery being changed.

The Sovremennik Theater specializes in translations of foreign plays, including Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge."

These three theaters are so popular that when tickets are put on sale 10 days in advance the lines start to form outside the box office at 6 a.m.

Tony Tanner and Millicent Martin head the cast of "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" set for release the first half of this year. Tanner replaced Anthony Newley in the London cast when Newley brought the show to New York.

Paul Newman's "Harper," a private eye, based on Ross Macdonald's novel of same name, gets national release for Eastern season. With Newman are co-stars Lauren Bacall, Julie Harris, Janet Leigh, Pamela Tiffin, Shelley Winters, Robert Wagner, Arthur Hill and Robert Webber.

Robert Coote, co-starring with Ann-Margret and Tony Francinsa in Paramount's "The Swinger" chases Ann Marget around his office (in the film).

"A couple of pints of whiskey make you as playful as a kitten," says the fleeing Ann-Margret.

RITA HAYWORTH

'Love Goddess'

By ROBERT MUSEL

NICE, France (UPI) — Despite the way it sounded the waiter's intentions were good.

"Miss Hayworth," he said haltingly, "My mother loved all your pictures."

Rita Hayworth's smile turned fleetingly into a wince. It was not the reminder the honey-blonde who used to be called "The Love Goddess" wanted to hear.

Some of the other stars present missed the waiter's fumbling attempt at gallantry. But one who didn't said later that Rita had seemed for a moment "like a bird with a hurt wing."

If this is a difficult period for Miss Hayworth in her career it is possibly because unlike Ingrid Bergman, she has not come to terms with the fact that movie audiences may not want to see a love scene between a young male star and a mature woman star, no matter how beautiful.

WHATEVER the years may do off-screen, the camera will always have a love affair with Rita's face. It is the face of a star, and oddly, considering her long experience, a shy star. She speaks quietly, only when spoken to, and hates being interviewed.

"I'm an actress," she said," and I don't see why I shouldn't play romantic roles if a suitable one comes along. I don't feel that time enters into it automatically. I played a mother years ago in a Clifford Odets play and more recently in 'Circus World.' On the other hand I've only just finished a film, 'The Money Trap' with Glenn Ford and in that I play his ex-girl friend."

I ASKED Rita about her daughter by Aly Khan, Princess Yashmin.

"She's 15 and a half now," said Rita, "no braces anymore and a pretty face. She hasn't said yet whether she wants to act."

"Your figure hasn't changed."

"No," said Rita," it hasn't really. I keep in trim by dancing, playing golf, swimming and exercise."

We chatted about her husbands — Orson Welles who was number two and father of her 20-year-old daughter, Rebecca, is now a mountain of a man."

"He was so handsome," she said. Of Aly Khan she recalled how a hotel in Madrid which bars show business people gladly welcomed her when she was Princess Rita.

"Miss Hayworth," he said, "Will you sign our distinguished visitors book?"

RITA HAYWORTH and Glenn Ford are reunited for the first time since "Gilda" in "The Money Trap." Miss Hayworth plays a waitress; Ford a detective.

THE SOVIET STAGE

Socialist Realism Gets Sexier

By ALINE MOSBY

MOSCOW (UPI)—The beginnings of "avant-garde" theater is electrifying Moscow.

Sex and occasional political innuendo has given a shot in the arm to Moscow thater that has traditionally concentrated on "Socialist Realism" with a Communist message or on the classics.

To forcign observers, the new plays that are being staged at three lively theaters here are about as politically explosive as a Boy Scout meeting, but to Muscovites, unaccustomed even to a whisper of free expression, the three theaters are the talk of the city.

* * * *

NOWADAYS when you say you are going to the theater, Russians don't ask what play you will see but which theater you're going.

If it's the Sovremennik (Contemporary) Theater, Leninsky Komsomol (named after the Communist Youth League) or Taganka Theater then you're "in."

The Leninsky Komsomol specializes in plays about problems of youth and is jammed to the last seat nightly, mainly with modestly dressed teen-agers.

* * * *

ONE OF the plays of this repertory theater is "The Making of a Movie." Like most offerings of this company it combines glimpses of Soviet politics and illicit love.

The play tells about a young man who wants to make a "progressive" film. He is warned by a party official, a friend, that he'd better stop his work to avoid problems, the hero decides to continue making his film, but he compromises by changing it.

Many Russians excitedly see in this lukewarm plot a reference to the days when ex-premier Nikita Khrushchev meddled in the arts.

The audience was even more agog over the love affair of the hero and a beautiful girl. They spend three days in a Black Sea resort hotel whose proprietor, according to the plot, makes a fat profit by renting rooms to unmarried lovers. Such subjects until recently just were not portrayed on the stage of this semi-Victorian society.

* * * *

IN ANOTHER play at this theater, "Nice Boys," a 16-year-old girl gives herself to her boy friend before he marches off to serve in the navy during World War II. "Don't worry, you won't get pregnant," he assures the crying girl. But she is weeping because she didn't fulfill her production quota at the local collective farm.

Another boy who goes to war was described in the epilogue as a Jewish doctor who died in prison in 1953. To the audience this was a clear reference to the "Doctors Plot" when Stalin had his Jewish doctors arrested, and some died in prison from torture.

The other boys portrayed in the play all are killed in action. Such pessimistic, downheat endings are not consistent with Soviet ideology and quite new here.

At the Taganka Theater the young technicians go in for trick lighting, such as blinding the audience with spotlights so they can't see the scenery being changed.

The Sovreminnik Theater specializes in translations of foreign plays, including Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge."

These three theaters are so popular that when tickets are put on sale 10 days in advance the lines start to form outside the box office at 6 a.m.

We, the representatives of an outstanding organization, gained success in 1965 because of our conviction and enthusiasm! We belong to the finest organization in its field in the world! We work hard and realize good income from our efforts. We sell a service that everyone must have.
Our company wants to find some more people like us. If you are a sincere and hard-working person we would like to have you join us. You may not have sales experience. Most of us didn't. Our company provides that experience—quickly and easily and gives you an opportunity to earn while you learn.
We work for Forest Lawn-Cypress and serve the greater So. Los Angeles County (including Long Beach) and Orange County areas. Our company provides the usual company employee benefits (many unusual for salesmen!)—and besides that they gave us real good training which taught us how to SERVE by selling.
Give our boss, Mr. Don West, a call to see how you can make 1966 your "Meaningful Career" year?

ATTENTION PROPERTY OWNERS
Before you buy or sell that lot, investigate its potentials. If it is zoned for apartments or not, we will make a survey without obligation to you, to determine if it is advisable for you to build or to sell. We check your lot size, zoning, vacancy factor & rent schedules in your area; we advise as to what is best suited to the neighborhood, what we think belongs on your lot and what it costs to build. We show you how it can be financed, what your income & expenses will be and how much cash income is yours each month. If it makes $ cents $ to build, we can provide 100% financing for the entire project.

ATTENTION PROPERTY OWNERS
Before you buy or sell that lot, investigate its potentials. If it is zoned for apartments or not, we will make a survey without obligation to you, to determine if it is advisable for you to build or to sell. We check your lot size, zoning, vacancy factor & rent schedules in your area; we advise as to what is best suited to the neighborhood, what we think belongs on your lot and what it costs to build. We show you how it can be financed, what your income & expenses will be and how much cash income is yours each month. If it makes $ cents $ to build, we can provide 100% financing for the entire project.
